The rate by the certificate plan for the round trip is only $9.70. The tickets are good on all trains August 17 to 23, and for the return trip the validated certificates will be honored up to and including August 31.

The Chicago Florists' Club cordially invites the florists of the northwest and southwest, delegates to the convention, to join this special train at Chicago Monday noon as above stated, and see that when they buy their tickets and secure their certificates that these tickets read via Big Four route from Chicago to Dayton.

Delegates who can join us at any point along our route are requested to do so. The committee will be glad to hear as early as possible from all who decide to join our party, so that the necessary arrangements can be made in time. Delegates buying tickets in Chicago will secure them at the city ticket office of the Big Four, 238 South Clark street, with certificates.

A New Aster.

George J. Ball has been at work for some years on a special selection of Queen of the Market aster. This season he has quite a stock. It is among the earliest and in spite of the dry weather, which has made most asters short-and received many calls for the stock. But owing to the severe drought at the critical moment the stock did not grade up to expectations.

because we aim to advertise without exaggeration. We want the trade to understand that orders may be entrusted to us with every assurance of complete satisfaction.

stemmed thus far this season, it has given stems eighteen inches to two feet long. No yellow center is shown. White is the only color. Mr. Ball expects to have a stock of seed which will permit him to let the trade in on his good thing next season.

Mr. Ball is one of the largest aster growers for this market. On Monday he sent 5,200 asters to J. A. Budlong, who is his selling agent.

Mr. Ball goes to Rock Island, Ill., Monday for a week's outing.

Various Notes.

The E. F. Winterson Co. was in receipt of a dozen yellow chrysanthemums on July 30. They came from O. L. Baird, Dixon, Ill., and made a distinct hit. Anotner novelty at Winterson's was a small lot of pink and red pondlilies received last week. L. H. Winterson plans to attend the convention, and then proceed to New York, accompanied by his wife.

Peter Reinberg, Adam Zender and John Muno, accompanied by their wives, returned Saturday from a pleasant trip of ten days in Colorado. Mr. Reinberg is now devoting his spare time to the candidacy of M. L. McKinley, who aspires to be county judge. Mr. McKinley is the representative at Springfield who was of the greatest aid to the bill for the appropriation asked for by the Illinois State Florists' Society.

Louis Wittbold took a party of High Ridge vegetable growers to Aurora Sunday, to show them the working of his sprinkling apparatus in the cucumber houses of W. B. Davis.

The Foley Mfg. Co. reports an exceedingly busy season, their output of greenhouse material this year being to date three times what it was a year ago.

The Fleischmann Floral Co. has certified to an increase in its capital stock from $10,000 to $100,000. Mr. Rubel states that no especial change in the business is contemplated.

According to the police reports, a negro highwayman jumped on a wagon in which Mrs. Frank Waterloo, the wife of an Evanston florist, was riding, and robbed her of a pocketbook containing $10.

In the work of enlarging their retail store, Marshall Field & Co. made changes in the sewer which are alleged to be the cause of Kennicott Bros. Co. being flooded every time it rains. Being inundated again on Saturday, Kennicotts on Monday instituted a suit for damages against the Field estate.

Philip Schupp and family have returned from a week's outing at South Haven.

Henry Weiland, son of M. Weiland, of Evanston, will return from Denver the latter part of this month to wed Miss Buchner, of Evanston.

Miss Nellie C. Moore has returned from her summer outing at Channel lake.

The A. L. Randall Co. is beginning to hear from Miss Tonner from Germany, with advices of large purchases of florists' supplies, which are to be along on the next boat. Miss Tonner herself is not expected home before September 1.

Matt Mann is sending in 1,000 to 1,200 good white carnations each day. The plants did little in the winter, but are giving a fine cut at a time when the market needs the goods.

L. Gressens, of Bassett & Washburn, is away on a fortnight's vacation.

John Sinner says that Saturday's fine rain has tempted many carnation growers north of town to leave their stock in the field for a while yet. The season has been dry for those not on low ground and the plants already show the benefits of the rain.

E. H. Hunt is doing quite a business in boxwood sprays, which have not been available for some time except from cold storage.

C. M. Dickinson spent Sunday with his family at Campbellsport, Wis.

Henry Phillip, at Rogers Park, is doing well with his field of asters.

Charlie Erne is sailing on Lake Michigan with friends from Toledo and Terre Haute.

Vaughan & Sperry are keenly disappointed at the failure of a big crop of sweet peas. They had every assurance of fine stock, but the severe drought knocked them out after a market for them had been worked up.

A. C. Spencer is tasting the joys of rural life this week.

A. C. Kohlbrand, of Amling's, has returned from Cincinnati.

Visitors.

Frederick Sperry had as his guest on Monday, B. A. Maxfield, cashier of the Dade County State Bank, of Palm Beach, Fla., where Mr. Sperry formerly resided.

August Beyer, of South Bend, Ind., passed through Monday on his way home from St. Paul, where he had participated in a saengerfest and had acquired a considerable addition to his already large collection of medals. Next year he will have to begin hanging them on his back.

Other visitors included B. Eschner, of Philadelphia, on his annual round-up of fall orders; C. W. Crawford, of Chas. Frueh & Son, Saginaw, Mich.; O. Will, of R. Will & Son, Minneapolis; F. C. Smith, Ashland, Wis.; G. A. Sawyer, Dundee, Ill.; S. E. Morris, of the Manistee Floral Co., Manistee, Mich., accompanied by his wife; and B. F. Vandervate, Galena, Ill.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

There have been no changes in the cut flower market during the last week, nor has the weather changed for the better. Excessive humidity and heavy storms add their influence to an already stagnant trade. Even funeral work is dormant, and weddings and dinners are relegated to the realm of reminiscence. The holiday season is here in earnest and everybody is taking advantage of it to the limit.

There seems to be some misunderstanding as to the hour of closing the wholesale houses. Instead of one, it is now stated that several did not sign the 3 o'clock document. Even now a number do not close at 4 p. m., and one prominent wholesaler asserted Saturday that the closing hour was likely to be advanced to 6 o'clock after August 1. It is a fact, nevertheless, that all the business by all the wholesalers after 3 p. m., from now until September 1, would not equal the sales of one of the leading cut flower merchants in a day when the season is at its height.

Beauties still command a good price and yet the supply is abundant. John Young says he has been receiving thousands daily from Jurgens, of Newport. For the finest, $25 per hundred was easily obtained by all the handlers of Beauties. Brides and Maids are gradually improving in quality, length of stem and price. Thousands of the lower grades, small and short-stemmed, go, however, as low as 50 cents per hundred.

Dahlias, asters and gladioli are abundant and prices low. Both asters and gladioli were selling Saturday as low as 50 cents per hundred. America, Child's specialty, held firm at $3. It is greatly admired and very popular.

Fine orchids and plenty of them fully meet the demand to date. Newport is expected to wake up in August. So far the season there has been "stale and unprofitable." Lilies are firm, but not overabundant. Carnations are improving and prices are satisfactory.

The violet outlook is not encouraging. Reports of damage to the growing plants are many and fears are entertained that there may be a shortage this season.

Various Notes.

The "sweet singers" of the New York Florists' Club, W. C. and A. J. Rickards, can now change the title of one of their popular songs, "There's a new coon in town," to "There's a new seed firm in town." They have purchased the business of the Bridgeman Seed Co., of 37 West Nineteenth street, and began business August 1. The name of Bridgeman is a household word in the seed business of this country. For thirty-seven years Edward A. Peth has been at its head and splendidly maintained its reputation, and for eighteen years Frank M. Duggan has been associated with him. There is no doubt the Rickards Bros. will add luster to the honored name and they have acted wisely in retaining it. W. C. Rickards has been twenty-two years connected with the firm of J. M. Thorburn & Co., and A. J. Rickards for ten years with the Stumpp & Walter Co. Few young men are better known or more popular. Their success is already assured.

George Saltford is enjoying his annual holiday at Oswego and among the Thousand Islands with relatives. He is revising and rewriting his valuable little book, "How to Grow Violets."

John J. Perkins spent the week among his growers. His son, John J., Jr., was married on Sunday. His bride was Miss Glass. Miss Hall, the bookkeeper, is spending a month at Pittsburg, Pa.

Boddington has just received a fine importation of Oncidium varicosum Rogersii. He, in common with all seedsmen, regrets the shortage in large sizes of Harrisii bulbs.

The ice shortage is a menacing proposition. One house averages over $26 a week for ice, and doubtless many of the large firms show an equal drain. A fair store rental for a wholesaler to pay is $1,200 a year, though some of the wholesale houses pay rent close to $2,000. When the ice bills run a dead heat with the rent, it is time to look serious and to remind the growers who are sometimes impatient that "all is not gold that glitters." Ice costs $7 a ton and is still soaring.

The excessive express rates to Jersey are still a source of great annoyance. J. B. Nugent had a complaint on Saturday that indicated no surrender on the part of the independent company and gives no hope of a change for the better for the approaching season.

C. E. Critchell, the wholesale florist, of Cincinnati, and Mrs. Critchell are enjoying a few weeks in the east and, having done Atlantic City and Poughkeepsie, are now with friends in New York. His visit to the violet growers up the Hudson completed arrangements for daily shipments during the winter. He called on many of the wholesalers here and was much impressed by their number and the immense stores devoted to the business. He is predicting a big crowd at the Dayton convention and says Cincinnati will send a car-load and that the pioneer S. A. F. city is already planning for the anniversary in 1908. It may be well here to remind New Yorkers who go to Dayton this year that lower berths are not numerous in the special cars engaged, and that those who have not secured them should at once arrange with the committee, Messrs. Traendly, Sheridan and Nugent, or they will have to climb. The selection of the New York Central and the stopover at the Falls give general satisfaction. Several of the exhibitors leave in advance of the special.

J. K. Allen has been off on a fishing trip and shows results that indicate considerable skill and luck. Nick Schreiner, one of his lieutenants, with his family, has returned from a two weeks' holiday Mansfield, of Lexington avenue, is taking his rest, as usual, in a fishing trip north among the Thousand Islands.

Patrick Donegan, with Ford Bros., is away for a couple of weeks of deserved rest in Pennsylvania.

The Lord & Burnham Co. is to be represented at the S. A. F. convention with its usual amount of space and strong display. Fred Lord will be on the ground to show up the strong points of the Burnham boiler.

Hitchings & Co. have adopted the rather unique way of letting a sign fifteen feet long and six feet wide, with an unusual inscription on it, do the convention talking for them. As a footnote to the sign, a lad is to be on deck to distribute an interesting bit of printing, giving the florists some good strong advice on the care of boilers and the economical widths to build greenhouses.

A. Warendorff, of 1193 Broadway, is quite ill at his summer home at Averne-by-the-Sea.

Charles Millang has an importation of box trees and evergreens coming in October, double that he brought over in 1905. He is turning part of his conservatory into a big ice-box in anticipation of a large season.

William Starke has two greenhouses and one and a half acres of land devoted to the care and growing of his palms, hardy roses, vincas, ivy and acubas in Astoria, and is fixing up his store on West Twenty-ninth street and enlarging it.

A. J. Guttman is receiving fine Chatenay and Killarney daily from his greenhouses at Summit, N. J., and is handling over 10,000 gladioli every twenty-four hours, May, Augusta, Shakespeare and America among them. H. C. Reidel, his lieutenant, is summering at Homecrest.

A sister of Clarke Bros., Portland, Ore., long associated with them in their store there, is in the city visiting friends and on her honeymoon trip to Germany, where her husband resides. She has been studying two years in Germany and has a splendid voice, which will be heard in grand opera next season.

Miss Anna Levitt, of Fenrich's, leaves this week for a two weeks' sojourn in the mountains.

Mr. Fenrich has been revealing some of the mysteries of pony training to his visiting growers during the last week, some of the Madison deacons participating in the investigation.

Benjamin Dorrance, of Dorranceton, Pa., was in town Monday, with rod and reel, clad in fishing toggery, and on his way to the haunts of the elusive finny tribe amid the trout streams of the adjacent mountains. J. Austin Shaw.

The Market.

Many growers are now pulling out their stock and sending in little or nothing. Consequently flowers are not overplentiful, but are amply sufficient for all calls. Business, except for a moderate amount of funeral work, is almost at a standstill. These conditions will probably exist for a few weeks longer.

Roses sell at from 50 cents to $4 per hundred, a small number of extras selling higher. Carnations remain as a week ago, 50 cents to $2 per hundred. Fair Maid is far the best kind coming in. Asters are now too abundant, at 50 cents to $1.50 per hundred. Good Lilium auratum and L. lancifolium bring $3 to $4. Sweet peas are less abundant than other years, continuous rains ruining so many. Ruling prices are 20 cents to 25 cents per hundred. Gypsophila, valley, feverfew, candytuft and gladioli comprise the bulk of other flowers seen. Some Club Picnic.

The weather conditions were well nigh perfect for the club picnic at Wausgakum grove on July 25. The days preceding were damp and cheerless and rain fell heavily the day following, so the members may well congratulate themselves on their good fortune. Much hard work had been put in by the president and the various members of the sports committee, and great credit is due them for the entire success of the whole affair.

Three heavily laden Boston and Worcester electrics left Boston promptly at 8:30 a. m., reaching South Framingham an hour later. Here many joined the party and boarded a number of special electrics, which carried them to the grove. So well was everything arranged that by 10:30 a. m. three baseball games, as well as quoits games, were in progress simultaneously. There was keen competition in all of the twenty-five classes and the 350 or more members and wives, families and friends seemed to thoroughly enjoy them. At the close of the day's proceedings President Wheeler presented the prizes to the winners and eulogized F. E. Palmer, chairman of the sports committee, for the amount of work he had given to the athletic end of the picnic. Rousing cheers were given Messrs. Wheeler and Palmer, both at the grove and when they left the cars on the homeward journey, at Chestnut Hill and Brookline.

All who attended voted the picnic a grand success in every way and those who could not attend from divers causes wish they could have been present. The grove selected proved an ideal one for picnic purposes. Nothing happened during the day to mar the proceedings and many wishes were expressed that the 1907 meeting would be at the same grove.

The winners of the various sports were as follows:

Baseball, married and single; single won, 14 to 9. The winning team was composed of Johnson, captain; Edgar, Angus, Cannell, Haven, Walsh, Patterson, Andrews and Lowe.

Baseball, boys under 16; Hodgson's team beat Wheeler's, 16 to 3. Winning team, Hodgson, Ready, Palmer, Coles, W. Iliffe, Heustis, Westwood and T. Iliffe.

Baseball, girls; Miss Ella Palmer's team beat Miss Ivy Wheeler's, 10 to 9. Winning team, Misses Ella Palmer, Louise Eisenhardt, Florence Eisenhardt, F. Smith, Ethel Roy, E. Ready, C. Temple, F. Palmer, L. McReam.

Cricket, commercial and private growers; private growers won, 23 to 20. Winning team, J. Wheeler, captain; W. Robb, F. Cole, A. Lowe, F. McDermott, M. Brown, C. Walters, P. Barker, A. Angus, T. Brown and T. Coles.

50-yard race, boys under 10; Thomas Iliffe, Theo. Palmer, Victor Lumsden finished as named; twelve ran.

50-yard race, girls under 10; Helen Vearse, Lillian Vearse, Harriet Coles; ten ran.

100-yard race, boys from 10 to 16 years; Geo. Palmer, James Harbison, C. Doten; twelve ran.

100-yard race, girls from 10 to 16 years; Florence Lumsden, Helen Vearse, Florence Eisenhardt; eight ran.

50-yard race, married ladies; Mrs. R. Edgar, Mrs. A. Eisenhardt, Mrs. Thos. Neil; twelve ran.

100-yard race, young ladies over 16; Ella Palmer, Ethel Roy.

100-yard race, club members only; Thomas Braun, A. E. Shedd, F. Cannell; twenty ran.

100-yard sack race, open to all; Alex. Burr, J. McCarthy; sixteen ran.

100-yard race, men over 200 pounds; W. R. Nicholson, James Wheeler; five ran.

50-yard race, men over 50 years; William Miller, J. Ready; six ran.

Potato race for ladies; Louise Eisenhardt, Jean Westwood; five ran.

100-yard three-legged race, open to all; Thomas Braun and H. Coles; A. Lowe and F. McDermott; ten entries.

240-yard handicap; F. Cannell, A. E. Shedd, F. E. Palmer.

Quoit match; Wm. Munro, Wm. Robb.

High jump, Frank Edgar, four feet nine inches; F. McDermott, four feet eight inches; eight entries.

Long jump; W. Johnson, thirteen feet eight inches; Frank Edgar, thirteen feet four inches; ten entries.

Putting 16-pound shot; W. R. Nicholson, twenty-five feet one and one-half inches; O. McKenzie, twenty-four feet ten inches; seven entries.

Throwing 12-pound hammer; Wm. Munro, ninety-four feet four inches; W. Robb, ninety-two feet six inches; eight entries.

Tug-of-war, commercial and private growers; private growers won.

240-yard handicap, boys from 10 to 16; Geo. Palmer, Wm. Iliffe, Jas. Harbison; ten ran.

100-yard race, open to all; J. Lally, Thomas Braun; fifteen ran.

Picnic Notes.

The commercial growers were useless against Wheeler's private gardeners' team in the tug-of-war. They were pulled four feet over and held there for three minutes. It took some of the remaining stamina out of the contestants.

A lady was heard to remark that it reminded her of a Sunday-school picnic, every one behaving so decorously. Surely this is a good recommendation for the Boston Club.

The veterans' race was a hair-raising one. Messrs. Miller and Ready ran a dead heat twice. The winner is 67 years old, and, like so many more winners, came from north of the Tweed.

The fat man's race was a good one. James Wheeler won in 1905, but this year the youth of the stalwart W. R. Nicholson told and the latter came in three yards in the lead.

F. E. Palmer did yeoman service for the picnic. He bought and marked all the prizes, made up 500 bags of peanuts, got all the articles for the various games together and sent on his own team over the road free of cost to the club.

In the three-legged race Palmer and Duncan were getting steam up when the tape was reached and if the distance had been a little greater would have scored. The first named surprised every one by the way he ran in the 240-yard handicap, being in the lead until forty yards from home.

It was a grand sight when the 100-yard race for members came off. The whole twenty ran abreast, owing to the ample space at command, and it was a splendid finish.

Messrs. J. W. Duncan, T. H. Westwood, Peter Miller, Kenneth Finlayson and O. Lumsden all rendered very valuable aid in connection with the sports.

In the married and single ball game Palmer at first base, Wheeler second base, Edgar third base and Shedd pitcher, were shining lights on the married men's side.

It was necessary to play the cricket game on a time limit. F. Cole, of Wellesley, bowled with deadly effect for the private gardeners. T. Coles batted well. Palmer played steadily for the commercial side, as did J. R. Clark. Capers and H. A. Stevens were bowlers, but it was clear that the privates were too much for their opponents, having three more wickets to fall and seven minutes to play when stumps were drawn.

The way the married ladies ran was an eye-opener to every one. A trifle over six seconds for fifty yards shows the fleetness of the contest.

"Never felt so stiff for years," is the way many of the contestants expressed themselves for some days after the picnic. Wheeler has recovered his voice, which he lost on the way home.

Various Notes.

The next free exhibition will be held at Horticultural hall on August 4. Perennial phloxes, hardy herbaceous flowers and annuals will be special features.

Visitors during the last week included George F. Struck, Summit, N. J.; Thomas Knight, Rutherford, N. J., and D. MacRorie, South Orange, N. J., all eager to sell orchid plants.

Robert T. McGorum, one of our prominent rose growers, has hired a stall at the Park Street Market. J. S. Manter will be salesman.

William Nicholson and S. J. Goddard are sending in excellent outdoor-grown carnations.

J. T. Butterworth has been cutting a fine lot of Cattleya Harrisoniæ, a very useful summer orchid.

C. E. Robinson, of H. M. Robinson & Co., is back from a delightful trip to Maine.

Herbert E. Tyler, the popular salesman for Montrose Greenhouses, has resigned and will locate in Quebec. He will be greatly missed.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank T. White have gone camping for two weeks to New Hampshire.

T. J. Benwell, salesman at the markets for A. H. Hews & Co., buried his father on July 25.

Samuel Beck, salesman for James Tulis and Frank Seligman, has gone on a two weeks' vacation to the wilds of Maine.

William A. Hastings has just started on a business trip to New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania for A. H. Hews & Co.

Store men are cordially invited to the baseball game at Child's grove, Waltham, on August 5, between the rival market teams. There are other attractions promised.

Thomas Pegler, a well-known salesman at Park Street Market, has leased several houses at Wollaston and will devote himself to the growing of double violets. We wish him the best of luck.

July just closed has been the wettest and most uncomfortable month we ever remember. While there have been few temperatures of 90 degrees or over, the humidity has been excessive a great part of the month. W. N. C.

The greenhouses belonging to B. F. Vandervate were almost totally wrecked in a hail storm a few days ago. More than 2,000 lights were broken. Fruit trees on the farm were also damaged. Mr. Vandervate stated that the storm was one of the worst ever experienced in this part of the country. The greater part of the damage was done by the hail, which fell thick and fast, and it was but a few minutes before every glass in the greenhouse was gone. Corn was also damaged. Mr. Vandervate estimates his loss at $1,800.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., Henry W. Wood, Richmond, Va.; First Vice-Pres., Charles Burge, Toledo, O.; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland. The 26th annual meeting will be held at New York City, June, 1907.

THE first French bulbs arrived at New York July 31.

THE Michigan pea growers have had a week of good weather.

THE Nebraska vine seed growers are busy with the cucumber beetle.

BEANS will surely turn out short. The effects of the cold spring and dry summer are now quite apparent.

MAJESTY is the name of A. T. Boddington's special strain of mignonette, not Majestic, as it was printed last week.

THE radish seed crop in Michigan, which is annually increasing in acreage, is giving a good account of itself to date.

THE onion set harvest at Chicago is in full swing. Quality is excellent but the size of the crop shows no sign of increase.

LISTS of cabbage, carrot, cauliflower, cucumber, lettuce and other market gardener specialties for the south are already on the wing.

THE Connecticut growers have had a long spell of wet, humid weather and are far from pleased, especially with the prospect for onions.

THE Colorado melon growers for seed report a good start and no great trouble from the aphis, which is worrying the growers in Nebraska.

M. L. MCDONALD, of the firm of Henry Field, Shenandoah, Ia., will soon enter the Iowa State College at Ames for advanced work in seed breeding.

THE Michigan republican state convention, at Detroit, July 31, nominated Dexter Mason Ferry, Jr., as its candidate for member of the state board of education.

THE Chas. H. Lilly Co., Seattle, Wash., reports all its crop of cabbage seed for fall delivery sold well in advance and demand unsatisfied. The Pacific northwest has not heretofore figured largely as a source of supply for this item.

HARRISII BULBS.

The Bermudian landed at New York July 27 the second consignment of Harrisii lily bulbs. This shipment aggregated 1,414 cases, which makes receipts to date 4,652 cases, there having been 3,238 cases in the boat a fortnight ago. This is practically the season's supply, but it indicates that the crop of Harrisii, in point of quantity, is not so short as has been stated in some reports from Bermuda, the receipts having exceeded those of last year to date by several hundred cases. The first boat last year was thought to have a heavy consignment when it landed 2,470 cases, as against 3,238 cases on the first boat this year; and the increase held good in the second cargo.

Figures are lacking as to the number of cases of each size of bulb, but all are agreed that there is a pronounced shortage of the larger sizes. It is of the small sizes that there is increased production. It also doubtless is true that not all the stock is true Harrisii, and a considerable amount of disease is likely to be found in some of the stock from careless or irresponsible growers.

CALIFORNIA SEED CROPS.

C. C. Morse & Co., write as follows: "Regarding crop conditions we have to say that on the whole the crop is an average one, with the exception of onion. We expect, however, to fill our contracts practically in full but will have little or no surplus. Radish, lettuce, carrot, and parsnip are unusually good. We are now busily engaged in cleaning and shipping our spinach crop and are well into sweet pea and lettuce harvest."

EUROPEAN SEED NOTES.

The weather is now all that could be desired for seed growers, coming as it is just before harvest. It is warm, in fact, hot, with frequent bright, hot sunshine and an occasional warm shower. Most seed crops are looking well in consequence and it is surprising the improvement all crops are making. There are reports that the onion crops in many European districts are looking bad and prices are likely to still further advance.

There is some talk in England that the reported corner of kentia palm seeds produced on Lord Howe Island has fallen through. I know for a fact that some English growers had placed their usual orders with the exporters from Lord Howe Island before the corner was spoken of, and as soon as the supposed plan to corner the crop was started they received information that the seeds could be delivered only through Messrs. Sander. These growers have lately received a communication that the goods can now be delivered at booked prices and are in fact on the way. If the corner has fallen through, it would be interesting to know why.

The National Sweet Pea Society's show was a great success in every way.

The Rickards Brothers.
(Proprietors Bridgeman Seed Co., New York.)

Dobbie & Co., of Rothesay, Scotland, took premier position among the professionals and trade growers. After such a show as this, showing, as it does, so much interest taken in this flower by the public, we may expect much increased trade for sweet pea seeds next season.

J. B.

THE BRIDGEMAN SEED CO.

The Bridgeman Seed Co., 17 West Nineteenth street, New York, yesterday passed into the hands of A. J. Rickards and W. C. Rickards, Jr., who will continue the business without change of name. The firm was founded many years ago by Alfred Bridgeman and for a long term has been under the management of E. A. Peth and F. M. Duggan. W. C. Rickards, Jr., has been in the employ of J. M. Thorburn & Co. for the last twenty years; and his brother was three years with the same firm, and seven years with Stumpp & Walter Co. They are widely known to the retail and private gardening trade in the east, are popular and have every prospect of making a fine success in business for their own account.

SEED IMPORTS.

The seeds imported through the port of New York for the week ending July 27, were as follows as to quantities and invoice values:

Kind.	Bags.	Value.	Kind.	Bags.	Value.
Canary	420	$1,015	Coriander	442	$1,835

HOLLAND SEED CROPS.

Sluis & Groot have issued their annual report on the seed crops of Holland, as follows:

"Last autumn, particularly the latter part of the summer, when various biennials were sown or planted, the weather was continually very dry; consequently many plants have poorly developed. This applies specially to cabbages, swedes, beets and mangelwurzels, so that in general the plantations are considerably smaller than last year. The mild winter was favorable to the crops and only a few plants were killed, so that not many sorts will fail altogether. Generally speaking, crops, owing to exceptionally cold weather in the spring, are somewhat backward.

"Cauliflower stands fairly good. White, red and Savoy cabbage, Brussels sprouts and borecole are very small plantations and the general standing is a middling one, a part even considerably under middling.

"Turnip is exceptionally small acreage; stand fairly good. Swedes, a very small plantation, with poor prospects of crop. Kohlrabi, little sown; stands fair. Mangelwurzel, sugar beet and beet are fairly good.

"Carrot, as a whole, promises a fair crop; stand rather thin. Parsnip and scorzonera are very good; not much planted. Corn salad is excellent crop.

"Summer radish suffered considerably from insects, so that a considerable acreage was lost; what was left is fairly good. Of winter radish not much was planted; stand promising. Onion, small plantations; stand good. Garlic, good. Celeriac and parsley, middling stand. Borage looks good but rather late. Chervil, average crop, but considerable acreage was lost. Curled chervil almost total failure. Spinach promises an average crop. Cucumbers, pretty good. Peas, generally very good. Dwarf and running beans promise a middling crop, although rather late, owing to very cold weather in the spring. English beans are an excellent crop.

"Prospects of the growing crops of flower seeds are not so favorable as last year, being somewhat backward, owing to the cold weather we had in May. We expect, however, that if the weather continues favorable, the crop as a whole will be still an average one.

"Antirrhinum is excellent. Calliopsis looks good; small plantation. Campanula, owing to the dry weather of last autumn, most plants remained too small and consequently did not run to seed; very small crop in several sorts. Candytuft, middling crop. Centaurea, very good standing; not much sown. Convolvulus, stand very good. Dianthus, looks very promising. Eschscholtzia, very good. Gypsophila, good. Helichrysum, looks promising until now. Lobelia, stand fair.

"Mignonette is an average crop, rather thin. Mimulus, excellent crop. Myosotis, fairly good. Nasturtium, fairly good. Nemophila, good. Pansies, average crop; small plantations. Papaver, good crop. Petunia, fairly good; rather late. Phlox, average crop. Rhodanthe, pretty good. Sweet peas, little sown; look good. Ten-weeks' stocks, rather late. Verbena, very good. Wallflower, crop apparently under middling."

STIMULANTS FOR SEEDS.

The possibility of stimulating the germination, especially of old seeds, and promoting the growth of plants by treating the seeds before planting with various substances, has been the subject of a number of studies both abroad and in this country, which have yielded results that promise to be of practical value. It has been repeatedly observed that certain of the treatments used in prevention of smut (for example, hot water and copper sulphate) apparently stimulate germination and growth and result in a greater increase in yield than can be accounted for simply by the influence of the treatment in preventing disease. G. E. Stone and associates, of the Massachusetts Experiment Station, have shown that such results may be obtained by means of treatment with a variety of chemical solutions as well as by electrical stimulation of the seed. Of the experiments conducted in this country those made by F. A. Waugh, of the Vermont Experiment Station, and later repeated at the Massachusetts Experiment Station, have given results which promise to be of most practical value. Professor Waugh's experiments, which were begun as long ago as 1896, were based upon the assumption that the transformation of the starch in the seed is an essential process in germination, and that the so-called enzyms, such as diastase, which are especially active in bringing about such transformation, would probably aid germination when used in the treatment of the seed. He therefore soaked old and fresh seeds of different kinds in solutions of diastase and similar substances before planting. He found in general that the percentage of germination and the vigor of the young plants were increased by such treatment, diastase, either from malt or from various commercial preparations, being especially active in this respect. He found that tomato seeds responded especially well to the action of the diastase.

In his more recent experiments Professor Waugh treated tomato seeds of different ages not only with diastase but with malt extract and with beer, which contain a certain amount of diastase. He found that the germination of old seeds was greatly promoted, and the vigor of the plants was increased by soaking over night in weak solutions of diastase, or in malt extract or beer. The germination of tomato seeds five to six years old was increased 600 per cent by the diastase treatment. Similar results, though less marked, were obtained with fresh seeds. In all cases the plants were more vigorous, and apparently more resistant to disease. The results in general indicate that this method of treatment may be profitably employed if a cheaper source of diastase than that now available can be secured.

The results obtained in these experiments confirm those by Jensen in experiments made in Sweden with oats and barley. He found that treatment of seed grain with a weak extract of malt gave an increase in the yields obtained at harvest time in comparison with seed treated with water only, showing that the extract produced an increased vegetative energy.

Similar results are reported by Bréal and Giustiniani, of France, with, however, a very different method of treatment, as follows: The seed was placed in a solution containing from one to five parts per thousand of copper sulphate, in which was stirred while boiling two to three per cent of starch. After cooling the mixture, four to five times its weight of seed was placed in it, thoroughly mixed, and allowed to remain for twenty hours, after which the seed was dusted with lime and spread to dry. This method of treatment increased the yield of all the crops experimented with, including corn, wheat, barley, oats, lupines and buckwheat.

These various experiments encourage the hope that some of these methods may eventually be profitably applied in practice in certain cases, especially in the stimulation of old seeds and others of low vitality. Many important details, however, remain to be worked out before any of the methods proposed can be recommended for general or extended use.

NOTES FROM ENGLAND.

The mistakes and consequent heavy losses in reference to the right and wrong way of retarding lily of the valley were very forcibly demonstrated to me this week. A batch of a million was ruined through being improperly retarded in one of our public cold stores. They had been kept at a regular 28 degrees during the whole time, but the atmosphere was simply dry, cold air. What valley requires is 4 to 6 degrees of solid, wet frost with an atmosphere that is continually more or less making ice. It should never be forgotten that there is a difference of fully 5 degrees in the effect of wet and dry frost on both vegetable and animal life, and one of the greatest items toward success in retarding valleys is putting them in an atmosphere heavily laden with moisture. Lilium longiflorum and other Japan lilies will not successfully retard in a moisture-laden atmosphere.

The new rambler rose, Hiawatha, is making quite a sensation and is likely to become exceptionally popular as a decorative garden variety. It is quite an improvement on the old Crimson Rambler. It is reported that orders for plants and buds of Hiawatha have so far come to hand to the one or two nurserymen who hold a stock far in excess of the supply in English growers' hands, and many orders have been and are still being booked forward for next season's delivery and even as far ahead as 1908.

The big palm growers are experiencing an amount of good business which has not been their lot for some years.

I have received a report from Naples giving a much encouraged prospect. One large grower reports that in aspidistras especially the still living roots are making rapid growth. A fair quantity can be exported in the coming fall. This report also applies to canna roots, large quantities of which were buried in the eruption. B. J.

We could not run our greenhouses without the Review.—W. G. Thomas, Sheffield, Ill.

SWEET PEA SEED

Christmas Pink and Florence Denzer (pure white), will be ready August 1. These two well-known varieties are raised by over 2,000 florists all over the world. Here is one of many letters I received:

DEAR SIR: My Sweet Peas, which I raised from your seed, received the HIGHEST AWARD in Boston, by the Carnation Exhibit, being over 18 inches long.
JOHN T. GALE, Tewksbury, Mass.

Price: ¼ lb., 75c; 1 lb., $2.00, mailed free.

NEW Christmas flowering Hybrids, 20 to 30 colors, mostly blue, salmon, purple, lavender, in mixture.

Mrs. Edie Wild, carmine, 1 trade pkt., $1.00; 5 trade pkts, $4.00. No order for more than 5 pkts. taken from each customer just now.

These new Hybrids are just as free bloomers as Christmas Pink and Florence Denzer, some much larger, and received first-class Certificate of Merit by the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, Boston, March 24.

All seed originated with me is sold in my original sealed pkts. with cultural directions, to growers, for raising cut flowers, but none for seedsmen for propagating.

UNION CITY, PA.

W. J. Olds, of the Union City Greenhouses, has had a very good season, and in common with other growers, reports a splendid sale of chrysanthemum plants. He is especially enthusiastic over Jeanne Nonin, which has done exceptionally well with him. It is a vigorous grower and needs liberal treatment. He says: "Do not try for too many blooms; four blooms will be enough for 4-inch stock and one bloom only from cuttings. Don't grow Nonin for sprays."

DANVILLE, ILL.

Danville, Ill., is not surpassed by any city of its size as a location for a greenhouse man. A city of 35,000 people, with beautifully paved and shaded streets, with eight railroads passing through it, it presents great advantages as a trade center and as a shipping point. Goods arrive after one night on the road from Chicago. We have three competing roads to Chicago.

Our business is just in its infancy everywhere, and is constantly developing. We have five large establishments here and two smaller ones. Six of these are doing a first-class business in all lines of work. The oldest establishment is that of Frank B. Smith. Mr. Smith died some time ago, and the business is now being conducted by his wife and sons. B. E. Wadsworth, who lately bought out Rhoten Bros., P. J. Walker, R. L. Burgoyne, and A. W. Morgan are located on Logan avenue. Ed. Osborn has recently sold his place on North Vermilion street and has put up a new plant near the cemetery. The Danville Floral Co. is located on Vermilion street, near the postoffice. Our market extends thirty miles from town on every side and orders come in constantly from this distance. Business is of course dull at the present, as it always is in midsummer.

RAILROAD GREENHOUSES.

Executive officers of the Union Pacific railroad in Chicago are planning to build several large greenhouses along the main lines of this company in Nebraska, Wyoming, Utah and other districts, with the object of having at every table in every dining car over the entire system a bouquet of freshly cut flowers at every meal. In addition to table and other decorations, it is planned to grow flowers on a scale sufficiently large to allow free distribution of roses to women and carnations, or other seasonable flowers, not only in dining cars, but to passengers in every car of every train, and in winter as well as in summer, the idea being to make patrons feel that the flowers are a part of the trip over this road and not souvenirs. The greenhouses probably will be located at Grand Island, Neb., Cheyenne, Wyo., Denver, Col., and Ogden, Utah.

NORTHERN TEXAS.

Warm weather still continues here, but there have been really only a few hot days. A breeze blowing all the time from the gulf tempers the heat, unlike the northern cities, where there is no breeze. The ground here has a tendency to bake and crack, causing injury to growing crops.

I have been using a mulch of rotten cotton hulls, and am well satisfied that if the ground is thoroughly watered, or immediately after a good rain, a mulch of these rotten hulls are scattered to a depth of not less than three inches, there will be no baking or splitting of the soil. The ground will be moist, and will remain so, with a light sprinkling every two weeks. It is a large proposition where one has a large farm, but where there are only from five to twenty acres, money will be made by the operation.

There are few good flowers now, the heat being the reason. But I am confident that as good a class of bloom can be grown here as elsewhere with proper care and attention to practical ideas, and with enough interest beyond a monetary point of view. Constant dropping, it is said, will wear away a stone, and one thing I am sure of, that constant care is the only way to succeed here.

PACIFIC COAST.

THE address of the California Rose Co., formerly Los Angeles, is now Pomona, which is thirty miles distant.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

The weather continues perfect and business is fair for the season. There appears to be a steady gain, which is encouraging to the dealers. Asters are coming into town in fair supply, although they are not yet very plentiful. The quality of the flowers appears to be all that can be desired. Carnations are in large supply, and the prices remain stationary. The best of the fancy sorts cost the retailers about 25 cents per dozen, while other kinds can be bought at from 15 to 20 cents. This is about one-quarter less than the price usually received at this time. This ratio holds good with almost everything in the line of cut flowers.

Roses are scarce and in good demand. Lilium album and Lilium rubrum are being sent into town in large quantities, especially by the Japanese growers. The blooms cost the stores about $2 per dozen stems on the average. Tuberoses are at the height of their season, but there is little demand for them, or for valley, either.

Maidenhair and cut asparagus stems have stiffened in price. Smilax is out completely, none of the new crops being yet ready for cutting.

In Oakland the usual conditions prevail. Business, especially in the funeral line, is good, with prospects for a heavy fall trade. A great many peddlers from San Francisco have moved over to Oakland, and make good wages traveling from house to house with baskets full of small bouquets.

Various Notes.

F. Brand, head gardener for the Realty Syndicate, of Oakland, has returned from a visit to southern California.

A. Rolleri has leased for two years the greenhouses of L. Bonneau on San Bruno road.

Frank Armanino is replanting one of his large houses, formerly devoted to rose growing, with Asparagus plumosus.

Arthur Zirkman, representing M. Rice & Co., of Philadelphia, is in town.

Hugh Kirk is at present connected with Idora park, Oakland.

Frank Connoly will leave on a two months' eastern trip in a few days. He will visit New York, Chicago, St. Louis and Philadelphia before he returns.

A. Fleck has erected a well arranged floral and seed establishment in front of his greenhouses on Grove street, Oakland. G.

TO TEST NEW PLANTS.

The regents of the state university at Berkeley have adopted a plan for experimental work under the auspices of the department of horticulture. This will be commenced during the present year under the law which also provides for a department of plant pathology and a citrus experiment station. The tract of land for the experiment station provided by the Huntington Park Association in Riverside will be prepared for irrigation on a contour system of distribution, with buildings provided for station purposes. The land will then be planted with collections of trees and plants most suitable for the lines of research and experiment.

Without neglecting other lines of work it is especially designed to render this station exceptionally suited to research and experimenting on new and rare varieties of plants, paying particular attention to those of value from a commercial standpoint. It is expected that the first year of the station work will be chiefly occupied in equipping, collecting and planting.

The land at Whittier for the pomological laboratory will be put into shape for the erection of a building of moderate cost, which can be quickly made ready for use. The investigations, laboratory tests and field work with the bartriosis of the English walnut, which were begun in advance of the provision of a laboratory because of the urgency of the trouble, will be continued and extended during the coming season. General attention will be paid to other plant diseases, a number of which have come up in the appeals of southern and central California growers for investigation.

One of the most important branches that will commence as soon as possible will be the department of entomology. Provision has been made for the study of insects and other agencies that are destructive to plants.

The commission has selected Riverside as the place for the plant experiments, and Whittier as the site of the laboratory. Governor Pardee, President Wheeler and Professor Wickson have been appointed a committee in charge of the work.

So enthusiastic are the people in the southern portion of this state that several gifts of land were tendered to the university authorities, and it is to be hoped that many problems now confronting the horticultural and agricultural interests of the Pacific coast will be solved by the experts in charge of the station.

Plant Now LILIUM HARRISII for Early Forcing

We offer some extra choice Lilium Harrisii which has been grown for us from the original, pure stock. This is the kind of stock that you want for the very earliest forcing, as it is the true, original Harrisii. The small sizes—5-7s and 6-7s—are particularly desirable for this purpose, as they will flower more quickly than the larger bulbs. If you want to get a little of the original, pure Harrisii, try a case or two of this. As our stock of this is limited, we can offer only a few cases to a single buyer. If you have been dissatisfied with the Harrisii that you have forced heretofore, try a case or two of this and see if it is not more than worth the difference in price over the stock that you have been buying. In ordering ask for the pure selected strain of original Harrisii, which we offer as follows:

5 to 7-inch bulbs, 400 to the case, $17.00 per case.
6 to 7-inch bulbs, 350 to the case, 17.50 per case.
7 to 9-inch bulbs, 200 to the case, 18.00 per case.
9 to 11-inch bulbs, 100 to the case, 18.00 per case.

EASTER COMES EARLY THIS YEAR—MARCH 31

and a great many growers will want to use Harrisii instead of Longiflorum so as to be sure and have the plants in flower in time, as the season is going to be short for Japan Longiflorum. The crop of Harrisii this year is the shortest it has been in years, and in view of the extra demand, we advise those who have not already covered their requirements to lose no time doing so.

For very earliest forcing—Christmas and later—we recommend the pure Harrisii offered above, but for later forcing for Easter, our customers will find the regular stock offered below first-class stock—much better than the average stock usually offered. We can quote the regular stock as follows:

6 to 7-inch bulbs, 350 to the case, $14.00 per case.
7 to 9-inch bulbs, 200 to the case, 15.00 per case.
9 to 11-inch bulbs, 100 to the case, 15.00 per case.

FREESIA REFRACTA ALBA, the true white variety. Now ready. Finest Bermuda-grown stock. $1.00 per 100; $7.50 per 1000.
BERMUDA BUTTERCUP OXALIS, $1.00 per 100; $7.50 per 1000.

Greenhouse Heating.

COAL OIL AS FUEL.

Can you give me any information in regard to heating a greenhouse with coal oil? We have pulled down our old house and are building two new ones, which will make the total area of glass 6,000 or 6,500 feet. The intention is to heat with hot water. Has coal oil been tried for heating greenhouses? R. M.

Coal oil in the crude state is extensively used for fuel purposes in Texas and Indian Territory, where it is abundant and cheap. It works best in steam generating plants, where the oil can be forced with a jet of steam through the burners into the fire-box of the boilers. In some cases where steam is not used, air is pumped into reservoirs and drawn upon to spray the oil into the burners; in other cases the oil flows by gravity into the burners. If the oil can be obtained at small cost it can be successfully employed for heating purposes. Kerosene is too expensive for greenhouse heating. During the winter of the coal famine crude oil was used for greenhouse heating to a considerable extent, but it is too expensive in the east, where the price of coal is normal. L. C. C.

HEATING FOR HOUSES.

I have four greenhouses, and wish to know how many runs of 1¼-inch pipe it will take for each. They are as follows: One house 15x60, 11-foot ridge, for geraniums; one for carnations, 20x60, 10-foot ridge; one for palms, 20x60 feet, 10-foot ridge; and another for carnations, 15x25, 10-foot ridge. E. W.

I presume that you will want to run your geranium and palm houses about 56 to 60 degrees. You will be safe in allowing one 1¼-inch pipe to every two feet of the width of your house. Put eight runs in the 15-foot house, and ten runs in the 20-foot house. In the carnation houses allow about two and one-half feet of the width of the house for each run of 1¼-inch pipe. This is figuring on steam heating.

If you install hot water, then you must put in at least half as many more pipes. Arrange for adding more pipes if it should be found necessary, one or two in each house. We find that the height of the house has very little to do with the amount of piping required, unless it goes to the extreme. For instance, we have one house forty-five feet wide and fourteen feet high at the ridge, and it takes just as many pipes in proportion to its width as another house which is thirty feet wide and seventeen feet high at the ridge. A. F. J. B.

HEATING SMALL HOUSE.

I have a greenhouse 18x35 feet, 4-foot sides, 9-foot ridge. I want to heat it with hot water, with 3-inch return bends. Will four on a side heat it at 15 degrees below zero to a temperature of 60 degrees? H. B.

If I understand the question correctly, you wish to use four 3-inch hot water pipes on each side of your greenhouse 18x35 feet. Four 3-inch pipes on each side, or eight 3-inch pipes in all, will provide almost the exact amount of radiation necessary to maintain a temperature of 60 degrees in the house. It would not be wise to use return bends, however, as the four pipes would thus make the water travel 140 feet, while by the use of a riser and three returns on a side, the flow can be reduced to thirty-five feet. Use a manifold for the three returns and supply it from one 3-inch riser or flow on each side. L. C. C.

Lumberton, N. J.—C. S. Ridgway has returned from a trip to Japan.

Here is my dollar; I couldn't run a greenhouse without the Review.—M. H. Lewis & Co., Strong City, Kan.

Urbana, O.—R. H. Murphey & Son are installing a new boiler and heating plant in their greenhouses on Oakland street.

Findlay, O.—S. J. McMichael has taken out a permit to erect a $1,500 greenhouse, to be built on his property on Larkins street.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Pres., Orlando Harrison, Berlin, Md.; Vice-Pres., J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Ia.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester; Treas. C. L. Yates, Rochester. The 32d annual convention will be held at Detroit, Mich., June, 1907.

THE Missouri apple crop promises to be the best in years.

THE New York apple growers report a very poor setting of fruit on Baldwin but quality promising to be exceptional.

CONTINUED rain is accelerating the growth of nursery stock in the east, although the strength of the storms has worked injury in a few minor cases.

THE season continues more than usually dry in the middle west. Nursery stock to date has not made a normal growth, especially the freshly transplanted blocks.

ON the night of July 21 burglars exploded a charge of nitroglycerine in the safe of J. A. Lopeman, Enid, Okla. There was no money in the safe, but a number of contracts and other papers were stolen.

NATHAN W. HALE, Knoxville, Tenn., nurseryman and congressman of the Second Tennessee district, has received a letter from one of his constituents urging him to introduce a bill in congress prohibiting women from wearing peek-a-boo shirtwaists and corsets and from using powder and paint on their faces.

THE Sunday World-Herald, of Omaha, on July 22, gave an illustrated half-page article to the peony industry in Nebraska. The farms of J. F. Rosenfield, near West Point, and of C. S. Harrison, of York, were mentioned as the leading places where peony culture is carried on. The former has eight acres devoted to peony raising, and has originated many varieties.

THOMAS HAWKES, landscape architect, has sued the promoters of the South Shore Country Club, at Chicago. Hawkes declares he was under contract with the defendants to prepare plans for beautifying the land owned by the club and that it was stipulated that he was to superintend the carrying out of his plans. For this work, he says, he was to receive ten per cent of the money to be expended, $300,000. Hawkes declares that, although his plans were accepted by the defendants, he was not allowed to carry them out, and that, although he considered the work on the plans to be worth at least $3,000, he was paid only $300. Hawkes asks the specific performance of the contract.

PEONIES AT ITHACA.

The peony plantation at Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y., is progressing nicely. It has been a favorable season and the stock, now in its second year, is making good growth. The plants have flowered lightly this season and by next June will be in shape to show their true characters.

The plantation here consists of several hundred plants and a large number of varieties contributed by members of the American Peony Society and European correspondents. By the time of the peony society's meeting at Ithaca in June, 1907, the plantation will afford a splendid opportunity of comparing the varieties of the several contributors and it is expected that many interesting points will be developed. Already interest in the Ithaca meeting is shown by a larger number of peony growers than have attended in previous meetings, and it is thought that Ithaca next June will see the largest gathering of peony growers yet brought together in this country.

THE MOLE TREE.

In reply to J. L., in the REVIEW of July 5, in regard to moles, I can say that we have here what is commonly called a mole tree or bush, which is claimed to keep away moles where it is grown. I cannot certify as to that, only that we have had them growing in our yard for several years and are never troubled with moles, while some of our neighbors are. The bush is quite an attractive plant. It is a biennial, and comes from seed. I do not know how the mole tree would stand a cold climate. It grows here during the winter months, making as much growth as in the summer.

I have also heard this plant called the fish-bone plant, on account of the way the leaves grow on the stalk. I can furnish seeds to any one wishing to try them. E. V. MASON.

INDIANAPOLIS.

The last week has been unusually quiet, from a business point of view, and a good many florists are taking their vacations. B. F. Pritchard and wife and C. E. Sellers and wife have been at the lakes and in Canada to recuperate. Others are planning to take in the S. A. F. convention at Dayton. From present reports there will be a good attendance from this city.

William Hack is bringing a fine lot of gladioli to market. He makes a specialty of growing this flower, and has marked success with it.

John and August Grande and Baur & Smith have asters in quantity.

S. S. Skidelsky was in town this week, busy as usual.

E. A. Nelson is back again after a week's fishing at Webster Lake. S.

FRUITVALE, ALA.

At a recent meeting of the stockholders of the Southern Floral Nursery Co., J. B. Bridge, A. B. Brown and L. H. Read were elected directors and in turn elected officers as follows: President, J. B. Bridge; vice-president and manager, L. H. Read; secretary and treasurer, A. B. Brown.

In the city parks of Dayton, not on the fair-grounds, the company has a display of cannas, 1,445 plants in 188 varieties, all but seventeen varieties of their own origination.

PRICE OF CYANIDE.

We should like to ask W. S. through your valued paper what sulphuric acid by the quart and cyanide of potash by the pound in large quantities would cost, as we think our local druggists charge us exorbitantly. J. W. M. & S.

The price given us by a reliable retail druggist is as follows: Cyanide of potassium, 40 cents per pound; sulphuric acid, 90 cents per gallon. These prices are near the wholesale list. You could possibly save ten per cent on these prices at some wholesale druggist's, but not more, and you can quote the above prices to your local druggist, but mind he does not ask you how much advance you make on your violets.

A young man entered a drug store with a prescription and asked the price. The proprietor said 60 cents. The customer remarked he was in the business. Then the clerk replied, "Oh! Excuse me, it will be 15 cents." W. S.

The Market.

While trade the last fortnight has been light, as it always is at midsummer, still a good run of funeral orders and quite a brisk sale for asters and sweet peas have made a market that our florists call satisfactory for this time of year. There is plenty of stock in the market, but much cannot be said of its quality; asters will probably come better later, carnations run poor, and roses are small. The seedsmen are doing considerable with celery and late cabbage plants, also turnip and other seasonable seeds. The weather continues rainy.

Club Meeting.

The last meeting of the month was held July 17, in our rooms in Iroquois hall. President Stephens was in the chair and all our other officers were present, as well as the largest gathering of members in a long time. Our treasurer's report showed a small balance on the right side from the picnic, which was satisfactory. Two active members were elected, Leo Bauman and E. D. Batelle.

The evening was devoted to a discussion of ways and means of attending the Dayton convention. All our members are taking the greatest interest in the matter and we hope that fifty or more will go from here. A special committee, consisting of Messrs. Woodrow, McKellar and Faxon, was chosen to formulate a plan and make all arrangements for the club to attend in a body. The plan most favored is the hiring of a special car, suitably decorated for the occasion.

Plans for our chrysanthemum show in November are fast going forward, and the various committees will soon be appointed. The next meeting will be Tuesday evening, August 7, when the final plans for the Dayton trip will be completed.

Various Notes.

E. Metzmeier, of South Fourth street, is beginning to feel much better after a severe siege of rheumatism.

The new carnation house, 30x140 feet, of John R. Hellenthal will soon be ready for planting.

Mr. Siebert, of the Fifth Avenue Floral Co., and family, are on a vacation trip on the upper lakes.

Graff Bros. have been making a run on American Beauty roses at 10 cents each. They have been receiving some excellent asters and gladiolus spikes this week.

Mrs. M. B. Faxon has returned from a six weeks' vacation in Boston and Newport, R. I., with her mother and sisters.

DETROIT.

The Market.

Although business is not entirely dead it seems to be at a standstill. What little stock is on the market is of pretty fair quality. Roses are rather scarce. Were it not for La Detroit, the florists in need of pink roses would be out of any kind of stock. The price ranges from $2 to $5 per hundred. Carnations are about as large as a cent and are not overplentiful, selling on an average at $1 per hundred. Asters are plentiful, ranging in price from 75 cents to $1 per hundred. Sweet peas were spoiled by the recent heavy rains.

Various Notes.

Breitmeyers', besides the general run of flowers, have in stock a fine assortment of outdoor flowers, including some fine specimens of Gladiolus America. Mr. Breitmeyer, acting in the capacity of park commissioner, spends considerable time about the city, looking after repairing of the boulevards.

William Dilger is seldom seen about the commission house, being kept busy at the parks as superintendent. The number of improvements throughout the parks speaks very highly for our club president.

B. Schroeter has been doing some repairing at the store. Miss Eva Smith, of Schroeter's, is spending a few weeks with friends in Canada.

William Brown is making numerous alterations, which when completed will make his store rank among the prettiest on the avenue.

Two veteran Detroit florists celebrated their birthdays last week, B. Schroeter his sixty-fifth and Robert Watson his sixtieth. The latter received a beautiful gold watch from his wife.

E. A. Fetters spent last week at May's Day lake fishing.

Miss Hattie Holzhauer, of Breitmeyer's, and Louis Charvat, the popular clerk at the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange, are away on well earned vacations. H. S.

I am overwhelmed with orders, from Boston to Seattle.—J. D. Brenneman, Harrisburg, Pa.

Milwaukee, Wis.—Emil Welke has about completed the erection of a new greenhouse, connected with his flower store on Third street. The greenhouse, store and living apartments will be heated with one Furman boiler.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

The usual summer dullness expresses the condition of things as they are to be found all along the line. Roses are very scarce. Some good lilies and Beauties are to be had; asters are here in quantities and prices are correspondingly low. Good gladioli are more plentiful, so that there is no trouble taking care of all the business that presents itself. We have been having some very severe storms all about us, with heavy wind, hail and rain; some very large hail is reported to have fallen about Wilmerding and Verona, but it must have missed all the greenhouses, as there are no reports of broken glass.

Various Notes.

The Pittsburg Rose & Carnation Co. drilled in another oil well last week which is a paying pumper.

Jimmie Wyland, of Allison Park, has taken unto himself a wife, and is receiving the congratulations of his friends.

Lincoln I. Neff has about an acre of asters which give promise of turning out some fine stock.

E. C. Ludwig and family have been enjoying their usual vacation at Atlantic City.

Ed. McCallum, of the Florists' Exchange, who has been fishing in Canada, spent last Sunday seeing the sights at Niagara Falls.

W. Q. Potter, of the Pittsburg Cut Flower Co., got in Sunday morning from Canada, and brought with him his last catch, a big 'lunge, the sight of which started the piscatorial fever raging in Phil Langhans. He immediately began packing his fishing tackle, and will be off by the end of the week for the Canadian lakes.

A. W. Smith, Jr., has returned from Denver, and has gone with his family to his Chautauqua cottage.

T. F. Imback, of Morgantown, W. Va., was in the city recently buying a few ponies, which he speculates in during the dull summer season. Hoo-Hoo.

Arrowsmith, Ill.—S. E. Lawrence is starting into business, building a house 21x80.

TWIN CITIES.

The Market.

Trade is quiet, but better than it was last year at this time. Stock is scarce and inferior, and prices are low.

Asters have started in nicely, but seem to sell only fairly well. Tigrum lilies are used extensively, both in designs and in counter sales. Funeral work seems to be about all that is being done. One of our dealers had a nice wedding decoration recently. Young roses are looking well, and if one can judge from the plants in their present condition, we can expect good cuts from the larger growers.

The excessive heat the last few weeks has been hard on the greenhouse help, and where large crews are employed, some are sick at nearly every place.

Minneapolis.

The department stores appear to be doing the most business. Trade is quiet around the florists' stores. Ralph Latham reports a good trade in the cut flower line.

The New York Floral Co. is apparently doing a fair business; their stock is kept up well.

Oscar Amundson has had some nice design work of late, and says he is satisfied, considering the season.

St. Paul.

The Twin City bowlers have arranged to have their contest Friday, August 3, in St. Paul, at Pfister's bowling alleys. A fine lot of prizes are offered, consisting mainly of contributions from the florists' friends in other lines of business. The ladies will also have a chance to show their skill in this line. After the contest lunch will be served and a good time is expected.

Ashton K. Kerschner, formerly with the State Nursery, Helena, Montana, has been in this vicinity for the last few weeks.

F. Vogt and Henry Puvogel have been busy the last four days entertaining their Saengerfest friends. The decorations for the Saengerfest in the floral line did not amount to much.

Holm & Olson's new store will be in readiness within a short time. It will give them a large floor space.

L. L. May & Co. turned out considerable funeral work last week, and were short of stock a part of the time.

WATCH US GROW

Think of Aschmann, the Great Araucaria Importer of America, before buying elsewhere. Araucaria Excelsa, the pet of all decorative plants that nature produced, our specialty. Now perfectly recovered from their sea voyage, well established, growing in pots, ready to ship to all parts of America.

These everlasting green foliaged pot plants are growing more in favor by the tasteful plant buyers of this land from year to year. Please watch the growth of our importation during the last 11 years; first year 100, second 250, third 500, fourth 1000, fifth 2000. This year (1906) which is the 11th anniversary of our first importation, our spring importation amounted to 6,000. All these are grown for us under contract by an Araucaria specialist in Belgium. I must say for the benefit of my customers that they were never before so nice and large for the money as this year. I herewith quote you special prices on these.

Araucaria Excelsa, 12 to 14 inches high, 5½-in. pots, 3 to 4 tiers, 2 yrs. old, 50c. 14 to 16 inches high, 5½-in. pots, 3 to 4 tiers, 2 yrs old, 60c. 16 to 18 inches high, 5½ to 6-in. pots, 4 to 5 tiers, 3 yrs. old, 75c. 18 to 20 inches high, 6-in. pots, 5 to 6 tiers, 4 yrs. old, $1.00. 20 to 24 inches high, 6-in. pots, 5 to 6 tiers, 4 yrs. old. $1.25. 36 to 50 inches high, specimens, 7-in. pots, 6 yrs. old, $2 50 to $3.00.

Araucaria Compacta Robusta, have 1000 of them. Never were they as nice as this year. Plants are as broad as long, from 12 to 20 inches in height, 3 to 4 perfect tiers, 20 to 30 inches across from tip of one tier to the other, 3, 4 and 5 yrs. old. 6 to 7-in. pots, $1.25, $1.50, $1.75 to $2.00, up to $3.00 each.

Araucaria Excelsa Glauca, perfect jewels in shape and size, their beautiful greenish blue tiers give them such a striking appearance, that anyone seeing them must fall in love with them on sight. Plants, 6 to 7-in. pots, 3, 4, 5 perfect tiers, 15 to 25 inches in height, from 15 to 30 inches across, $1 25, $1.50, $1.75, $2.00 to $3.50 each. Please bear in mind that the above mentioned varieties are the cream of Belgium's productions. We have thousands of them and can meet all demands.

CINERARIA STELLATA.

This type of cinerarias is now to be had in a variety of forms which are useful for general decorative purposes, and likewise for cutting. For decorative purposes they are greatly superior to the older florists' varieties, on account of the light appearance which the plants have, and their increased height. An objection is sometimes raised that cinerarias become dirty or infested with aphis, which detracts from their usefulness. If the plants are placed in warm houses or rooms they soon become covered with greenfly, but cinerarias, like calceolarias, do not require warmth, and are best grown under cool conditions for whatever purpose they may be required.

Several sowings should be made according to requirements, and when the plants are large enough for pricking out a north or northwest aspect for a cool frame is a good place to grow them. Until the blooms commence to open, abundance of air on all favorable occasions should be given the plants; grown cool in this manner it is surprising the amount of frost cinerarias will stand, and the length of time they remain in bloom.

In the variety Felthamensis we have an improvement on the smaller-flowered types of stellata or polyantha; the color is also pleasing, but so far the plants are dwarf, but if we can obtain some that will grow to a height of from two to three feet their value for decorations will be increased. Another type is that shown at the Royal Botanic Society's exhibition by Jarman & Co., of Chard. Here we have the fantastic cactus form of flower, the rolled petals of the flowers having a quilled appearance. The Chard firm was awarded a certificate of merit for the strain, which is quite fixed. We have tested the lasting qualities of the flowers when cut, and the plants make pretty decorative subjects, as the peculiar shaped blooms attract attention. Not the least good point about them is the diversity of coloring yielded by the flowers.—Gardeners' Magazine.

I WANT to thank the REVIEW for the many orders it has brought me.—S. J. MCMICHAEL, Findlay, O.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Business continues fair for the season, and with the advent of asters, which are coming in quantities, we are hoping that it will continue so. Gladioli are also coming in heavily and are selling well, but not at high prices. There are few roses and these are of poor quality. Beauties are about the best in the rose line. Carnations are about out of the market, and what few are to be had are hardly fit to be sold. It will not be long till the cut from new stock will begin to come in, and that will relieve the market in this respect. New roses will be on the market shortly also.

Various Notes.

H. M. Altick, while in this city last week, left a favorable impression as to the progress made at Dayton for the S. A. F. convention. That this convention will be one of the greatest ever held goes without saying, and the craft in this city are one and all waiting anxiously for the day to come when they will be up and going to Dayton. Cincinnati will send a large delegation and if every one goes who says he is going, there won't be a florist left in this city on August 21. The exhibition will undoubtedly be a great one this year and the outdoor display will be a feature that will repay any one for making the trip.

The Cincinnati Fall Festival Association will give two flower shows during the Fall Festival this year. Altogether $1,200 will be offered in prizes. The first show will be held September 6, and will be exclusively for cut flowers and plants; $700 is the amount offered for prizes, but owing to the fact that no entries were forthcoming to compete in this show, W. K. Partridge was awarded a contract to make the exhibit, and now he is making special preparations to make a display which will be up to if not better than those he has made in the past. That this show will be well worth seeing any one who is acquainted with Mr. Partridge will not be in doubt.

The second show will be held September 20, and will be devoted to table displays, bridal bouquets and perhaps a few designs; $500 will be divided up into the various prizes. Any one can exhibit in this show, and exhibitors from out of the city will be shown every courtesy.

George Tromey has been sick for the last few days, suffering from a severe cold, but is now able to be about again.

A. C. Kohlbrand, of E. C. Amling's, Chicago, dropped in last week. He is making his annual visit to see the old folks.

DAYTON OHIO.

Convention Notes.

It is only three weeks until the annual S. A. F. convention will open. Things are in tip-top shape, peace and harmony reign all the way around, and the twenty-second convention promises to be the largest in the society's history, in exhibition, lectures, entertainments and in attendance. The president of the Florists' Club, Mr. Heiss, recently has been in New York, and at the last meeting gave a glowing description of the places visited. All the leading firms will exhibit.

The officers of the club met July 27 at the exhibition grounds, in company with concessionaires, to make final contracts for lighting the grounds. Everybody was pleased to see how things show up. All were unanimous in their praise of Mr. Freudenberger and Henry Hassey, who have charge. John H. Patterson suplied men, teams, tools and materials free of charge to beautify the outdoor surroundings. It is through his untiring efforts that the city of Dayton is in landscaping what it is today.

People are waking up now to the beauty of perennial stuff, and it is with regret that we say that the contemplated outdoor exhibit did not show up as well as was anticipated. A large lot of ground was gotten ready for such an exhibit, but exhibitors stayed out, and finally the Dayton club resolved to fill up the spaces. Each brought whatever he had, and Mr. Freudenberger took it upon himself to plant these empty spaces with the material that was thus forthcoming. The effort was not in vain.

The Dayton Florists' Club will offer prizes for the best plans for landscape gardening. Now, you enterprising landscape architects, make the trade familiar with what you are doing. We have to introduce novel features in every convention and this will be one most beneficial to all the trade. Come forward, if with only a few pencil sketches, and instruct the members of our society what can be done with a small amount of money to make even the most humble home a thing of beauty. J. B. Heiss.

Sewickley, Pa.—H. C. Bucheler has left the Valley Greenhouse Co. to become superintendent of the fine estate of Mrs. J. B. Oliver at Shields, Pa.

Abilene, Kan.—Raymond Miller has torn down one of his houses and is adding two new structures. When they are completed he will have 6,000 feet of glass.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

Business Conditions.

At last the drought is broken, and the longed-for rain has arrived. It has come in time to save the carnation crop, although some patches are partly destroyed. There will be no further fear of dry weather for the rest of the season, as this was a thorough soaker, and has gone down to the roots of things. A good hoeing or stirring of the soil will retain the moisture now for weeks.

A summer quietness has settled down over business except occasional funerals and shipping orders. Replanting is well under way; Crabb & Hunter have five houses of carnations in. Cross, Smith and the Grand Rapids Floral Co. have begun planting. All are considerably behind, compared to what they were this time last year, on account of the dry, hot weather.

The aster crop has been badly checked by the dry weather, and will not amount to much, on account of the short stems.

Flowers are very scarce, there being few either of roses or carnations. What there are are of poor quality, and will be until we begin cutting from the new crops; at the same time, demand is light and most of the time easily met.

Various Notes.

Eli Cross has added a rose house to his plant, and will open a store downtown, where Miss Harnett was located. She has removed to the Pythian temple.

Henry Smith is behind in replanting roses, having to rebuild and extend two houses before he could start.

C. Chadwick has his rose replanting under full headway. Mr. Deidrich, the new foreman, is making things hustle.

Jacob Dutmers, for the last two years with the Manistee Floral Co., takes charge of the Reeds Lake Floral Co., formerly the Grand Rapids Violet Co. The new firm will grow cut flowers, roses, carnations and mums.

It is rumored that John Steenman will take a position with the Manistee Floral Co., to fill the vacancy made by the withdrawal of Jacob Dutmers.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—The firm of John Lucas & Co., manufacturers of paint and glass for the trade, has been reorganized, and the business will now be conducted by William E. Lucas and H. Spencer Lucas, who assume all obligations of the old firm.

THE TEST OF QUALITY

Cypress is conceded by all authorities to be the best wood for greenhouse construction, and quite a little has been said about the "right kind of cypress." What way have you of knowing the "right kind of cypress?" Can you tell by looking at a cypress plank just where the sap lies and what kind it is?

One way to be sure that you get the "right kind" of cypress is to place your order with a firm that makes a test of every piece before shipping and employs an expert to detect cypress defects. Send for "Why Use Cypress" and "The Mummy's Case."

While We Were Doing So Much Talking

About our truss house, its strength, lightness and skillful mechanical application of the Cambered Fink Truss, we only referred in a general way to the new gutter, so we send you this picture that gives a fair sort of an idea of its general shape, the way the sashbar clasps are secured to it and how they lead all drip straight to the drip gutter. That rod running out from the left of the bracket is part of the truss; the "U" shaped socket supports the drip gutter. Of course, you understand that we make this gutter for all forms of construction.

Not only is this gutter a "can't be beat gutter," but it binds the structural parts together in a tremendously strong way—enough by itself even if it didn't cast less shade, take care of all condensation, and start the water running at once.

You'll find a gutter talk in Catalog T-L.

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

THE CROSS AND GARLAND.

The accompanying illustration shows most excellently a large design made recently by Mangel, Chicago, for the employees of the National Fire-Proofing Co. It was one of those cases where a collection had been taken up and a considerable sum of money had to be adequately represented in the design. In such instances the florist often finds himself in a place where it is difficult to give satisfaction. To put in the money by means of using expensive flowers, such as orchids, fails of its purpose with people who know nothing of the value of flowers. And on the other hand mere size is not what is wanted.

This cross and garland exactly fills the bill. It is large enough to stand out among the flowers at almost any funeral, and elaborate enough to satisfy the purchasers that they have received their money's worth, while in this instance the execution was excellent and there was a satisfactory profit for the store. The frame of the cross was, of course, filled in with moss and made solid with asters wired on picks in the everyday fashion. It was in the construction and attachment of the garland that it departed from the ordinary. Many makers-up in work of this character make a garland of smilax or asparagus strings, to which the flowers are attached, and when the garland is completed it is draped upon the piece and attached. But in this case the roses, sweet peas and greens were wired on picks and set into the piece. The effect was fine, heightened, as it was, by the rose pendent from one arm of the cross and the sweet peas from the other. Bunches of pansies marked the cross, top and bottom, and the loose arrangement at the base was the usual one, care being taken to see that the greater portion of the stock was grouped back and at the right of the tablet bearing the inscription.

The illustration is an especially good one, being prepared from a photograph by the George R. Lawrence Co., who are experienced photographers of flowers, or indeed anything else where detail is required. They are best known as makers of large negatives and make a specialty of conventions, banquets, etc. They photograph all the big banquets at the Waldorf-Astoria in New York, at the New Willard in Washington, and at the Auditorium in Chicago, thus coming in contact with the leading florists of the three cities. One of the results has been that they have made portfolios of designs for several of the retailers to use in taking orders. They are now at work on such an original and exclusive portfolio for C. A. Samuelson, and at the same time are making a portfolio shortly to be offered to the trade. The Lawrence Co. sends men all over the country to do jobs which are beyond the reach of the local picture makers, one of their specialties being bird's-eye views from a captive balloon. The Review has suggested that the balloon be sent up for a shot at the greenhouses north of Chicago and hopes some day to have the pleasure of printing a photograph of the district north of Chicago, with landscape spotted with ranges of glass until it looks like a map of the Wisconsin lake region.

The Cross and Garland.

NOVELTIES AND PUBLICITY.

H. R. Hughes, Chicago, has made his name, his store and his goods well known to people living on the great west side. He is a firm believer in publicity, and has issued from time to time neat little folders advertising some special feature of his business. These are distributed in large numbers in the neighborhood, and their periodical appearance serves to keep Mr. Hughes in the minds of a forgetful people. The pamphlets always contain something original and interesting, and are usually instructive as well. One of them gives full instructions for the care of ferns and palms. Another is entitled "A True Fish Story," and gives hints about the feeding and care of goldfish.

Besides the regular line of greenhouse work Mr. Hughes handles several special lines of novelties, one of the most noticeable being the small clay grass-growing figures of animals, human heads, etc. One of his show windows is filled with these little images, covered with the greenest of green grass, and they constantly attract the attention of people passing in the street. In another window Mr. Hughes has a large aquarium filled with goldfish, which are sold with suitable small bowls. The window is attractively arranged around the aquarium. Mr. Hughes also sells fish supplies of all kinds and finds it a profitable side line.

The establishment of Mr. Hughes is situated in the heart of the west side residence district, and is near several hospitals, so the cut flower department is kept busy.

SUMMER FLOWERS SOUTH.

We note the query of S. B. S. and the reply of D. in the issue of July 26. The plan for growing Kaiserins and Cochets strikes us as being too expensive for summer stuff at the usual summer price of, say, $1 per dozen for the best grade, with the certainty of having to throw away at least one-third to one-half of what is grown. A great many customers will not have roses in summer. They claim that they fade too quickly. This is especially true of pink roses. Summer carnations are what we really need. They suit the popular purse and the popular taste; but to make them pay, they must be grown cheaply.

We have never heard of Moonlight's being a good summer bloomer. Those that we have tried have shown themselves weak growers, but the fault may have been in the stock. We have heard of summer flowers being grown under canvas, petunias, gladioli and such, but have never had any experience with them. Would Kaiserin stand the shade of thin canvas where the rays of the sun are direct, and where the mercury plays between 90 and 100 degrees during the hottest part of the day for four months and more? Has any southern grower tried it?

CARNATIONS

CARNATION NOTES.—EAST.

Bench Soil.

While carnation culture is by no means wholly dependent on the soil employed in the benches, it will be evident to any one that without a congenial place from which to draw the necessary food supply, returns from the plants will be unsatisfactory. From the foregoing it must not be inferred that if we make the soil rich enough in plant food, everything is provided, for, as will be noted, the source of food supply is referred to as a congenial place to obtain the necessary amount, meaning that the soil must be in good mechanical condition, and must contain certain fertilizing elements also.

Beginners are apt to make sure that the soil is rich enough, in fact, they may overdo the matter, when it is far more important that its mechanical state be given every attention, especially as this property of the soil cannot be remedied later on, though plant food can be added as occasion requires. In fact, it has been proven to be best for the plants when added later, and is more economical.

The following simple experiment with a few freshly dug plants from the field will serve to show the carnation's ability to utilize energy stored up within, or, if you choose, the needlessness of supplying much food at the time of benching. Carefully wash all soil from the roots, pot in 4-inch or 5-inch, according to size, using finely sifted coal ashes slightly moistened; if they are fresh from the ash-pit you may be quite sure that little plant food is present. You may be surprised at the growth made and the blooms produced before the plants show signs of exhaustion.

As regards using a layer of manure on the bottom of the benches, we have found this plan a good one to follow, but should advise against the use of manure which is well rotted—not that any harm will be done, but that there will be little advantage gained.

The general opinion, or at least the advice, of many writers advocates the use of well rotted manure in all horticultural operations. This is no doubt good practice in certain cases, such as with plants grown wholly for foliage, or those of slow growth, which bloom only at long intervals. Those which must live the strenuous life seem to appreciate soil enriched with manure in the first stages of decomposition better than that which has lost a large percentage of its fertilizing elements through fermentation or leaching.

Tobacco Stems.

Several years ago we tried tobacco stems in a section of bench with good results, but their cost with us is too great to warrant continued use.

Depth of Soil.

I do not in the least doubt Mr. Baur's success or question his advice in the use of soil three inches in depth, but from personal experience and observation of others, should advise a depth of at least four inches with the average New England soil; having tried soils from various parts of this section, I find a vast difference in their natural wearing capacity, and we may be pardoned for envying the growers of Indiana and adjacent states, possessed, as they are, of a soil second to none.

Geo. S. Osborn.

STARTING PALM SEEDS.

Will you kindly inform me through your columns the best way to germinate or start kentia palm seed? I have plenty of leaf-mold and good rotted sod soil, charcoal and fiber for compost. Please advise a good mixture of the same.

T. T. C.

The best method for the germination of kentia seeds is to plant them in a bench containing about four inches of soil, three inches of the latter being placed on the bench and smoothed down, then the seeds sown quite close together, and finally covered with an inch of soil, and the whole bed then given a good watering.

The seeds should be sown in a house in which a temperature of not less than 60 degrees is maintained during the winter, as they will occupy the space for many months, for these seeds germinate very irregularly and while some may come through in two months' time, there may be others that will not show for nearly a year.

As to the soil in question, a mixture of equal proportions of the leaf-mold and rotted sod would answer very well for the bottom soil, and the seeds might be covered with the leaf-mold only, if it is well rotted and free from fungus. In the east we usually use peat for a covering of the seeds, and sometimes for the entire bed, but the leaf-mold would answer very well.

During the summer the seedbed may not need watering oftener than once or twice a week, and a light shade on the glass will save it from drying out too much, but after firing begins in the fall it may require water more frequently, for the seeds should be kept always moist.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Sweet Peas Indoors.

The writer had intended to dilate this week on what he knows about forcing sweet peas for winter blooming, but the valuable and interesting notes by A. C. Zvolanek on this subject, published in the Review of July 26, page 582, leave little to be said on the subject.

Some five or six years ago I used to write that you could not expect to flower sweet peas before April 1, and I was not so far wrong after all, for these early-flowering varieties were not generally known at that time, and the fine old varieties like Emily Henderson, Blanche Ferry and Catherine Tracy, grand as they are for outdoor culture, are useless for winter forcers. Mr. Zvolanek has told of the long years of labor and perseverance it took to produce these winter-flowering varieties.

It is two weeks early to sow the seed, but not too early to prepare the beds. Last year we were fairly successful with these sweet peas. We sowed on August 18, and picked our first flowers November 20. By Christmas there was an abundant picking. Christmas Pink we sowed in the bed where it flowered, but Florence Denzer, the early white, was sown in 3-inch pots and they were never in any respect equal to the Christmas Pink.

It may happen that you have a bed occupied with a crop of early chrysanthemums and you want to cut them and then plant sweet peas. In this case you should sow the peas, seven or eight seeds in a 4-inch pot, and transplant to the bed as soon as the mums are gone. This can be done with fair success, yet our experience is that it is much better to sow where they are to flower.

As for the white-seeded varieties being best sown in sand, it is quite easy to scoop out a little cup of the soil and fill in with sand. We think the ideal distance is to have the hills twelve inches apart in the rows and the rows eighteen inches apart. Mr. Zvolanek impresses on us the necessity of light and ventilation, to all of which we say amen. We noticed last winter that without sunlight we picked few peas, but after a bright day the picking was wonderfully increased. Therefore, a house running north and south is not sufficiently light. A house running east and west, and the middle or north bench of that house, would be ideal. A raised bench would do, still I should much prefer a bed on the ground, drained with three or four inches of gravel, rubblestone or tiles.

Forty-five degrees at night and a rise of 10 degrees is right for dull weather, and 10 or 15 degrees higher on bright days will be very beneficial. A high temperature by artificial heat, especially in cloudy weather, will be most harmful.

Greenfly is easily kept down with regular weekly smoking with tobacco stems. In connection with sweet peas I should say that the great grower of this flower, William Sim, of Cliftondale, told me that his magnificent vases of white shown at several of the carnation conventions was Mont Blanc. Whether this variety can be had in flower by Christmas I don't know. It is grand when it does come.

Alternanthera.

Those interested in carpet bedding plants should propagate alternanthera now, while the weather is warm. Flats holding a depth of three inches of sandy soil should be prepared. If your soil is not sandy, then mix your garden soil with equal quantities of pure sand and insert the cuttings of alternanthera thickly in the flats. One good watering and the cuttings will root anywhere, inside or out. This is an economical way to winter these little tropical weeds, so useful in carpet bedding.

Poinsettias.

There is little occupying the cutting bed just now except the poinsettias. It will soon be time to propagate the plants you intend for pans or half pots. The single plant in a 5-inch or 6-inch pot meets with little favor nowadays. The half pot, or azalea pot, as we call it, holding four or five plants, is the popular arrangement. Pans are rather shallow for the purpose because the plants become exhausted by Christmas.

Remember there is no science in rooting or growing this showy plant. It will root in the hottest weather, if kept faithfully shaded and the sand saturated, but when potted off from the sand, for the first week there must be no neglect of shading and watering. When once they begin to root in the little pots they will enjoy the brightest sun.

Asters.

Where rains have been frequent and copious, asters are doing well, but where a long, dry, hot July prevailed, they are poor. We are now cutting early varieties of good quality because the hose has been playing on them often enough to keep the soil moist.

The best asters are yet to come and if rains do not come the fall crop will be poor. An investment in a few hundred feet of 1¼-inch pipe may profit you several hundred dollars. Pipe is always useful on any florists' place. It takes but a few minutes to screw together 500 feet of 1¼-inch pipe from your water supply to your aster field, and then you can, by moving the hose occasionally, thoroughly irrigate them. I said 1¼-inch because in conducting water through pipes there is much friction in 1-inch. If your aster patch is several feet lower than your greenhouses, then gravity will help, but where there is little or no drop, friction in the 1-inch pipe will reduce the force or pressure to almost nothing. Anyway, don't hesitate to afford means to irrigate your asters, sweet peas and gladioli, but not carnations. Oh! No! Not on your life! Hoe them, but do not hose them.

William Scott.

We consider the Review the best publication in its line.—W. T. Stephens & Co., Brookfield, Mo.

NOTES FROM ENGLAND.

Roses are booming in England this year. A host of new varieties is being placed on the market. Covent Garden, and every provincial market, is overloaded with cut roses, but they all are cleared at some price or other. Alex Dickson & Sons, of Newtownards, Ireland, are offering quite a catalogue in itself of entirely new roses. The firm has a magnificent stock, and is no doubt nearly as well known in America as here.

I notice that some of the more successful growers of lancifolium lilies are blooming their bulbs the second year, especially the album and Krætzeri forms, and they find that if properly treated the blooms are larger and far more numerous, and the growth cleaner and stronger, when bloomed the second year. There is little art in the drying off, as the growths, when done flowering, are simply allowed to die down. The pots are laid on their sides outdoors, and when the proper time comes around, the bulbs are shaken out and repotted in fresh soil. If the bulbs are skilfully grown during the first season, they will give a great improvement the second year, but it is absolutely useless to pot up a second time any bulbs that show the slightest sign of disease or of falling away of scales, as these will hardly make a growth a second year.

Some English importers of carnations are grumbling considerably at the large percentage of loss of plants received from some American firms. Some firms pack carnation plants for export to England who do the thing so well, hardening and otherwise fitting the plants for their long voyage, that not more than five per cent die after arrival here. Others do not harden and neglect especially to grow and pack the plants, so that in some cases every single plant of a consignment dies soon after arrival. It is the fear of this loss that prevents many English growers from buying from America. If every carnation exporter in America would take special care and pains with plants intended for export, double the quantity would be ordered by England from American growers. One nurseryman here informs me that in one consignment of 1,000 plants he lost only six plants. In another consignment of 600 from another firm he lost every plant. In a lot of 1,000 from a third firm, between 300 and 400 died. This does not tend to increase orders for American plants. B. J.

STATE OF GENERAL TRADE.

So long as prosperity abides with the farmer, so long will it continue with those who manufacture or sell general lines of merchandise; and the florist will get his share when others are doing business. This is the way one of the great commercial agencies reports on the present state of trade in general:

"There was a healthy volume of business in wholesale lines last week. In fact, in some departments of industry the fear was expressed that it would be difficult to fill orders this fall owing to the fact that there had been no let-up during the customary period of dullness to catch up with current demands.

"The movement of merchandise was heavy, shipments of fall and winter goods having commenced. Grain shipments were again large, particularly of wheat. Receipts of new wheat at Chicago during July broke all records, and indications point to continued heavy shipments of winter wheat until the movement of the spring wheat crop starts.

"The progress of the crops has been almost uniformly good, the only complaints coming from points in Illinois and Missouri, of dry weather. The prospects of abundant harvests has given the country merchants added confidence, and many of them already have appeared at primary markets for the purpose of placing their fall orders.

"In practically every department of the steel and iron trade orders have been booked far ahead, the output of the rail mills having been placed up to near the close of next year. There was a fair degree of activity in pig iron.

"A perceptible increase was noted last week in the number of orders and inquiries in the western bituminous coal market."

HINTS ON CUTTING.

Preparation of Young Stock.

The proper preparation for young stock to successfully bear the first time will now require some time and care. The stock must be healthy, vigorous and of a reasonably fair size before we allow a crop to develop, otherwise the deprivation of the foliage necessary in cutting marketable stems will weaken the vitality and cause a growth of blind wood.

Proper care in removing the lateral shoots is also necessary. When removing the laterals from young stock preparatory for a first cut, it is best not to remove those near the base of the stems, as they will eventually make good flower stems. This is frequently practiced, to the detriment of the plant, in order to secure a few more inches to the flower stem and so secure the highest price going; the more experienced grower knows this is poor policy.

As the plants at this time are far from having attained their full growth, each flower stem should be cut not with the object of getting it as long as possible, but with the definite purpose of improving the size and form of the bush, and with the view of enhancing its future productiveness, when the demand will be brisker and prices rule higher.

The First Cut.

When taking the first cut, to balance the plants in form, those stems which are longest and strongest should be cut so that three or four eyes with fully developed leaves are left; each one of them is capable of developing a good flower stem.

On the weaker growths two eyes will be quite sufficient, they being only able to perfect and maintain that number of shoots with strength to form a good flower stem. All abortive and malformed flowers should be cut with the same regard for eyes as perfect flowers.

Special Varieties.

Liberty and Richmond, having an inclination to produce a thicket of small wood at this time, will be benefited greatly by having it thinned out judiciously, allowing a free circulation among the leaves and giving more sunlight to the yet unbroken eyes at the base of the plant.

Picking out the buds of Beauties, the stems of which are not quite long enough for market, will result in another bud developing at the base of the bud stem, which in a week or two will reach out and increase the length of the stem by six or eight inches. This method can be carried on for some weeks if necessary, as sometimes the price offered for these buds will not repay the injury done to the plants by hard cutting. Ribes.

MILDEW ON ROSE PLANTS.

I am bothered with a bad case of mildew on my rose plants, and have been for the last eight months. Nothing seems to touch it. The plants have been cut back, and are vigorous and bloom well, but the foliage is poor. I give all the ventilation I can, and use sulphur twice a week, about a pound to a house 20x100. My roses are Golden Gate. I was never troubled before to speak of, and would like to know what to do.

C. P. N.

I am at a loss to understand how this querist can have vigorous plants which bloom well and which at the same time have rotten foliage, as without good, healthy foliage, which is their breathing apparatus or lungs, there can be no vigor; instead, a great lack of vitality must necessarily follow when the foliage is incapacitated from performing its proper function.

This lack of vitality is just such an invitation as mildew will readily accept, and until the leaves become of a better texture it will continue to infest the plants in spite of all known preventatives and cures; in fact, if the foliage is very thin and poor in texture, sulphur has a debilitating effect on the plant and should be used with great caution.

If the plants are carried-over stock, and have been cut back, the house should be kept cool and moist and rather close during the day, with ample ventilation at night, until root action has again commenced. Until this takes place great care should be exercised in watering so that the plants do not have more at the roots than they can readily use.

Golden Gate, being a strong, vigorous grower, and of good constitution, is not very susceptible to the attacks of mildew, and this would indicate that there is something radically wrong in the cultural methods. Ribes.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

The executive committee held a meeting at the Fifth Avenue hotel, New York City, and took up the matter of preparing the way for the next annual meeting and show at Washington, the Washington Florists' Club having joined hands to make a strong effort for a handsome showing. The committee went over the prize schedule of last year and spent some time in devising means to secure ample prizes for the exhibit.

The effort is being made to gather together and put into permanent form the history of the organization, which was first started at Atlantic City in 1894, and the present organization, which was put in force March 13, 1899, W. C. Barry, of Rochester, being the first president of the society. The motto which was proposed at the executive meeting for the organization was: "A rose for every home, a bush for every garden."

The sense of the committee is that the society should be broadened to make it as comprehensive as its name—that "American" represents no section, but takes in the entire bound of the zone where roses grow.

Benjamin Hammond, Sec'y.

ODONTIODA VUYLSTEKEAE.

Not until the last few years have hybridists done much with that most beautiful of all orchids, the odontoglossum, but in Europe great strides recently have been made in this direction; British, French and Belgian growers are all now busy turning out new crosses, quite a number of which have received awards from the Royal Horticultural Society of London, and from other societies. One of the foremost of these hybridists is M. Ch. Vuylsteke, of Ghent, who has won many high awards for unique forms of Odontoglossum crispum, as well as for odontoglossum hybrids.

The most remarkable novelty that has been raised by this skilful Belgian hybridist is Odontioda Vuylstekeæ, the result of crossing the popular and well-known Odontoglossum Pescatorei with the brilliant orange-scarlet Cochlioda Nœtzliana, a cross considered an impossibility a few years ago. An inflorescence carrying six flowers—the plant was not shown on account of its value—was exhibited at the celebrated Temple show in London, on May 31, 1904, and created a sensation among the large number of orchid fanciers present. A new orchid must be remarkably good to score a first-class certificate in London, but this novelty received not only that award, but a silver-gilt Lindley medal also.

The flowers are shaped like those of odontoglossums, but the color is largely that of the cochlioda. The blooms are two and a half to three inches in diameter. The ground-color is light cream yellow, largely obliterated except on the lip and around the large blotches on the sepals and petals. The blotches on the lip, sepals and petals are deep salmon red in color, and the crest is deep yellow. The teeth are described as being more developed than in Odontoglossum Pescatorei; the bulbs and foliage closely resemble the latter plant.

The cross was made both ways, and it is not known for certain which plant was the seed bearer. It was feared at first that the seeds would not germinate. We have not seen it stated how much time elapsed from seed sowing to flowering; many growers would no doubt like to know this.

The production of this striking cross, apart from any value it may have either as a botanical or a decorative orchid, shows admirable skill on the part of Mr. Vuylsteke, and we do not doubt but that he values this odontioda far above any of the other valuable orchids which he possesses. We understand that the plant shows remarkable vigor, and that it carried thirty-two flowers as an inflorescence this season. W. N. Craig.

THE USE OF CYANIDE.

Referring to the discussion in the Review recently as to the precautions necessary in using hydrocyanic acid gas, I may say that the difference of opinion on the subject is probably due to the fact that, the gas being so very poisonous, those who best know its nature are inclined to be very conservative in their recommendations.

One fact should be clearly kept in mind. No person should attempt to enter a house or stay in it after the gas is liberated. A few seconds' exposure to the gas would cause painful results, even if it did not produce death. The gas acts quickly upon the nerves and would likely produce a more or less permanent paralysis if too much of it were inhaled, even though it might not cause instantaneous death. A few whiffs of the gas, such as would be obtained in glancing in a greenhouse door, might not be particularly dangerous, but then people are affected in different ways. Personally, I can stand a considerable quantity of this gas for a few seconds, but I know other people who are painfully affected by an exposure which does not harm me in the least. The same is true of insects. Some are quickly killed by small amounts; others are resistant, depending largely upon the secretions of the mucous membranes. If the nerves are close to the surface and easily reached by the gas, and the gas is quickly absorbed by the mucous membranes, the effect is quicker and more powerful.

It is not necessary to lower the cyanide into the acid by use of a string unless the jars are located so that the operator cannot get out of the house quickly. In our houses, when we have five or six jars to set off in two or three different paths, a man starts at the back of each path, a small manila paper sack containing the proper dose for each jar having been set beside the jar previously. Then the men walk together, dropping the sacks in at the same time, the man nearest the door waiting before setting off the last jar until the men farthest from the door drop their sacks, so that all can get out together. It takes from twenty to forty seconds for the acid to eat through the thin sacks. Then after the steam begins to come up from the jars it will be several minutes before the gas is distributed through the house. There is usually plenty of time to get out and close the doors without difficulty. Occasionally if a sack happens to have a tear in it or a break, the gas will come off rapidly.

If this system is followed, however, there will be no danger in dropping the sacks as suggested. In fact, one could hold his breath even in case of an accident—that is, if he knew enough to do so, and most people would. Those who did not would probably suffer the consequences. If one does breathe some of the gas, the saliva which forms in the mouth should not be swallowed, but should be expectorated for several minutes, and the mouth should be thoroughly rinsed out before anything is swallowed.

Where a house is not tight, it is possible that the recommendations as given by Mr. Scott, that is, using a small dose and leaving it in over night, might be safe, especially for more or less resistant plants with perfectly dry foliage. On the other hand, in tight houses and with such tender plants as the young growth on roses and lettuce, such a procedure would result in great injury. There are certain insects also which it is practically useless to attempt to kill with cyanide. One of these is the ordinary thrips and another is the red spider. While the adult thrips and the adult spiders will be killed, the young appear to be much more resistant.

The subject of the use of cyanide for fumigating various crops under varying conditions is well worthy of careful study and experimentation, and it is especially important that practical men using it should give exact statements as to the time of fumigation, the temperature of the houses, the plants to be treated, whether the foliage is wet or dry, whether in active growth or dormant, whether the houses are tight or not, the amount of cyanide used and the length of exposure. If attention is given to these details, the work can be reproduced accurately by others. A. F. Woods.

BORONIAS.

The hard-wooded boronias have by sheer merit forced their way into popular favor, and I can call to mind no plants possessed of such delicate and exquisite fragrance as Boronia megastigma, says a writer in the Gardeners' Magazine. The flowers, individually or collectively, are anything but showy, but this questionable defect is more than compensated for by the fact that a small plant will fill a large room with delicious perfume for many weeks. There are several species which claim attention, and I propose to offer a few remarks respecting them, but will first deal with their culture.

Any ordinary greenhouse in which a miscellaneous collection of plants is grown will suit the boronias, but they must have full exposure to light and sun, and a stuffy atmosphere must be avoided, though this latter does not generally obtain in the kind of structure indicated. For potting, sound fibrous peat must be employed, and fine particles should be excluded; add sand and fine charcoal, and pot firmly. The proper time for potting is immediately the plants have gone out of flower, and at the same time the plants may be pruned more or less severely according to their condition. After potting, a somewhat close and moist atmosphere will induce vigorous growth, and if a frame is available these conditions can be more satisfactorily carried out than in a house, and after the plants are furnished regularly with new growth additional ventilation may be given and ordinary greenhouse treatment follow.

Boronias may with safety be stood outside from June to the end of September. Select a good open position, plunge to the rim in coal ashes, and pay strict attention to watering. These plants are very impatient of excessive moisture at the root, and many are killed by it, but this is hardly likely to occur in summer outside, provided the pots are properly drained. In this connection I have been simply amazed at the prevalent ignorance on the simple but all-important point of drainage for plants in pots. Hundreds of plants are brought to me in the course of a year for examination, and I almost invariably find one very tiny piece of crock partially covering the hole, and, as a matter of course, the soil sour and repulsive.

From the time the plants are returned to the greenhouse until the season returns for exposure again is the most critical and important time. Great care must be paid to watering, and it must be remembered that plants assimilate water in proportion to their growth or amount of root action taking place, and also that the atmospheric conditions prevailing during the early part of the year do not tend to induce evaporation. Just sufficient water should be administered to keep the soil moderately moist. I have known plants destroyed by a too liberal use of fertilizers, and it is only permissible to give a very weak solution when the flowers are being developed, and I would not advocate their use at any other season.

Reverting for a moment to potting, I must utter a word of caution against the danger of over-potting; boronias are far better in small pots than large, and a 6-inch pot is large enough to grow and maintain in good health a fine specimen for many years. Some trade growers employ one-third part of loam in their potting compost, the remainder being made up of peat and sand, but I do not see any advantage from its use other than that of convenience and, probably, expense.

Next to Boronia megastigma in point of merit is B. heterophylla, a remarkably floriferous species, and although the flowers are not powerfully scented they are distinctly attractive, the color being bright carmine. A species that lasts long in beauty is B. serrulata, and it forms a capital little bush, naturally symmetrical and shapely, and it lasts in beauty a long time. The same remarks apply to B. Drummondi, and neither require severe pruning, though a timely pinching of the young growths that show a tendency to roam is desirable. B. Drummondi has white flowers, and in B. elatior we have rosy carmine represented, while B. pinnata is much like B. serrulata.

BONE FLOUR FOR LETTUCE.

Could I expect success in using bone flour in the soil for lettuce, in place of manure? In a solid bed how much would you advise, say on a bed 7x8 and 8 inches deep, well mixed with a soil of sandy loam? M. W. W.

I should not advise the use of ground bone for lettuce. Bone in any shape or form is apt to cause fungus growth, and this in all cases of lettuce growing must be avoided, as fungus diseases are one of the great troubles in the greenhouse culture of this subject. I find rotted cow manure the safest thing to use when applied to the soil just before the crop is planted, though I have used bone as a fertilizer for cauliflower, and planted lettuce as a second crop, having good success without applying any manure before planting the lettuce. Taking the cauliflower crop first gives time for the heat of the bone to work off, and enough substance is still left in the soil to supply all the nourishment required for lettuce. W. S. Croydon.

HYDROCYANIC GAS ON GRAPES.

Please let me know if hydrocyanic acid gas can be used strong enough with safety to the plant to kill thrips in a vinery. If so, how much do I need for a house containing 4,800 cubic feet of air space? If the acid gas is not satisfactory, what other remedy would you recommend, and how much for this house? H. A. S.

Hydrocyanic acid gas can not be used strong enough to kill thrips in a vinery without injury to the vines. I have experimented with it quite a little, and find that grapevines while in leaf are easily injured. I have, however, no trouble in keeping thrips off the vines by using tobacco stems pretty freely throughout the house. I tie the stems in bundles and lay these on the pipes, renewing them when the strength gives out.

The month of May seems to be the time when thrips are most likely to appear; therefore during this month I use extra care to see that the stems are kept fresh. I find that if the pests are kept out during May I am safe for the season. I am assuming that it is the large white thrips you have reference to, that being the only kind I have seen sufficiently numerous in a vinery to cause any serious trouble or damage. This pest, though known as thrips, is really a cicada which lives in the ground all winter, hatches out during May, and finds its way into the vinery through the bottom ventilators. Once established on the vines the insects multiply rapidly, quickly injure the foliage, and often have the fruit so dirty and spotted that it is unfit to send to the table.

Some twelve years ago I got a grapery in very bad condition from this insect. When I opened the door they would rise in a veritable cloud from the vines. I took hold of this grapery in July and could simply do nothing with it that season, but by thoroughly cleaning the following spring, and by the use of stems as above advocated, I have had no trouble whatever since.

SOIL STERILIZATION.

In recent publications of the Vermont Experiment Station, W. Stuart reviews the history of the development of the process of soil sterilization and gives the following brief account of his own experiments on the subject.

The serious nematode injury suffered by a crop of tomatoes grown in the station greenhouse in the winter of 1902-3 showed that the winter forcing of tomatoes and cucumbers could not be successfully accomplished there unless the soil was sterilized. Since the larger portion of the space devoted to these crops was occupied by solid beds, it was thought desirable to attempt sterilizing this soil in place. Three-inch tiles were sunk about ten inches below the surface of the soil. The lines of tile were laid every sixteen inches, each line being independent of every other and connected with the surface by a vertical section of tile. The ends of each line of tile were plugged with paper and soil. The upright was connected with the laterals by a hole drilled through the upper surface of the end tile over which it was securely cemented. The verticals were connected alternately at one end or the other of the laterals, thus permitting the live steam to be injected at opposite sides of the bed, and thus equalizing the diffusion of heat throughout the soil. Not only were the tile joints open, but each section of tile was perforated with a ¼-inch to a ½-inch hole through each side, the better to facilitate the escape of steam. Under a pressure of from forty to sixty pounds of steam, a section of bed, containing a surface area of nearly seventy square feet, could be heated up to about 210 degrees in approximately three hours' time. The surface of the soil being well covered with burlap, this temperature was maintained for a considerable period. In one case noted the thermometer stood at about 130 degrees twenty-four hours after treatment. This procedure proved in every case an effective remedy against nematodes and obviated the labor involved in treating the soil in a box or other specially constructed device. The tile once placed lie so deep that they need not be molested in digging over the beds or in changing the soil, and they are always ready for use in subsequent treatments of new soil. Then, too, the surface connection by means of vertical section afforded ideal soil aeration.

Since nearly 200 feet square of bench surface in one of the greenhouse rooms was fitted up for subwatering by means of galvanized iron pans and layers of porous bricks, the question arose as to whether it was feasible to sterilize the soil in these benches by injecting steam into the pan through the watering tube. A thorough trial of this scheme showed that while it was possible thus to sterilize soil it could hardly be called a practical method, as it took too much steam to do it. It was found that the injection of steam into a pan full of cold porous bricks resulted in a very considerable condensation of water, in fact, almost to the point of complete saturation of bricks and soil. In view of this experience it would seem to be more economical to employ a sterilization box for the treatment of soil in subwatered benches.

These trials therefore indicate that the first method described above, namely, sterilization of the soil in a solid bed, using 3-inch tiles laid ten inches deep and sixteen inches apart as steam conduits, is practical and involves less labor, although possibly requiring a greater volume of steam than would be necessary in treating the soil in a box or other specially constructed device. They also indicate that sterilization of the soil in place in beds subwatered by means of galvanized pans and layers of porous bricks is too wasteful of steam to be considered a practical method.

The experiments of the Vermont Station agree with those of the Massachusetts Station in showing that soil sterilization is an effective means of preventing or controlling some of the worst enemies of greenhouse plants. Professor Stuart considers it "one of the most important of the more recent developments of greenhouse technique" and believes that "on account of the severe injury so frequently caused by mematodes to tomatoes and cucumbers when grown under glass the sterilization of greenhouse soil has become almost a necessity when the soil is thus infested."

Japanese Tea Garden by Bemb Floral Co., Detroit.

A DETROIT TEA GARDEN.

The accompanying illustration shows the result of a rather unusual order received by the Bemb Floral Co., Detroit. The call was for the construction of a Japanese tea garden and as it was to be a permanent feature of the store in which it was erected, the builder, Albert Pochelon, was enabled to use only artificial and prepared flowers and foliage. The framework is made entirely of bamboo, using for decorative purposes, besides a number of variously shaped Japanese lanterns, purple beach, uva leaves and prepared phoenix leaves, the whole giving a very pretty effect. CONVENTION SPORTS.

In addition to the bowling tournament, for which elegant team and individual prizes have been provided, a suitable number of prizes will be provided for competition by the trap shooters. The skill of the florist shooters, having been exploited in this city, has called forth a challenge from one of our local clubs for a friendly team shoot, either five men or ten men teams. We hope that all florists skilled in this sport will bring their guns, so that we may qualify a team that will uphold our reputation and that will be able to hustle these local shooters, and there are some good ones. H. M. Altick, Chairman.

KIND WORDS.

At a meeting of the Florists' Club of Philadelphia on Monday, August 6, it was unanimously voted to invite the Society of American Florists to hold its convention of 1907 in the City of Brotherly Love.

POTTING LILIES.

In potting Easter lilies is it best to fill the pot to within an inch of the top, potting firmly, or is it best to fill the pot one-half or two-thirds with soil, leaving a place for mulching when needed? Would this encourage disease if not very carefully watered? J. H.

Some years ago we adopted the plan of keeping the soil in our lily pots two inches below the top of the pot, and when removing to the greenhouse filling up to the usual height with rich compost to feed the stem roots. We abandoned this plan because for several weeks it was difficult to tell whether you were giving too much water or too little. A better plan is to fill the pot to the usual height, but keep the bulb two inches below the surface and be rather sparing of water for the first month after potting, or until you see the leaves pushing through the soil. You will then know that root action has begun. Cover the surface of the soil of the newly potted lilies with some light material to keep the sun from parching the soil daily. W. S.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Cut flower trade has not improved and nothing is looked for until September 1. There was considerable funeral work last week and some of the florists were kept quite busy during the morning hours. Good cut stock continues scarce. A sudden call for any quantity would cause trouble in obtaining the stock at home.

Roses, as they come to the market, show the effects of the hot weather, being soft, especially Brides and Maids. It is a hard matter to get first-class Beauties in this weather. Carnations, too, are poor. Those in the market are from the field and are small. Pink and red are scarce.

The glut is on in asters, every house being loaded with them, and they are sold at low prices; $1.50 is top. Tuberoses and gladioli still are coming in heavily. Sweet peas are about over for this year. Little valley is to be had. Greens as usual.

Various Notes.

Gus H. Kirk, formerly with Stumpp & Walter Co., New York, called last week. He now is advance agent for Wilbur's attractions, but expects to be back in the business next fall.

W. J. Pilcher, of Kirkwood, visited J. F. Ammann at Edwardsville last week. He found the place in fine shape.

John Gibson, formerly in the employ of the North Floral Co. and now in business at Olney, Ill., called on the trade last week.

George Angermueller and Charles Schoenle were off on a fishing trip last week. They reported good luck.

Vincent Gorley, of Grimm & Gorley, was in a smash-up while out automobiling last week. The young lady with him, who is in his employ, was badly hurt.

The bedding in Forest park looks well, there being more of it this season than ever. Superintendent Ostertag says it will be increased from year to year.

At the club meeting Thursday afternoon a hot old time is expected over the election of officers, there being two or more candidates for each office. A large attendance is expected, as the younger element is out hustling to make this the banner meeting of the year. At least seven applications for membership will be presented at this meeting.

D. I. Bushnell, the seedsman, got back from his trip abroad last week and looks in the best of health.

William Winter, of Kirkwood, who spent a week visiting the different growers through Illinois, has returned much pleased with his trip.

Fred H. Meinhardt has not yet made known how the St. Louis delegation will go to Dayton. It looks as though we will have a large crowd.

I certainly have been well pleased with

CUTTING LILIES.

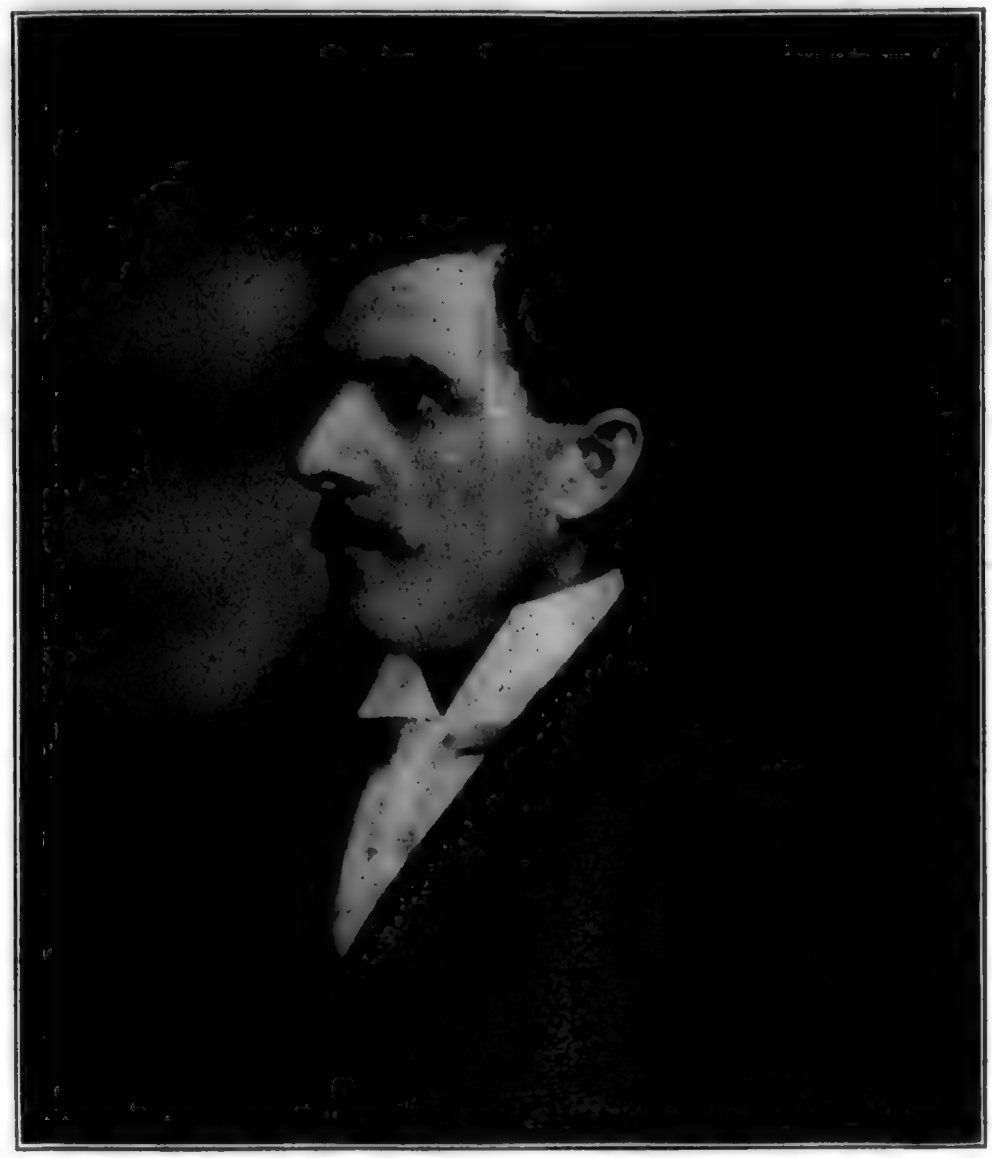
Kindly let me know regarding the cutting of hardy lilies where they are supposed to flower from year to year? Should the flowers be cut short or can one cut with good length of stem and expect them to do fully as well another year? J. H.

You should not cut the stems of lilies of any species lower than is necessary for the use you have for them. The more you cut of the stem, the more you weaken the bulb which is to give you the flower next year. It is quite different with a tulip, hyacinth or narcissus. The flower of these can be cut off close to the bulb because there is plenty of foliage left to nourish the bulb, but with a lily the stem is about all there is left at flowering time. W. S.

OBITUARY.

James Hartshorne.

The trade has lost one of its best-known, most popular and progressive men in the death of James Hartshorne, which took place at his home at Joliet at 2 o'clock on the afternoon of Monday, August 6. The news came as a shock to the craft, for he had been ill but a couple of days. He had complained, but it was not until Saturday that his illness took a serious turn, and a physician was summoned. The doctor diagnosed the trouble as appendicitis, and three specialists were called from Chicago. They considered an immediate operation the only hope, and performed it at midnight. It proved, however, that it was too late, for the patient grew steadily weaker until the end.



James Hartshorne was born at Shropshire, England, in 1869, coming to this country when only 19 years of age. He had received a good training in gardening, and, after landing at Boston, soon went to Exeter, N. H., to work on the estate of the late Charles Burley. Here he remained until he became convinced that Horace Greeley's advice was sound, and, following the star of empire, westward took his way. He came to Chicago the year before the World's Fair. He had intended to seek a share in the gardening work at the exposition, but found it expedient to enter the commercial ranks instead, and took a position with the late John C. Ure, where Mr. Hartshorne's skill enhanced the already fine reputation of the place for bedding plants, but particularly for carnations, which were grown in a not very extensive way, but on a large enough scale to permit him to show his especial skill with this flower. It was during this period that Mr. Hartshorne married Mr. Ure's daughter, who survives him, with five children.

In 1897 Mr. Hartshorne became gardener for Harlow N. Higinbotham, having charge at his city residence on Michigan avenue and also of the grounds at the country home near Joliet, where J. D. Thompson was manager of a farm of 1,500 acres. This was at the time when the carnation was in the first flush of its present popularity, and the success which was attending Mr. Hartshorne's work with the flower could have but one result: First Mr. Thompson and then Mr. Higinbotham became imbued with the gardener's enthusiasm. The organization of the Chicago Carnation Co. was the result, a fine range of glass being erected on the Higinbotham estate at Joliet, equipped with every facility for the production of high grade stock. How well it has served this purpose the entire trade knows. The Chicago Carnation Co. at once became one of the leading exhibitors of the country, carrying off prizes too numerous to mention, but almost always the most coveted trophies of every great exhibition. It is safe to say that to James Hartshorne, fully as much as to any other individual, is due the present development of the carnation as a florists' flower. By staging such fine stock he inspired in others a spirit of emulation which went farther than any work of the hybridizer to further the interests of the flower. There are today hundreds of growers of splendid flowers who were content to plod along producing indifferent quality until they saw the magnificent stock which resulted from Mr. Hartshorne's intensive culture. In the course of time Mr. Thompson withdrew and started for himself, as the Thompson Carnation Co.

The Chicago Carnation Co. has during its entire existence been a leader in the dissemination of new varieties. Several of Mr. Hartshorne's seedlings were sent out, as Marshall Field, Mrs. Potter Palmer, Mrs. Higinbotham, Harlowarden, Her Majesty, Illinois and others, but in recent years the apparently best sorts of other hybridizers have been handled. Cardinal was one of the first of these, followed by Fiancee, for which, Mr. Hartshorne has stated he paid $10,000 to F. Dorner & Sons Co. As to any of the varieties for which Mr. Hartshorne stood sponsor, if any failed to give satisfaction, it was to his keen regret. If enthusiasm in any case blinded his judgment it must be accepted in extenuation that never was a more hospitable welcome given than was accorded the visitor at Joliet, with full freedom of the place. Little wonder is it that "Jimmy's" sanguine nature usually proved infectious with visitors. At the time of his death he was engaged in putting out Aristocrat, raised by R. Witterstaetter, on which, it is asserted, the Chicago Carnation Co. staked a larger sum than changed hands on any other new sort. The company, besides doing a heavy trade in cuttings, ships cut blooms direct, has a stand in the store of the E. F. Winterson Co., Chicago, and produces a large line of stock for a handsome retail store in Joliet.

It was but natural that Mr. Hartshorne's work for the carnation should be recognized by its patron society in other ways than by the medals won by his exhibits. At the Brooklyn meeting in 1903 he was elected vice-president, and at the Detroit meeting in 1904 he was, by acclamation, elected president of the Carnation Society, presiding at the Chicago convention the year following. In 1899 he was elected president of the Chicago Florists' Club, and made an excellent officer. He was also a life member of the Society of American Florists, and was a member and active in all undertakings of the Horticultural Society of Chicago, the Chrysanthemum Society of America, the American Peony Society and the Illinois State Florists' Society. Mr. Hartshorne was a member of the Masonic fraternity, and at the same time he found leisure for the Elks in Joliet, and many are the pleasant hours visiting florists have put in at the Elks' Club under his guidance. Once a year at least the Chicago bowlers have gone to Joliet as his guests, and these were relaxations which will never be forgotten, although wholesouled Jimmy is gone. The last time most of the craft saw him in life was upon the occasion of the Florists' Club's picnic at Joliet, June 24, when his efforts contributed much to the pleasures of the day. There was a large delegation of the Chicago Florists' Club at the funeral at 2 p. m. Wednesday, August 8. The party, which went out on the 11:45 train, was the first sad one which ever journeyed to Joliet. The funeral was in charge of the Masons. Interment was at Oakwoods, Joliet. There were many flowers.

James Hartshorne.

James Weir, Jr.

James Weir, Jr., former president of the Brooklyn board of aldermen, and a member of the board of education, died on his yacht, Senta, at Shelter Island, N. Y., August 2. He was a florist, at 236 Twenty-fifth street, Brooklyn, and widely known on both sides of the East river. Mr. Weir's death was due to a ruptured heart.

Mr. Weir became a member of the Brooklyn board of education by appointment by Mayor Whitney in 1886. He had been elected an alderman in 1879, and had served until 1883, being president of the board in 1881. He was a former commodore of the Atlantic and Staten Island Yacht Clubs, and a director in several banks and trust companies. He was 62 years old, and leaves a widow, two daughters and a son.

Adam Kimbel.

Adam Kimbel, who made a fortune at landscape gardening, died at his home at St. Matthews, Ky., July 20, at the age of 85 years. His death was due to old age. Mr. Kimbel was born in Saxony, Germany, but came to Louisville in 1844. He was the father of five children, and his grandchildren number twenty. These latter were the especial delight of the old man, and he was never happier than when several were visitors at his country home. His wife died five years ago.

Mrs. R. Maitre.

Mrs. Christina Maitre passed away July 27. She had been in the florist business in New Orleans, with her husband, since 1857, and was the first woman to engage in the business there. She was probably better known among the Germans than almost any woman in the city. She was the wife of the late Reinhard Maitre and was a Miss Rehm. She was born in Bavaria and was 64 years old at the time of her death. When she came to New Orleans with her family she was but 2 years old. Mr. Maitre was at first gardener for James Robb and afterward for Burnside, at the place where the Newcomb college stands. They had a garden at Magazine and Foucher streets, and afterward the business was run by Maitre & Cook, the latter being Matthew Cook, the Carrollton florist. Mrs. Maitre and her husband moved to Carrollton in 1884, and lived on St. Charles avenue until recently. Mr. Maitre retired from business in 1893, and died in April, 1896.

The Maitres had a store on old Camp street years ago, then moved to 602 Magazine, and later built the place now occupied by the Lafayette Insurance Co., between Jackson and Josephine. Then they moved to a building on Camp street, near Canal, where the Morris building now stands, and after several years went to the Pickwick building, where they were at the time they retired from business.

MRS. LAWSON DEAD.

The estimable lady for whom the Mrs. Thomas W. Lawson carnation was named died at her home, near Boston, August 6.

WATERTOWN, S. D.—Wm. McNicol has built a house 22x100 and will grow carnations and lettuce. This is a cold country, the winter temperature sometimes going 40 degrees below zero.

THE ANNUAL SPECIAL

CONVENTION NUMBER

THE WEEKLY FLORISTS' REVIEW

To be Issued August 23

will be fully up to the previous Special Issues of this journal. Enough said.

Early Copy for special advertising is a great help in turning out a well printed paper. Why not send it now?

CHICAGO TO DAYTON.

The Chicago Florists' Club has concluded arrangements for the special train over the Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago & St. Louis R. R., leaving the Illinois Central passenger station, Twelfth street, Chicago, at 12:45 Monday noon, August 20, and due to arrive in Dayton, via Kankakee, Lafayette and Indianapolis, about 8:40 p. m., practically a daylight ride all the way. The train will consist of three or more new day coaches, one combination car, one dining car to serve luncheon and dinner a la carte.

The rate by the certificate plan for the round trip is only $9.70. The tickets are good on all trains August 17 to 23, and for the return trip the validated certificates will be honored up to and including August 31.

The Chicago Florists' Club cordially invites the florists of the northwest and southwest, delegates to the convention, to join this special train at Chicago Monday noon as above stated, and see that when they buy their tickets and secure their certificates that these tickets read via Big Four route from Chicago to Dayton.

Delegates who can join us at any point along our route are requested to do so. The committee will be glad to hear as early as possible from all who decide to join our party, so that the necessary arrangements can be made in time. Delegates buying tickets in Chicago will secure them at the city ticket office of the Big Four, 238 South Clark street, with certificates.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Department of Plant Registration.

Lager & Hurrell, Summit, N. J., submit for registration orchid seedling Lælio-Cattleya Lady Bernice (Cattleya gigas atropurpurea x Lælia purpurata). Flowers large, seven inches across, sepals and petals lilac with numerous and delicate mottles and veins of rosy purple superimposed, these accentuating more towards the tips of the petals. Lip wavy, two inches across, dark purple with a minute margin of rose. Lower part of throat with numerous yellow and reddish-brown longitudinal veins, upper part or sides of tube-orange yellow.

The name of W. F. Gude, Washington, D. C., can be added to the paper on "Recent Improvements in Retailers' Methods of Offering Flowers," in the program of the S. A. F. convention at Dayton, O., as essayist.

Wm. J. Stewart, Sec'y.

WELCOME, S. A. F.

By Bessie E. Dornbusch.

Comrades, come let's join together
Ere the season passes by;
Let us join our hands in friendship,
'Neath the summer's azure sky.
For we know you'll ne'er regret it;
Just our city once to see,
In its thriving wealth and beauty,
Is an opportunity.

And the art of horticulture
Draws us nearer to our God,
For there's beauty in the blossom
And there's rest within the sod,
And the heart and hand united
Is a joy you will admit.
We ask you to come and join us
In the bond of friendship.

DAYTON HOTELS.

The headquarters during the convention will be the Hotel Algonquin. All hotels are within one square of all streetcars, taking you to the exhibition grounds within ten minutes. We give here a list and prices of the leading hotels:

AMERICAN PLAN.

The Algonquin—From $2.50 to $5 a day; 300 guests.
The Beckel—From $3 to $4 a day; 200 guests.
The Phillips—From $2 to $2.50 a day; 150 guests.
Hotel Daytonia—From $1 to $1.50 a day; 100 guests.
The Aldine—From $1 to $1.50 a day; 25 guests.
The Vendome—$1.50 a day; 25 guests.

EUROPEAN PLAN.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

The demand has had a relapse, or perhaps it is that the receipts of summer flowers have become so heavy that the needs of the trade make little impression upon the daily arrivals. At any rate, the call for roses and carnations is not so brisk as a week ago. There are enough of each, and some to spare, of satisfactory summer quality. The receipts of roses are beginning to increase because of the cut from young plants. Some outdoor carnations also are coming in.

The glut of asters, gladioli and auratum lilies is something beyond all control. Strictly first-class asters are not abundant and occasionally some are seen which sell as high as $4 per hundred. But there are uncounted thousands of the low grade stock which are sold in job lots at whatever the buyer is pleased to offer. Murmuring is heard from discontented growers, who feel that this stock is not realizing what it should, but all are in the same boat. With gladioli it is the same, except that few are good enough to command special consideration. Auratum lilies were never more numerous.

There are a few good sweet peas and quite a number of short-stemmed flowers. Dahlias are in. Phloxes, snapdragon, gaillardia and other items in this class are equal to all requirements. Valley is not especially abundant. There is little call for green goods.

Wholesalers in general report fair total sales but low average prices.

The Poehlmann Plant.

The Poehlmann Bros. Co. has completed the new stack at Morton Grove. This is the biggest chimney for miles around, being 115 feet high and containing 1,200,000 bricks. At its foot are four water-tube boilers, two of 250 horse-power each and two of 200 horse-power each. Circulation of steam is made very rapid by the use of vacuum pumps.

The importance of the subject of heating, and the care with which it is studied by up-to-date growers, is shown by the fact that John Poehlmann, president of the company, states that their estimate of the cost of heating for the coming season is between $45,000 and $50,000. The enlarged plant will require retaining close to 125 men on the pay roll.

Various Notes.

F. W. Timme yesterday sailed from Baltimore on the Rhein to spend two months in Germany, Switzerland, France and Scotland. Mr. Timme has not been back to his birthplace since he left it fifty years ago. He says this is the first occasion on which he has had both the money and the leisure at the same time, and he could not let the opportunity slip.

Gus Lange is doing a nice summer business at his new store on Madison street. A vase of Killarney roses outside of the door with a sign, "25 cents a dozen," brings to mind the adage about the difficulty an old dog has in learning new tricks.

C. L. Washburn went to northern Wisconsin Tuesday to spend the balance of the week.

Auratum lilies have held the fort this week at Hunt's, the receipts having been in the thousands.

The Chicago Rose Co. has been having a special sale on florists' knives this week. They say a dollar in hand is worth two in knives in the safe.

Otto Goerisch, of the A. L. Randall force, is on a fortnight's vacation.

Leonard Kill says that all the visitors at Peter Reinberg's are favorably impressed with the new Mrs. Marshall Field rose. They are beginning to cut fine stems.

Wietor Bros. have had all their roses planted for some time and have about 80,000 carnations benched, practically half of the season's stock. They are cutting fine Beauties from young plants.

Mr. and Mrs. C. W. McKellar have returned from a few days spent at Paw Paw Lake.

Kruchten & Johnson are handling phloxes, among other outdoor stock, and report a good sale to retailers who want something bright for the store windows.

Zech & Mann are handling a big lot of lancifolium lilies of fine quality.

E. F. Winterson has returned from a two weeks' course at Dr. Riley's sanitarium near Mt. Clemens, a place recommended to him by the Breitmeyers. His rheumatism was much benefited.

John Enders, of the Poehlmann Bros. Co., is on a fortnight's vacation in Wisconsin. While Otto Frese was resting he visited the Poehlmann greenhouses, the first time he had been there since he became connected with the firm. He thinks it worthy of record.

The Benthey-Coatsworth Co. reports a satisfactory July business because of its heavy rose cut. After the convention F. F. Benthey will spend a few days with his brother at New Castle.

J. A. Budlong is beginning to cut quite heavily from young Beauties, Brides and Maids. The latter are largely grafted stock this year and the firm's success with them will be a matter of interest to all growers.

George Reinberg expects to have his entire place replanted this week. The carnations are being housed rapidly. All stock looks good.

The Kennicott Bros. Co. reports July as excellent in point of total sales. Prices have been low, but the aggregate is well up to last year, when July was an exceptionally good month.

Vaughan & Sperry are busy taking stock. They are well satisfied with the year which ended August 1, but look forward to much better things for the coming season.

Percy Jones is making preparations to extend his business this season. Visits to his growers, he says, show young stock in excellent shape.

John Sinner is preserving his fishing complexion by spending a part of each afternoon at work in the greenhouses. Just now they are busy repainting.

Weiland & Risch are cutting lightly at present, but Killarney is coming in nicely. They have a handsome new cover design for their periodical price-list this fall.

E. C. Amling reports July business ahead of even last July, which he says is cause for much satisfaction. Probably the Beauty crop did it, but he is handling great quantities of summer flowers.

W. J. Smyth is at his summer home at Antioch, coming in one or two days a week to see how they are progressing with the work of remodeling and redecorating at the store.

The Koropps, Leopold and Henry, in Lake View, report trade quiet but feel satisfied with the last year.

Charles Balluff, of the Eaton store on Jackson boulevard, has had a fortnight's vacation. C. H. Grant, formerly with J. H. Small & Son at New York, is now a member of the Eaton staff.

July was right on the weather office's average for the last thirty-six years, in point of temperature, but in rainfall it was 1.15 inches ahead of the average. Nevertheless we are 4.64 inches short of the normal rainfall to date this year.

Notice of the death of James Hartshorne appears elsewhere in this issue.

Club meeting tonight.

Visitors.

Among the week's visitors were D. C. Noble, Columbia City, Ind.; Wm. Graff, Columbus, O.; C. S. Ford, Philadelphia; Ed. Calvert, Lake Forest, Ill.; J. C. Steinhauser, Pittsburg, Kan.; Fred Lemon, Richmond, Ind.; G. Klopfer, of the Cation Greenhouse Co., Peoria, Ill.; W. L. Rock, Kansas City;

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Old St. Swithin has been busy of late in demonstrating the old superstition as to rain and has made a remarkable record.

Every day for three weeks the skies have leaked and several of the watery downfalls have been floods. We have been soaked with them, and with unbearable humidity, until business begins to feel the paralysis and complaint is general. Outside vegetation thrives, however, in our porous soil, and the market gardeners especially have crops that will bulge their bank accounts this fall.

Following the excessive rains, the heat on Sunday reached nearly 100 degrees. New York isn't such an attractive spot in the dog-days after all. But everybody in the florists' business has been, is, or will be away for a time, to the adjacent mountains, and we can reach them in three directions, the Catskills, the Orange and the Ramapo hills, within an hour.

The shipments of cut flowers increase daily, and for summer the quality is superb. Roses especially are improving, Beauties and Kaiserins particularly, and carnations begin to show a return to form, as the horsemen among the wholesalers express it. It is remarkable what an interest in the noble animal has developed during the last month, and in some cases quite a little principal as well. Now that we are to have no real flower show this fall, and the cut flower business is asleep, something has to be done to prevent complete dissolution.

The cactus dahlias are here, beauties and lots of them. Asters simply overwhelm the market with their abundance, and gladioli, well—I saw a quarter of a million of them one day last week, and so it seems to be every day, with everybody handling them and prices sometimes unmentionable, though here good stock of anything never goes unappreciated.

Various Notes.

Poughkeepsie violet plants do not seem to have suffered from the announced disease that was reported from further north, a letter from Philip Devoy this week announcing the stock never so promising as now.

Benjamin Hammond, of Fishkill, maintains his reputation for oratory and authorship, an interesting letter in the New York Press last week bringing him again into the favorable limelight. Mr. Hammond will be at Dayton with several other horticultural lights from up the Hudson. We expect our special convention cars to be filled and to pick up a lot of enthusiasts from Boston, Utica, Syracuse, Rochester and Buffalo on the way. New York state will contribute over 100 to the record crowd that will overflow the city of wide streets and proverbial hospitality. The steamer trips from Cleveland to Buffalo and Albany to New York, which the tickets privilege, and the stopover at the Falls, giving all an opportunity to visit Toronto, all appeal to the eastern conventionists and the interest grows daily as the great reunion draws near. Only two weeks from today and it will be "all aboard!" Walter Sheridan is booking berths rapidly now and delay in securing accommodations is unwise, especially by the fat men who find upper berths unattractive. The crowd leaves here at 2:04 p. m. Monday, August 20, from the Grand Central depot, Forty-second street, and 2:05 will be too late.

George Allen, son of J. K., is back from a two weeks' holiday at Port Monmouth, N. J.

Mr. Casey, of the Boston Rosary, was a recent visitor.

W. H. Gunther and family are at Seagirt, N. J.

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Guttman will enjoy a trip on the Great Lakes in advance of the Dayton convention, which they will attend.

Ex-President Traendly has been gathering strength for his official duties at Dayton by daily recuperation at the seashore, and is in fine condition for whatever may happen in August.

A. Moltz is still in the mountains.

J. J. Perkins' son manages the express business of the house and three fine horses have just been added to the equipment.

Max Limprecht is still alive, but there is no hope of ultimate recovery.

William Ford leaves next week for a two weeks' rest in the Alleghanies.

The severe illness of A. Warendorff culminated in an operation for appendicitis in Mt. Sinai hospital on Saturday morning. The latest reports as to his condition were favorable, but his participation in the Averne floral festivities is now impossible.

John Reese, manager of the floral department of Abraham & Strauss, Brooklyn, has the sympathy of the trade in the death of the father of Mrs. Reese on Friday.

The seventy-fifth fair of the American Institute will be held September 25 to 27, at the Berkeley Lyceum building, New York city, and the annual exhibition of chrysanthemums in the same hall November 7 to 9, and these will constitute the shows which New Yorkers will have to be satisfied with in 1906. Macey's exhibition hall, utilized in 1905 and 1904, and Madison Square Garden are not available this year.

Alex. McConnell sent some very handsome floral designs to the funeral of the late Russell Sage.

Some very handsome offerings from city officials and the family were seen at the funeral of the late James Weir, Jr. on Saturday. Mr. Weir was born in England in 1843, and has lived over sixty years in Brooklyn. In 1856 he began the florists' business. He was a member of many financial institutions and social organizations, the F. & A. M. and Shelter Island Yacht Club, the Crescent Athletic and Staten Island Yacht Club among them. He was an alderman, member of the board of education and of the general committee of the democratic party. He was universally esteemed and had a wide circle of friends who mourn his sudden death. He was stricken at the helm of his yacht during the races between the Rhode Island, Hartford, Sachems Head and Shelter Island Yacht clubs. The cause of death was rupture of the blood vessels of the heart. Mr. Weir leaves a widow, a son and three daughters. The flags of all vacation schools have been placed at half mast. Mr. Weir's florist business was one of the largest in the east. It will be continued by his son.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

There is very little that is encouraging to report about business conditions in the cut flower market. The extremely hot weather has had a bad effect both on the quality of the flowers coming into town and on the demand. Asters are plentiful; the poorer ones can be had at extraordinarily low figures in job lots. This has had an effect on the price of the better grade, which has fallen twenty-five per cent. Choice New England roses are not the factor that they were two weeks ago. Their place will soon be taken by a new crop of homegrown Beauties. The tea roses are not very good just now. There seems more demand, with possibly less supply, for carnations than any other flower, as good stock usually moves at sight. Valley is in fair supply, and sells tolerably well. Gladioli are a feature now. Outdoor flowers are showy, Golden Glow and the white Hydrangea paniculata being prominent.

Club Affairs.

The Florists' Club of Philadelphia will leave for Dayton, Monday, August 20, the hour and route to be announced later. The fare will be $26.07 on the certificate plan. The members have unanimously decided to invite the convention to Philadelphia in 1907.

Recent Importations.

Review readers were given last week a few of the many new ideas in the shape of florists' supply novelties now coming into the warehouses of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., in this city. Mr. Bayersdorfer kindly consented to continue his chat about these novelties for a few minutes one afternoon this week. The screen idea brought out so successfully last year has been improved on two lines this season. The screens come singly in various heights from four and one-half to seven feet, being arranged so that they can be readily fastened together, making a continuous screen to any length desired. They may be tersely described under two heads, the rich man's, very elaborate, and the poor man's, a simple screen. Both are excellent. The samples of many-colored straw for baskets are pleasing. The color combinations include some striking effects in yellow and old gold, bronze, silver, and many colors. Some pretty hampers for cut flowers are made of two-colored straw, a darker and a lighter shade of the same color, usually pink, being most effective. The improvements in the quality of Porto Rican mats is marked, the newer productions having a much more finished appearance than those we are accustomed to using.

The gem of the whole collection, so far, is the new colored toneware. The artistic styles and shapes familiar to many in the Pompeian toneware, and to a few in the natural toneware, are enhanced by the glowing colors of this new claimant for popular favor. Mr. Bayersdorfer is to be congratulated on securing the exclusive privilege for this country of distributing these showy vases.

To Err is Human.

I seem fated in describing baseball games to call forth the divine quality in others. Possibly this is due to an excess of work preventing my joining the fans in the peanut gallery; or, possibly, I had no invitation. Be that as it may, the following correction from H. H. Battles is accepted with proper humility:

I have not a copy of The Review before me, but as I read your report of the baseball game, it seemed that you gave me the credit of providing the "hospitality." I guess you meant the edibles and soft drinkables. Will you please correct the statement? My employees accepted the challenge, provided the refreshments and won the game against possibly the strongest team of florists ever brought together in the United States.

Edward Reid leaves for the south on Friday, August 10.

The Keller Pottery Co., of Norristown, Pa., reports a healthy increase in the demand for its wares. Azalea pans, especially 7-inch, have made marked strides in popular favor.

Matthew Phaw, carnation grower of note for Robert Craig & Sons, has accepted a position with John A. Shellem. We may look for some fine results at this place next season.

Visitors in town, reported by M. Rice & Co., are: C. B. Mills, Jacksonville, Fla.; Mr. Jack, with A. C. Brown, Springfield, Ohio.

Bowling.

With the hope of lulling the members of the other bowling teams into fancied security, the REVIEW has held aloof from local bowlers so far this season. Civic pride now demands that an active interest be taken in this great sport in which our bowling team has won so proud a place at almost every convention. A spirited contest has been taking place for the last few weeks between the leading bowlers of the Florists' Club. A series of twelve games was first rolled to determine the men from whom our team at Dayton was to be selected. Then followed a series of five matches, each match to consist of three games, two, I think, on home, and three on outside alleys. Four of these matches have been rolled, and the fifth will be rolled the end of this week. Following are the scores by matches of their games:

Answers to Correspondents.

Review readers are invited to send any questions relating to culture or marketing of plants and flowers in Philadelphia, to Phil, in care of the leading seed or commission houses or the Flower Market. Each question will be submitted to a competent person and answered under number. Correct name and address must always accompany inquiry, but will not be published.

55.—My yearly pay roll amounts to twenty-two per cent of my gross receipts. How does that compare with other growers?

It is difficult to make a fair comparison unless the same class of stock is grown, and size of place. In a general way it may be said that twenty-two per cent is low. (Growers are invited to compare, stating the class of stock grown.) To avoid confusion on the above point, the following case is pertinent: A grower spends $100 a year on labor on every 1,000 square feet of glass, realizing therefor $400. His neighbor spends $150 a year on every 1,000 square feet of glass, and his gross receipts are $500. The first man's pay roll is twenty-five per cent of gross receipts, but he only has $300 per 1,000 square feet of glass for his other expenses and his profit, while his neighbor, who is spending thirty per cent on his pay roll, has $350 per 1,000 square feet for the same purpose. PHIL.

CLEVELAND.

Friends of the flower in all sections of the country are looking forward with great interest to the gladiolus contest to be held at Euclid beach, in the old log cabin, August 15 to 19, under the auspices of the Euclid Avenue Gardeners' Club.

This is the first contest of the kind to be held in this section and its purpose is to determine which are the best varieties of gladioli for amateurs to grow. Growers of the flower from all parts of the United States have promised to take part in the contest, but no person will be permitted to enter an exhibit except those who have produced new varieties.

The Euclid Avenue Gardeners' Club, which is to conduct the contest, was organized about one year ago and is composed of about twenty-five residents of Euclid avenue and their gardeners. The officers are: Arthur G. Babcock, president; Henry C. Loomis, secretary; George H. Humphrey, assistant secretary; Joe H. Kuzell, treasurer; Edwin S. Babcock, assistant treasurer.

The awards for the winning varieties of gladioli at the contest will be records of merit issued by the Gardeners' Club. The judges are to be selected from among the best florists of the country.

In the evening of the first day an address on gladioli will be delivered in the old log cabin by Matthew W. Crawford, of Cuyahoga Falls.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Business remains in a half comatose condition. Very little good material comes in, but plenty of poorer grades. Roses sell at practically any price which may be offered. Extreme prices are 50 cents and $6 per hundred. Good carnations are scarce and bring $1.50 to $2 per hundred. Inferior grades run down to 50 cents. Asters are now abundant. The best bring $1, but poorer stock sells at 25 cents per hundred and even lower. Sweet peas, owing to the continuous rain and humid atmosphere, have been of little value.

Gladioli are good, at last week's prices, and are useful for window ornamentation, these and pond lilies being among the leading flowers used at present for that purpose. A few tuberoses are coming in. Gypsophila is over, but there is a good supply of other cheap material.

Exhibition.

There was an excellent show at Horticultural hall on August 4, it being prize day for phloxes, herbaceous plants and annuals. There were fine displays of these. For not less than 100 vases of annuals M. Sullivan, gardener to W. Whitman, won with a well arranged and representative collection. Wm. Thatcher, gardener to Mrs. J. L. Gardner, was second, Mrs. E. M. Gill third. Blue Hill Nurseries won for thirty varieties herbaceous plants with a fine table, the best seen at a Boston show for a long time. For twelve varieties of perennial phloxes prizes went to T. C. Thurlow & Son, W. Whitman, H. A. Stevens Co. and W. C. Winter, in order named. Some of the best phloxes staged were R. P. Struthers, Le Cygne, Lumineux, Blue Hills, Monatiquot, Saison Lierval, Eugenie Danzanvilliers, Pyramide, Coquelicot, Flambeau, Esperance, Simpton, Richard Wallace and Amphitryon.

Honorary displays of phloxes came from T. C. Thurlow & Son, Blue Hill Nurseries, Longwater Gardens, E. L. Dwyer and others. There was a grand show of dahlias, which filled several tables, from Joseph Thorpe, W. G. Winsor, A. E. Johnson, Towles Dahlia Gardens, W. W. Rawson & Co., W. C. Winter and Mrs. J. B. Lawrence. The damp summer has suited dahlias and a grand display will be forthcoming at the annual September show. General displays were made by Blue Hill Nurseries, Mrs. A. W. Blake, J. L. Smith gardener; E. L. Lewis, W. Whitman, Mrs. E. W. Gill and Mrs. J. B. Lawrence.

Blue Hill Nurseries received a first-class certificate for Gypsophila paniculata flore pleno, which will prove a first-class florists' flower. They also showed Aster amellus Perry's Favorite and a blue delphinium. Lager & Hurrell were awarded honorable mention for Vanda teres Miss Agnes Joachin. They also showed two Lælia elegans. E. L. Dwyer received honorable mention for Heuchera brizoides. C. W. Parker had splendid spikes of Lilium superbum and hybrid tea roses. Robert Cameron, from the Harvard Botanic Gardens, had a magnificent display of annuals and perennials in 250 varieties filling 200 feet of table, which made a whole show in themselves.

BIG FOUR ROUTE

...CHICAGO TO DAYTON, OHIO...

AUGUST 20th, 1906

Leave Chicago Illinois Central Depot, 12th and Michigan Avenue, 12:45 p. m. Monday, August 20th. Arrive Dayton about 8:55 p. m. Elegant coaches and dining car. A general good time is assured enroute. Send your name at once to the committee if you contemplate joining the party. J. C. Vaughan, W. N. Rudd, Geo. Asmus, Committee on Transportation.

Ticket Office, 238 Clark Street, CHICAGO.

I. P. SPINING, General Northern Agent.

There was the customary good display of fruits, vegetables and fungi.

At the next show, on August 18, asters, gladioli and phloxes will be the principal floral features. The annual exhibition of plants, flowers, fruits and vegetables will take place September 5 and 6.

Various Notes.

T. D. Hatfield, of Wellesley, has been chosen to succeed James Wheeler as a member of the plant and flower committee of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society.

B. J. McGinty has resigned his position as head salesman for N. F. McCarthy & Co. and is now selling for several growers at the Music Hall Market.

F. T. White, Sr., is at Scituate on a fishing trip.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Penn are spending a vacation at Portland, Me.

Little convention talk is heard and at this time it does not look as though Boston would send a large delegation. If weather conditions prove more pleasant than they have been for a month, more of the craft may decide to go to Dayton. No one feels inclined to travel far inland as climatic conditions are at present.

July gave us only five clear days and six and a half inches of rain. August started in with four damp, sunless days and does not look like improving much on the preceding month's record. It has been tedious for haymaking, but lawns never looked more beautiful than this season, and vegetation generally is luxuriant.

DETROIT.

The Market.

Business seems to have picked up some, despite the warm weather. Roses are quite scarce, Maids seeming almost extinct. Carnations are also scarce, and are hardly ever called for. Asters are plentiful, but not of extra fine quality. Sweet peas are short-stemmed.

Club Meeting.

The annual meeting of the Detroit Florists' Club was held at the club room in the Cowie building, August 1, 1906, and was well attended. The election of officers was held, and three were re-elected to serve another year, namely: William Dilger, as president; J. F. Sullivan, as secretary; and Walter Taepke, as treasurer. E. A. Scribner was elected vice-president, and William Brown librarian.

Treasurer Taepke made an exceptionally large haul, erasing a good sum of dues from the books.

Mr. Olschefski was unanimously elected a member of the club.

Vice-president-elect Scribner spoke of the necessity of providing more entertainment for the members, in the shape of essays or lectures, in order to assure a still larger attendance.

A vote of thanks was extended William Brown for his services rendered the club as chairman of the entertainment committee; the success of the outing was mostly due to his efforts.

A motion was made to hold the meetings at the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange, and on a rising vote being taken, it was decided to do so after the expiration of the present quarter, October 1. The Michigan Cut Flower Exchange has very kindly turned over a large room in its quarters to the use of the club, light, heat and all being free of charge.

Detroit to Dayton.

At the club's last meeting the members were urgently requested to attend the coming convention. The fare for the round trip being only $5.80, every one can afford to and should attend; in fact, we owe it to our brethren in Dayton to turn out in large numbers, as they have made a special effort to have this meeting outclass all others.

In procuring tickets do not fail to ask for the certificate entitling you to a return trip at one-third the regular rate. This certificate, after being validated by the S. A. F. secretary, is good to return three days after the convention, not including Sunday.

The bulk of the delegation of about twenty-five from Detroit will leave on the 12:35 noon train, Monday, August 20, over the C., H. & D., arriving at Toledo at 2:10 p. m., and due at Dayton at 6 p. m., and will make their headquarters at the Phillips Hotel.

Various Notes.

The aster disease is again getting in its deadly work in this section of the country.

Albert Pochelon is advertising his automobile for sale. E. A. Scribner, an auto enthusiast, feels sorry that Albert has gone back on his horseless carriage.

A disastrous fire recently visited Breitmeyers' Mt. Clemens place, burning four horses and destroying a large, practically new barn.

The daughter of Frank Holznagle is seriously ill at Harper's Hospital. The florists extend their deepest sympathy.

Fred Pantke has just recovered from a three weeks' siege of sickness.

The club will be represented at the convention by a strong bowling team.

Visitors are S. Freund, representing Hummel & Downing, of Milwaukee; and Mrs. E. C. Smith, of Colorado Springs, Col. H. S.

The Market.

The market the last two weeks has been practically featureless. A visit to the different stores invariably impressed one with the scarcity of stock; most of that to be seen is not of first-class quality.

Brides and Maids of good quality are scarce. Chatenay perhaps bears the best flowers and stems. The white and pink of other varieties are small of bud and foliage. Mildewed Beauties are also seen, most of the growers having thrown them out, and it is almost impossible to get many of long stems, although a few good medium and short stems are seen. Carnations, that is, good ones, manage to bring a fair price, although most of the stock has short stems and small flowers. Asters are coming in now in quantity and are taking the place of carnations. Outdoor stock of all kinds is arriving in good qualities. Sweet peas are coming in large quantities and are of good quality, but the price is low, as many people have their back yards full of them. The average price is 10 to 20 cents per hundred. Shasta daisies are more satisfactory, and are of good quality. Gladioli are also fine; choice stock retails for $1 per dozen and makes a fine window display.

Various Notes.

A. C. Sinram has opened a new store on Arapahoe street, corner of Sixteenth. He was formerly with the Elitch Gardens Co.

One happy feature of the Elks' parade was the throwing of flowers and snowballs at the marchers as they passed by, the snow coming from the Moffat Railroad Co., sixty miles from Denver, and the flowers from the different florists here.

Miss Gertrude E. Page, secretary of the Park Floral Co., has returned from an extended vacation, via Chicago and the lakes to New York and Boston.

W. W. Wilmore, the dahlia specialist, has returned from an extended trip, visiting Philadelphia, Buffalo and his old home.

Quite a number of the florists are going to Colorado Springs to attend the El Paso County Horticultural Society's show August 22 to 24. Some are going as exhibitors and others as judges.

It is yet uncertain how many of the craft will attend the convention at Dayton. As yet none have engaged transportation, but State Vice-president J. A. Valentine never misses a meeting.

George H. Cooper, with the Park Floral Co., is away on vacation.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., Henry W. Wood, Richmond, Va.; First Vice-Pres., Charles Burge, Toledo, O.; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland. The 25th annual meeting will be held at New York City, June, 1907.

D. I. BUSHNELL, St. Louis, has returned from a European trip.

HEAVY hail in Champaign county, Ohio, July 27, did considerable damage to corn growing for seed purposes.

EVERETT DAVIS states that the Davis-Elton Realty Co., St. Louis, is no longer interested in the seed business.

S. D. DYSINGER, formerly of St. Paul and later at Chicago, will make a trip to the Pacific coast before assuming a new connection.

THE Louisville onion set harvest is completed and the product as reported by the majority of the growers is one-half of what it was last year.

IF it were not for the exhilarating uncertainty as to what this or that crop is going to pan out, these hot days would be dull for the average seedsman.

THE Michigan bean fields are reported as suffering from lack of rain and the New York crop rusting badly from an oversupply of it. These conditions ought to put prices up a notch or two.

IT has been remarked that little dependence can be placed upon crop reports; still the man who is willing to take even a blind crack at an object is more interesting than the one who won't shoot at all.

IT is reported that the seed department of the largest of the Chicago general mail order houses did a business of $90,000 in three months this spring. It was exclusively mail trade and mostly for small amounts.

ONION seed for future delivery is not bringing as good prices as conditions would warrant. There is said to be a good crop at Louisville this year, but as the product of that section is only used at home, and mostly for sets, it should cut little figure.

THE canners are likely to be in the market for unusual quantities of peas for next season's seed, as the early pack, especially in New York, turned out short and the late varieties are giving an even lighter yield for the packers. Wisconsin canners also report light packs.

THE department of agriculture has issued, as Farmers' Bulletin No. 254, a pamphlet entitled "Cucumbers," by L. C. Corbett, horticulturist in charge of the Arlington experimental farm. The growing of cucumbers, both in the open and under glass, is fully described, and all seedsmen and growers will find in it much of interest.

A MAN who is an enthusiast in his business usually has the faculty of imparting some of his enthusiasm to others. So it is with Henry Field, of Shenandoah, Ia. Every little while he gathers the newspaper men of his town and takes them to see some new thing at his place, or a bed of flowers, telling the papers to invite the public. So he has a steady stream, or at least a rill, of visitors through his trial ground at Sleepy Hollow.

IT is generally believed that not much in the way of French-grown radish seed is being carried over by the American seed houses. This, in view of the reported shortage of the coming crop, will be a handicap to those who bank on French-grown seed for their market garden trade.

VISITED CHICAGO:—Max Wilhelmi, of the Barteldes Seed Co., Lawrence, Kan., on his annual tour of inspection of the onion set fields; A. E. McKenzie, Brandon, Manitoba; Mr. Parks, of Peter Henderson & Co., New York; Charles Johnson, author of the Seedsman's Assistant, representing Daniff & Son, French seed growers.

HARRISII BULBS.

A large handler of Harrisii says that while it is undoubtedly true that more bulbs have arrived from Bermuda than came last year, still it does not in the least alleviate the troubles of the importers, who have generally booked orders to a greater total than that of the year before. In addition, it is a fact that the 7x9 size and larger show a falling off, the increased production being in the small bulbs. This importer writes that some houses will no doubt be unable to fill orders for the larger sizes and that the urgency of the calls sent to Bermuda has resulted in the shipment of considerable stock which will not improve the reputation of the island's product. It is further stated that the demand promises to keep large sizes scarce next year, so that the booking of advance orders is likely to be done with greater caution.

EUROPEAN SEED NOTES.

This is the seedsman's quiet time, and retail houses are mostly engaged in endeavoring to get their money in for goods sold in the spring. In England at least this will prove an easier task than for several previous years, as the trade in England generally is much better for all classes, and money is not so tight. The wholesale houses are mostly engaged in roguing and getting the premises cleaned up ready for future harvest deliveries, and their representatives are preparing to take their annual journey getting orders.

It is very satisfactory to report that favorable weather continues, warm with occasional showers, and this is causing most crops to continue to improve. There is some talk of mildew in onion, which may or may not be serious. B. J.

HARVEST DAYS.

It is an impressive sight to see the harvest of onion sets in full swing in the district north of Chicago, and gives as perhaps can be given in no other way an idea of the magnitude of the business as it is conducted by Chicago's principal growers. All the help possible to procure is put at work, and for the last week the following advertisement has appeared in Chicago daily papers:

PLENTY OF GOOD, HEALTHY, OUTDOOR work for men, women, boys, and girls, on our 700-acre garden; good pay every night; train for our farm leaves Clybourn Junction on C. & N. W. R. R., Clybourn-pl. and Wood-st., every morning at 6:17, returning at quitting time; or take Lincoln-av. electric cars to Foster-av.; fare, 5c either way. L. A. BUDLONG & CO., Lincoln-av. and West Foster-av.

The same train carries workers for the Leonard Seed Co., A. L. Jones, Knud Gundestrup and others in that vicinity. It carries often a thousand people, who go into the fields after sets, or to do the work of the market gardeners with whom the district abounds. The sets are gathered in half-bushel baskets and as each basket is turned in the inspector calls out the worker's number, from which a checker makes a record from which payment is made in silver at 6 o'clock every night. The line to the paymaster is a long one, but payment to the hundreds of workers, each one with numbered check in hand, is made in a few minutes.

GERMAN SEED CROPS.

In the vicinity of Quedlinburg the spring was cold and wet, which rendered the planting of most of the root and bulb crops, such as carrots, chicories, beets, turnips, swedes, mangels, winter radishes, onions, etc., and the early sowings of lettuces, spinach, spring and summer radishes, onion, leek and the various open-ground-sown annual flower seeds very difficult and later than usual. The first part of May, when most of the annual and perennial flowers raised under glass are planted out in the open ground, was unusually dry and windy, and caused many blanks in the plantations, and made the starting of the young plants very difficult. The planting during the latter part of that month in many instances could not be done in the usual proper way owing to the heavy rains that made the soil muddy and unfit to work on for days. The weather during the whole of June, alternative rain and sunshine, was favorable to the growing seed crops, and brought them a good deal forward, though they are at present about a week or two behind the usual time.

The harvested crops: Corn-salad, good; turnips and forget-me-not (Myosotis alpestris varieties), middling and pretty good.

The present state of growing crops is: Beans, dwarf or kidney and runner, partly good, partly middling, and the delicate varieties below middling; beetroots, carrots, cress, chervil, chicory, leek, lettuces, onions, parsley, parsnips and radishes, good; peas, round-seeded varieties, good; wrinkled marrow varieties, middling; cabbage, white, red and savoy, kohlrabi and spinach, middling and pretty good; cucumber, ridge varieties, have seriously suffered from the unfavorable weather and stand rather thin; mangels, sugar beets and swedes, partly good and partly middling.

Pansies, although they look very well, the yield of the crop appears to turn out below middling owing to frequent heavy rains that caused part of the flowers to pass away without setting seed. Stocks, wallflowers, asters, larkspurs, balsams, carnations, mignonette, nasturtiums, sweet peas, snapdragon, scabious, Canterbury bells, sweet william, sweet sultan, Chinese pink (Dianthus Chinensis and varieties), lobelias, lupins, helichrysum, marigold, petunias, polyanthus, violets, zinnias and the miscellaneous flowers are partly good and partly middling, while hollyhocks and Drummondii phlox stand rather thin.

Of principal pot-grown flower seeds, stocks, annual, autumn and winter, double wallflowers, large-flowered petunias, begonias, calceolarias, cinerarias, cyclamen, gloxinias, Primula Chinensis and obconica, pelargoniums, etc., are partly good and partly middling.

On the whole, the present state of the growing seed crops may be considered as satisfactory. H. T. J.

SEED IMPORTS.

CROPS IN ESSEX, ENGLAND.

At one time the outlook was unsatisfactory, owing to the cold spring, but during the first few weeks crops have improved greatly. With a few exceptions there is promise of a fair average harvest.

Early peas, medium; second early, promise well; late varieties have blight, which came over the district at the beginning of July, and some varieties will be short, and as stock seed of some of the choice sorts was scarce last year and small acreage planted, prices will rule high for peas of Gladstone type. Broad beans, not so large an acreage, nor looking so well as last year. Scarlet runners are grown very extensively in Essex, and are now in full bloom, looking well; the showers have been very beneficial in helping to set the bloom. Beet is a small acreage, crop improved the last three weeks. Broccoli, brussels sprouts, cabbages, and savoys are a small acreage owing to dry summer of 1905, unable to put any plants out till September, when very small proportion run to seed; crop will be very light. Carrot and parsnip looking fair. The cold spring kept radishes back, but they have now got together and are looking fair. Of turnip and swede a very small acreage was planted and there will be a light crop; large acreage had to be ploughed up early in spring; prices will be high. Mangel is extensively grown in Essex, the land being specially adapted; acreage not so large as last year; the plants for some time looked very bad, but last three weeks improved very much; medium crop.

Nasturtiums are extensively grown in this district, one firm turning over about 500 bushels yearly; at present they are looking well; the light-leafed varieties promise a good average crop, but it depends on the weather we have for gathering; they have all to be picked up from the ground by women; dark-leafed varieties, such as Empress of India, etc., fair. Sweet peas are doing well, July not being so hot as the last three years; they have remained on growth longer and promise a good crop. Candytuft, poppy, godetias, larkspur and other annuals are looking well. H. T. J.

SWEET PEA SPECIALISTS.

The following is from an article on "New Sweet Peas," by David R. Williamson, published in the Gardeners' Chronicle, London:

"Mr. Lester L. Morse, the great American hybridist, who has given to the world many interesting varieties, recently sent to me from San Francisco, just before the conflagration, a most attractive classification of modern sweet peas, in which my own Eckfordian namesake, among many others, has the honor of being described. The characterizations are for the most part distinctive and expressive. Mr. Morse has also forwarded to me his famous varieties raised by himself, viz., Helen Pierce and Shasta, of which the former resembles in its unique color a blue-mottled gloxinia, the background being white; while the latter may be described as an improved Emily Henderson. The great American rival of Mr. Morse is Mr. W. Atlee Burpee, of Philadelphia. One of his latest and finest productions is entitled Burpee's Earliest White, which, judging from its reception at the hands of competent cultivators, is likely to prove a considerable acquisition. Navy Blue, I presume, was raised by Mr. Burpee. If so, he must rejoice in its continued popularity, though like many susceptible varieties, it has its limitations."

EMPLOYEES' CLUBS.

It may interest the larger seed firms in the States to know that at Sutton & Sons, Reading, England, there have been for some time a number of clubs among the employees, such as shooting, football, cricket, tennis, etc., also a rifle club, with a rifle range. These clubs have always been popular among those employed by the firm and have been more or less successfully managed, each by a separate committee. It is now thought advisable to manage the whole under one committee, so that the joint club can undertake any kind of sport or games that the committee considers advisable for the enjoyment and well-being of the members. So popular is the movement that nearly every member of the staff is joining and the active assistance of the partners and managers of departments is also enjoyed. The firm is providing as a recreation ground a portion of some grounds and gardens splendidly laid out by the late Martin Hope Sutton. Competitions for challenge cups and prizes have been arranged for the summer months. This action of the Reading seed firm is a very commendable one and worthy of every success, probably no other firm having the interests and pleasures of its employees so much at heart. The nearest approach is the seedsmen's assistants' clubs and societies of Edinburgh. Edinburgh is a notable city for its number of high class seed firms, probably no town in the United Kingdom having so many large seed houses within its boundaries as there are at Edinburgh. B. J.

MAIL TRADE.

The seed trade has watched with interest the progress made by the two great Chicago mail order houses that have started seed departments. There can be no doubt that they will cut a very large figure in the trade. They have the capital and the organization to accomplish any purpose, even if at some cost to themselves, and neither is likely to drop a line once established, so that eventual success is considered certain.

Last season Sears, Roebuck & Co. gave the seed department twenty-one pages in the general catalogue, while Montgomery Ward & Co. issued a special seed catalogue. As it is understood that the former concern charges each department with $800 for each page it occupies in the general catalogue, it seems probable that the older firm got off cheaper, counting the cost of the wash drawings and halftone illustrations which made the pamphlet notable, cost of printing, distributing, etc.

There is a notable difference in the policy pursued by the two houses. Sears, Roebuck & Co. favor collections, and many costly pages last year were given up to offers of a wide range of collections. This is said to be Mr. Sears' pet idea. The Montgomery Ward book, while it contained a few collections, was more in the line of a general seed list. Probably a majority of catalogue seedsmen will not endorse Mr. Sears' idea, but will watch with interest to see if his superior merchandising ability will make it win out.

One of the difficulties the two houses are encountering is in getting capable help. The Sears, Roebuck concern last spring offered a very attractive salary, through an employment agency, for a high grade man with successful experience and gave up the search, putting one of their own people in charge of the department. Mr. Fisher, with Ward & Co., has apparently "made good." Both firms have places to keep good people employed all the year around and will no doubt eventually build up efficient organizations in the seed departments.

Current Comment.

A long dry spell was broken on Friday night, and glad everybody was, but it did not cool the atmosphere, as expected. Sunday was blistering. The weather man says only 84 degrees in the shade. He is no fair recorder on top of a 16-story building. Half-way to Mars is not the temperature we are called upon to endure. Perhaps there may be a few who do not know the fair circumstances to find the temperature of the surface of the earth. It is to hang the thermometer a few inches away from the trunk of a tree, five feet above the ground and over grass, of course in the shade. It has been too warm to do almost anything but eat ice cream and mop yourself.

Business? Don't talk about business! W. J. Palmer has escaped for four weeks. Good, sensible boy, he did not leave his address, but I think it's Algonquin Park, Ont., a natural wild park, just east of Georgian bay, where we have hunted and fished repeatedly in our minds; a wild paradise for the angler and hunter, but wisely preserved by the Dominion government. The trout and muscallonge stick their heads out of the water and make faces at you, and the deer, moose and caribou insist on coming in to be milked with the settlers' cows. What a country for John Westcott, with his rod, and John Burton, with his rifle.

Speaking of sports, I notice in the S. A. F. preliminary program published in last week's Review, there is no mention of any shooting. This I protest against. It is well known that Mr. Altick is one of the best shots in the society and could get up a shooting tournament that would please many of the most conservative and best men in the society. Marksmanship with the shotgun is a test of nerve, coolness and good behavior. It is bound to be held among the green fields and pleasant surroundings of the open air and not in the superheated air of the bowling alley. Bowling is a game where brawn counts for more than brains, and is not nearly so entertaining for spectators as shooting. Besides, I have my poor old hammer-gun cleaned up for the special occasion, the same gun which crossed the frozen Delaware behind Uncle George in 1781. Pat O'Mara was sergeant of our company.

If Mr. Altick is the only florist shooter of Dayton, let him be encouraged in every way to get up a tournament. No shooting, then cut out the bowling. We can have a fine convention without either, but don't cater to a lot of crazy kids and abolish the sport of gentlemen. W. S.

Madison, N. J.—The Morris County Gardeners' and Florists' Society has issued the premium list for its eleventh annual flower show, to be held here November 1 and 2. There are forty-five classes of exhibits in which prizes are offered, and certificates of merit will be awarded to deserving exhibits. The sum of $450 is offered in cash prizes.

FORT RECOVERY, OHIO.

Trade has been fair this season in outdoor bedding stock, especially in dahlias, gladioli and pansies.

A new $15,000 greenhouse is planned by a firm at Celina, O., to be built this fall. The new establishment will make competition keener than ever in that vicinity. St. Mary's, O., Portland, Ind., and Decatur, Ind., all have greenhouses, and none of them is over thirty miles distant from the others, or from Celina.

ORANGE, N. J.

The regular monthly meeting and floral display of the New Jersey Floricultural Society took place on August 3, with its usual excellent showing of orchids and miscellaneous flowers. The paper for the evening was read by Arthur W. Bodwell, upon "The Cultivation of Orchids as Viewed by the Private Gardener," and supplemented the excellent one given by John E. Lager only a month or two ago. Both papers have been requested for publication.

Robert Berry, M. MacKosie and A. T. Caparn were the judges for the evening. It was decided by the society to hold a special fall flower show.

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

The state of trade may be summed up in a few words, an occasional busy time with funeral work. The hot weather has driven society folks to the mountains and seaside, while others of less means are camping out in the suburbs, so there is not much doing socially. There is a fair supply of good flowers, with sweet peas and auratum lilies in the supremacy.

A Call on Local People.

Portland is now experiencing a phenomenal growth, which began with the interest manifested in the Lewis and Clark fair, perceptibly increasing since the San Francisco disaster. Quite a few florists were among the thousands who have come here in the last month. The writer, who is enjoying a month's vacation, and is on a wager to walk twenty miles a day, is pleased with the opportunity of locating some of them. So we journeyed out to Mount Tabor, which is essentially the growers' district, and there first met three enterprising young Germans, who comprise the Montavilla Floral Co. Purchasing ten acres of land on an eastern slope, which commands a splendid view of a fertile valley and towering mountain and has a good speculative value, these young men have started right. They are building five new houses and will do a general business, with landscape work as a side feature.

Almost opposite is T. V. Sluman, the nurseryman, who owns twelve acres of Portland realty and is now enjoying a competency after twelve years of hard work here. Over to the left Fred Broetje is gradually enlarging his bank account by growing fancy fruits and flowers on his 3-acre tract, for the leading clubs and restaurants.

Walking toward the city we made the acquaintance of Thomas Ellingham, who is just branching out as a grower, with 5,000 feet of glass. He was most cordial and enthusiastic, and hoped Portland would soon have a florists' club. Two blocks further and we received the glad hand of F. A. Van Kirk, who built his first greenhouse a year ago, and now owns 6,000 feet. A house of tomatoes is proving a good asset during the dull weeks.

Right in the same block, which is a big one, stands the splendidly built range of houses of Martin & Forbes, a credit to the owners and the city. Everything required for a first-class store is grown here, roses being a strong feature with them. We can truthfully state that finer blooms were not seen anywhere in the country than those grown in this establishment in the last three years. George Spencer is in charge of this branch.

A little further on we bumped up against the L. G. Pfunder place. The veteran was not there, but we learned from Albert Herbert, his foreman for the last two years, that Mr. Pfunder responds to the roll call as regularly as a deacon to his church duties. Although the proprietor has prospered to such an extent that he might retire from active business, yet it is pleasing to note that his ambition and pride in the profession have not diminished.

Diagonally across, a lofty sign reads, "The Tonseth Co." This firm has made great progress in the last two years. Their latest houses are models in construction, and the output there may be classed among the best. After this call we turned toward home, hungry and a little bit tired.

THE OUTLOOK FOR FALL.

As we are now well up to the season for replanting carnation houses, I have made a tour among some of our principal growers in the neighborhood of San Francisco to see what is being done, especially in the line of getting ready for the coming season's output of flowers. I find quite a diversity of opinion among the various growers as to how far they are justified in continuing the expense of changing and purchasing new stock. The general opinion seems to be that there will be too many flowers produced this winter for the decreased demand. Some growers are optimistic, and declare there will not be too much good stock in any event, calling attention to the fact that there have been practically no new commercial places started this season, and many thousands of feet of glass have been discarded, as far as forcing roses or carnations is concerned.

It is a fact that we have at the present time a dozen first-class floral establishments, as against seventy-five four months ago. San Francisco used at least eighty per cent of the stock grown within a radius of twenty miles, and, as there are no prospects for any rush in the way of starting new retail establishments, it is hard to see where there will be an outlet for over fifty per cent of the goods produced.

The shipping of flowers to various California, Nevada and Oregon points has shown the way to dispose of a large quantity of stock, and the orders have been generally well divided among the growers. This, however, presents but a poor substitute to the grower who, under the usual conditions, could always dispose of his entire crop at good figures.

The housing of young stock, I find, has been progressing slowly, with a large majority of the young plants yet in the fields. Several of our largest wholesale growers, who usually devote quite a space on their benches to new varieties of carnations, have not invested in any of the well advertised sorts, but have devoted their houses to the better known and older kinds.

With roses there will be even less planting of new stock. The rule has been in a majority of cases to dry out

Plant Now LILIUM HARRISII for Early Forcing

We offer some extra choice Lilium Harrisii which has been grown for us from the original, pure stock. This is the kind of stock that you want for the very earliest forcing, as it is the true, original Harrisii. The small sizes—5-7s and 6-7s—are particularly desirable for this purpose, as they will flower more quickly than the larger bulbs. If you want to get a little of the original, pure Harrisii, try a case or two of this. As our stock of this is limited, we can offer only a few cases to a single buyer. If you have been dissatisfied with the Harrisii that you have forced heretofore, try a case or two of this and see if it is not more than worth the difference in price over the stock that you have been buying. In ordering ask for the pure selected strain of original Harrisii, which we offer as follows:

5 to 7-inch bulbs, 400 to the case, $17.00 per case.
6 to 7-inch bulbs, 350 to the case, 17.50 per case.
7 to 9-inch bulbs, 200 to the case, 20.00 per case.

EASTER COMES EARLY THIS YEAR—MARCH 31

and a great many growers will want to use Harrisii instead of Longiflorum so as to be sure and have the plants in flower in time, as the season is going to be short for Japan Longiflorum. The crop of Harrisii this year is the shortest it has been in years, and in view of the extra demand, we advise those who have not already covered their requirements to lose no time doing so.

For very earliest forcing—Christmas and later—we recommend the pure Harrisii offered above, but for later forcing for Easter, our customers will find the regular stock offered below first-class stock—much better than the average stock usually offered. We can quote the regular stock as follows:

6 to 7-inch bulbs, 335 to the case, $13.50 per case.

FREESIA REFRACTA ALBA, the true white variety. Now ready. Finest Bermuda-grown stock. $1.00 per 100; $7.50 per 1000.

BERMUDA BUTTERCUP OXALIS, $1.00 per 100; $7.50 per 1000.

the plants for the last two months, and at the present time many growers are getting ready to apply moisture and carry over the old bushes for another season.

I find that few bulbs will be forced in proportion to the quantity that it has been the custom to plant. Valley and Romans will not come up to more than fifty per cent of the usual output; with other articles in the bulb line I find no enthusiasm shown.

To sum up, from present indications I think it is safe to predict that there will not be over fifty per cent of the usual quantity of roses, carnations, bulbs and lilies produced in the neighborhood of San Francisco for the season of 1906 and 1907. G.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Business is now at the lowest ebb we have seen it since the fire. There is little or nothing doing in any department of the florist's trade, with the exception of funeral orders. The weather continues cool, and flowers are not quite so plentiful as they have been. We are noticing a gradual decrease in the quantity, both of roses and carnations, brought in by the growers.

Asters are now at their height. They are not being offered in more than half the usual quantity. The price remains low and the quality is not quite equal to that of former seasons. The best long-stemmed stock does not net the growers over $1.50 per hundred, and shorter-stemmed flowers can be had at about half that price.

Lilium album and L. rubrum are seen everywhere, and they can be had as low as 75 cents per dozen. Amaryllises at $1.50 per hundred spikes help to make the florists' windows showy. There is hardly any demand for them, however.

Tuberoses are plentiful. Valley appears to be scarcer again, and the price ranges from $3 to $4 per hundred. Outside stock, such as peas, gaillardias, dahlias and gladioli, is hardly worth picking, as there is absolutely no demand for it.

The shipping to interior points has been more active than usual this summer, probably caused by the presence of so many San Franciscans in outside towns. The schools will reopen in a few days, and we may expect quite an influx of people to town again.

Various Notes.

Trumbull & Beebe have opened a store at 525 Sansome street, one block from their former location.

D. Greuttner, of Vallejo, is in town. Mr. Greuttner reports a good trade in the retail florist's line in his town.

John Vallance has returned after a month's vacation in the northern part of the state.

The ground and greenhouses of Sato & Co., of Elmhurst, will be sold at auction about the middle of August. The Japanese-American Bank, of San Francisco, holds a mortgage of about $20,000 against the property.

Podesta & Baldochi report a heavy shipping business for the month of July. This firm is now located on Sutter and Polk streets.

Owing to the decreased demand for cut flowers, one of the large Japanese firms has reduced the amount of help from forty-five to twenty-five greenhouse men.

Thomas O'Neill, of the Myrobolan Nursery, Haywards, is on a trip to the northern part of the state.

W. W. Saunders, of Fresno, Cal., is living at present in Berkeley, Cal.

Nat Rolleri is permanently located at Sixth and Washington streets, Oakland.

On account of the changes made by the recent fire, it is probable that the fall chrysanthemum show at San Rafael will not be held until one year later than the time announced.

William Coupland, of Rincon Hill, has at the present time probably the finest assortment of begonias to be seen in any private place in San Francisco.

John Martin, or Ross Station, is constructing two houses, 20x50 feet, for carnations and orchids respectively, and his neighbor, Lieutenant Winship, will immediately commence the building of a range of six large greenhouses for roses, carnations, palms and ferns.

James Niven has received a lot of over 900 phalænopsis from the Philippine Islands.

A fierce fire broke out on the morning of July 31 at Oakley, Cal., in the boarding and lodging house of the Braslan Seed Growers' Co., a couple of miles from town. About 200 Chinese and Japanese were asleep there at the time. The flames spread with great rapidity, endangering the immense seed farm, with its hundreds of acres ready for threshing. Adjoining buildings and barns were consumed. The home of the superintendent was saved. By heroic action the fire was prevented from reaching the fields. G.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

Asters and sweet peas are plentiful, but are not first-class on account of the long spell of damp weather. E. Y. Pierce has been sending in the best asters on the market, and they are extra fine.

George Borden, foreman for R. H. Woodhouse, leaves today for a three weeks' vacation in New Hampshire.

Julius Rusitzky, with W. P. Pence, has gone to Nashua, N. H., for the rest of the summer.

E. Y. Pierce is building two new houses, one for violets and the other for roses.

William Livsey has put on an addition to his houses, with a lean-to for violets. F. C. C.

THE FLORISTS' MANUAL.

We note your advertisement in the current number of the Review of the second edition of Scott's Florists' Manual and request that you enter our order for a copy of this valuable book. The writer is thoroughly acquainted with the first edition of this work, having often had occasion to use it for reference while a student at the Michigan Agricultural College. Please rush this order, for we feel, with Mark Twain, that we "would rather not use violence."

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Pres., Orlando Harrison, Berlin, Md.; Vice-Pres., J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Ia.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester; Treas. C. L. Yates, Rochester. The 32d annual convention will be held at Detroit, Mich., June, 1907.

CALIFORNIA pears for the last week have been coming forward at the rate of about forty cars a day.

U. P. HEDRICK, of the New York Experiment Station, Geneva, reports that the apple crop of the western part of the state will be fifty to sixty per cent of a full crop.

AT Danville, Ill., the Greenwood Cemetery Association has been incorporated with $20,000 capital stock to establish a burying-ground. C. E. Bainbridge, G. W. Dixon and W. A. Chambers may be addressed.

GOOD GROWING SEASON.

The nurseries of western New York have this season been visited with an unusual amount of rainfall and a uniform high temperature, which has resulted in a luxuriant growth of vegetation rarely seen outside of the tropics. It is said that the last season that would compare with the present one occurred in 1869. Throughout the season the rains have been frequent and, contrary to weather procedure, have not been accompanied by an appreciable drop in the temperature.

Besides producing luxuriant vegetation, the excessive moisture was not conducive to insect life and, while a number of pests have been reported, there have been no extended ravages in any part of the state. On the other hand, the moist weather has produced conditions favorable to fungus diseases. A general complaint comes in from the grape-growing sections that black rot of grapes is unusually severe.

CIVIC IMPROVEMENT.

The Nurseryman's Relation to It.

[Synopsis of a paper by F. T. Ramsey, of Austin, Tex., read before the State Nurserymen's Association.]

There was a time, and not long ago, when, if a business man would talk about beautifying a city, he was put down as not being sound on business matters. This condition is changing. No nation has ever given a welcome so warm to any suggested movement. If a man's admiration for the beautiful has not been cultivated so that he puts his heart in the work just because he loves it he will do so because he feels that "it pays."

No two nurserymen are so qualified as to sustain the same relation to this movement, but this is what we should be. As there are but a few professional landscape men in Texas we should all be landscape gardeners. We should know all the suggestions to be found in about $50 worth of books, but the book learning is but a small part of all that we should know.

We should visit the cities that are beautiful in residences and parks. Study the man who planned Chicago after the fire; then follow him to Kansas City and see how he took a lot of hills that were for a long time considered only a good goat range and see how he made them one of the most beautiful residence additions in the world. Money alone, if handled by the street committee of the average city council, would never have done this. It takes mind—a refined mind. This same man is now in San Francisco. On one boulevard through this residence addition to Kansas City, I understand, are 210 residences that cost over $50,000 each. A drive on this street is one of the factors that develop great American ideas.

A nurseryman should be able to name the plants, shrubs and trees that are adapted to a particular section. He should know that some kinds do not like to grow alone, but flourish if planted among other kinds. He must know that in planting nature's trees for beauty, and to entice one to admire or come and rest, he must imitate nature so deftly that it will not be thought of as an imitation. Nature has no straight rows.

The man is an artist who can plant trees in such a way that in after years the passer-by will think that the house was built in a grove. The man who plans the grounds around a home to some extent must be an architect that he may the better make all things blend harmoniously, and he must be a civil engineer that he may tell the cost of bringing a grade to a certain line.

People love to be taught. Almost every one is a home builder. Let nurserymen qualify themselves to teach entertainingly in the local press. Teach the people that they need teaching on this subject. Texas needs just as many landscape workers as there are towns in the state. Encourage them to come. Strive to educate your citizens up to the point where they will realize that they need one and they will be willing to pay for his services. Let them get qualified to enjoy his work. When a man in the city builds a house he pays an architect from $50 to $1,000 to be sure that the building will look "correct" when done, and be built right, and will be so arranged that his family will enjoy it and take pleasure in showing it to friends. While all of these pleasure-giving qualities may be given to the grounds that surround a home, the idea has entered the minds of only a few persons in the country at large. Teach that every house should represent a picture; the ground, properly planted, represents the background and the frame.

If a man would pay $10,000 for a painting in Europe, bring it home and hang it in a frame that cost a dollar and a half, he would remind me of a whole lot of home-builders I know, but they do not know any better.

Now, then, when in the beginning I said a nurseryman should be qualified to do all this work and all this teaching it was on condition that no landscape specialist is available, or what is worse, when the customer is ignorant of the fact that he needs one. Let your golden text be, "Prepare ye the way for the landscape man," but keep talking all the time about the beauty and pleasure and profit of planting. Tell them that he that cometh after you is greater than you, and then go to growing the trees that are wanted in greater quantities. Make civic improvement popular.

When a sick man away out on the plains asks the druggist to give him the medicine he should take and the druggist knows no doctor can be had that day, I presume he would give him the medicine, but after the doctor comes he fills only the prescription. These ethics should prevail between nurserymen and landscape architects.

DIANTHUS FREYNII.

To an old admirer of the charming little Dianthus Freynii it was rather pleasant to come across it in several exhibits at the Temple show, although I have a greater admiration for the typical rose-colored plant than for the white or whitish forms shown at the Temple. I look upon this as one of the neatest and prettiest of our alpine pinks, and, although recognized by botanists as but a form of D. glacialis, it is considerably easier to grow in this climate than that species. It has been said by some to be probably the smallest dianthus we have, but its flowers are no smaller than some others, dwarf and compact as is the plant itself. When in good condition and well established it makes a dense carpet of small, sharp-pointed, green, not glaucous foliage, and from this rises a number of small, bright rose or deep pink-colored flowers. It is a choice plant in every way, and forms one of the most pleasing things we have in the rock garden. A very able grower of alpines recommends growing it on a dry, sandy bank, but I have found that in such a position it required a good deal of summer watering, even when partially shaded from the afternoon sun, so that I think it should do best with more summer moisture than it generally receives, although it must have perfect drainage. I found it easy to grow in my former garden, and I had a nice little clump of it there with little attention beyond planting it in a pocket facing southeast, in sand, peat, and grit, and giving it frequent waterings in summer and occasional top-dressings of soil.—Gardeners' Chronicle.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

Extremely hot weather, averaging about 90 degrees in the shade, is not calculated to make business very good, on the contrary it is driving all who have the price out of the city; notwithstanding the heat, business is as good as any other year at this season.

Flowers are plentiful, if they are not fine. Lilies, Beauties, Richmond, Kaiserins, gladioli and asters are good, with some good carnations. There are lots of small roses of all kinds, for which there is no demand. Asters are a glut, and while the good stock is bringing a fair price, the poor blooms will bring nothing.

Various Notes.

Uncle John Wyland has gone to Canada to see if he cannot round up a few of the large fish stories we are hearing.

Robert Herron has joined E. C. Ludwig's force, and will be found in the Allegheny Market.

W. A. Clarke has arrived from the farm and taken up his usual duties with the Pittsburg Cut Flower Co.

Faces have changed in nearly all the wholesale and retail houses; the pale-faced ones have gone and a lot of well-tanned lads who have had their vacations have taken their places. Hoo-Hoo.

TWIN CITIES.

The Market.

The same conditions existed the last week that we had during July, with the possible exception that there appeared to be a heavier demand for funeral work. There is practically no call for cut flowers for any other use. Stock remains scarce, and what is being brought in by the growers is not good. This applies especially to roses. Carnations are easing up some, and some very nice asters have arrived. Outdoor flowers are put to good use. Gladioli are good, but sell only fairly. Sweet peas are not plentiful, and the quality is far below that of last season.

St. Paul.

The bowling contest was pulled off Friday, August 3. A handsome lot of prizes had been offered, and these were won by the following, highest scores being won in the order named:

Ladies: Mrs. Bulow, Miss K. Hansen, Miss Will, Mrs. N. C. Hansen, Miss F. Johnson, Miss Seegar; booby, Miss Schulze.

Gentlemen: Oscar Carlson, P. Hansen, H. Schieman, O. J. Olson, C. Hansen, Jr., F. Schulze; booby, E. P. Holm. Oscar Carlson scored the most strikes, and O. J. Olson the largest number of spares. After the bowling, a fine lunch was served, which was enjoyed by all.

L. L. May & Co. are busy improving their ice-boxes and cases, and will have a handsome place by the time fall trade opens.

J. W. Hoffman will take in the convention at Dayton. Holm & Olson will be represented by E. P. Holm, and it is probable that the Swanson Floral Co. will have Gust Colberg at the meeting.

The Swanson Floral Co. keeps up its show windows in good shape.

Minneapolis.

The Donaldson Glass Block people, according to reliable reports, contemplate adding considerably to their cut flower department. One of the main improvements will be a marble-front, mammoth ice-box. Summer trade they report as good.

The Whitted Floral Co. is doing a good business, and members of the firm express great satisfaction in their move to their present location, which gives them plenty of room to handle their increasing trade.

M. Eschner was a caller on the trade recently. Felix.

Indianapolis, Ind.—H. K. Southworth, the thermostat man, died some time ago, and the business has been discontinued.

SPRINGFIELD, OHIO.

A Bad Hail Storm.

Probably the most violent hail storm on record visited this locality July 27, its duration having been about forty-five minutes and the sizes ranging from hickory nuts to hulled walnuts, according to various eye-witnesses. West of town tne ravines were said to have been piled full of hailstones. Nearly every florist here suffered a slight loss of glass in hotbed sashes, but all houses withstood the bombardment, with the exception of several of the oldest houses of the George H. Mellen Co., in which single strength glass was broken to the extent of approximately $100.

We learn of only one concern here carrying hail insurance, but this recent experience will doubtless cause a more general demand for this sort of protection. At Urbana the Reeser Floral Co. sustained a loss variously reported at from 300 to 700 lights of glass.

Florists' Club Picnic.

On Thursday, August 2, the first picnic of the Springfield Florists' Club was held at Eicholz park, a romantic spot on the Springfield, Troy & Piqua Electric Railway. Athletic sports began with quoits, Ward Welch and Charlie Schmidt proving a pair invincible against all opposing pitchers. Refreshments were abundant for a big noontime lunch, and were partaken of at the pleasure of each member or guest throughout the day. Baseball was the leading attraction, a double-header between the south-enders and the "tother-enders" resulting in favor of the latter, to the tune of ten to nine and twenty-one to four. Jack Good, pitcher for the vanquished, claimed it would have been otherwise had he been supported by a catcher other than Ward Welch, who succumbed to "that tired feeling" and stretched at full length under a shade tree about the middle of the second game.

Gus Schneider and Charlie Schmidt worked together well as a battery for the victors, and Umpire Jimmy Maxwell announced amusing decisions in his rare old Scottish brogue. The closing event was a boat race, which culminated, through a deeply plotted conspiracy, in the capsizing of one boat and a thorough ducking for two muscular rowers.

The H. WEBER & SONS CO.
OAKLAND, MD.

HELENA, MONT.

One of Helena's substantial business enterprises that is known throughout the entire northwest is the State Nursery Co., whose nursery and greenhouses are situated three miles west of Helena, near the Broadwater hotel. They have an office and salesroom at 105 East Sixth avenue and a branch store at 47 West Broadway, in Butte. The business was started in a small way when they erected a small greenhouse containing 600 square feet of glass. The business has grown until they now have 105,000 square feet of glass. They divide their business into a number of departments, the first of which is that devoted to plants. They carry in stock and raise all of the plants that will grow and bloom in the short summer season of the northwest.

In their second department they have devoted a portion of their greenhouses to a palm room and have a magnificent assortment and a large number of varieties. Next come the outdoor roses that will thrive in Montana. Following this are the hardy shrubs, vines and roots that will survive our severe winters. Fruit trees and berry bushes are in another department, in which they have as well shade and ornamental trees.

The most important department, however, is that for cut flowers. For this purpose they have forty-three greenhouses, comprising 105,000 square feet, most of which is devoted to raising cut flowers. They have a special department devoted to field, garden and flower seeds, of which they carry a complete line. The company issues a general catalogue in the spring, covering all departments in detail, also a full catalogue for bulbs and winter flowering plants, etc.

The Review will send Herrington's Chrysanthemum Book on receipt of 50 cents.

Topeka, Kan.—Hiram Hulse narrowly escaped cashing a bogus check recently presented to him for a bunch of roses by a stranger who had been operating here for several days. The man represented himself as a brother of Mayor Davis, and ordered the flowers sent to the latter's house. Mr. Hulse fortunately did not have enough change on hand, or he would have been bitten, he says.

Hello! Brother Florists,

SHALL WE SEE "YOU ALL" AT DAYTON?

We sent a few of our new Cannas to be planted in the city parks last spring and we are anxious to have "you all" see them and tell us if they are any good. We think a "heap sight" of some of them, but want to know what "you all" will say about them. There are 188 kinds, all but 17 of them are of our own originating. We are all ready to "whoop em up" in big shape if "you all" think they are worth it, so be sure to see them and tell us just how they strike you.

AUSTIN, TEX.

The annual election of the stockholders of the Hyde Park Floral Co. was held August 1. The old board of directors was continued, and officers for the ensuing year will be: F. T. Ramsey, president; Edgar R. Hall, treasurer; and H. S. West, secretary.

Stock is light and field-grown plants are suffering from the prolonged drought. Rain has been plentiful around the outside, but in the city we have had but one shower in two months.

Mr. Alff is building three new houses at his place in the east end, and is making considerable improvement in his heating arrangements.

A. J. Seiders has resigned as manager of the Hyde Park Floral Co., and has accepted the position of superintendent for the Austin Golf Club. He contemplates doing considerable landscape work, which in addition to the new clubhouse, will make the links one of the prettiest spots in the capital city.

Superintendent Beck is busy with a large force beautifying and renovating the campus at the university. The addition of several fountains has been a needed help to the appearance of this beautiful park.

The Hyde Park Floral Co. is now in the midst of the tuberose shipping season. They ship as far as Memphis and New Orleans, stock traveling this distance in first-class condition. It is a great help to florists at a time when the cry is for anything white.

Mrs. Hillyer is at the military headquarters, and is doing a rushing business in addition to looking after her regular trade. CACTUS.

NEWARK, N. J.—Mrs. K. Schmittberger, who formerly owned a store at 310 Springfield avenue, and who has been in a different location, will return to the old stand.

BUFFALO, N. Y.—Incorporation papers have been taken out by the Central Park Floral Co., with a capital stock of $2,000. Julius A. Goehle, Henry Hart and Clara C. Hamocher are named as stockholders.

ELYRIA, O.—The Ohio Nursery & Supply Co. is a new concern just incorporated, with capital stock of $25,000. Henry Hurst, W. P. Bates, W. B. Johnston, J. A. Reublin and C. D. Bates hold the stock.

WATCH US GROW

Think of Aschmann, the Great Araucaria Importer of America, before buying elsewhere. Araucaria Excelsa, the pet of all decorative plants that nature produced, our specialty. Now perfectly recovered from their sea voyage, well established, growing in pots, ready to ship to all parts of America.

These everlasting green foliaged pot plants are growing more in favor by the tasteful plant buyers of this land from year to year. Please watch the growth of our importation during the last 11 years; first year 100, second 250, third 500, fourth 1000, fifth 2000. This year (1906) which is the 11th anniversary of our first importation, our spring importation amounted to 6,000. All these are grown for us under contract by an Araucaria specialist in Belgium. I must say for the benefit of my customers that they were never before so nice and large for the money as this year. I herewith quote you special prices on these.

Araucaria Excelsa, 12 to 14 inches high, 5½-in. pots, 3 to 4 tiers, 2 yrs. old, 50c. 14 to 16 inches high, 5½-in. pots, 3 to 4 tiers, 2 yrs old, 60c. 16 to 18 inches high, 5½ to 6-in. pots, 4 to 5 tiers, 3 yrs. old, 75c. 18 to 20 inches high, 6-in. pots, 5 to 6 tiers, 4 yrs. old, $1.00. 20 to 24 inches high, 6-in. pots, 5 to 6 tiers, 4 yrs. old, $1.25. 36 to 50 inches high, specimens, 7-in. pots, 6 yrs. old, $2.50 to $3.00.

Araucaria Compacta Robusta, have 1000 of them. Never were they as nice as this year. Plants are as broad as long, from 12 to 20 inches in height, 3 to 4 perfect tiers, 20 to 30 inches across from tip of one tier to the other, 3, 4 and 5 yrs. old. 6 to 7-in. pots, $1.25, $1.50, $1.75 to $2.00, up to $3.00 each.

Araucaria Excelsa Glauca, perfect jewels in shape and size, their beautiful greenish blue tiers give them such a striking appearance, that anyone seeing them must fall in love with them on sight. Plants, 6 to 7-in. pots, 3, 4, 5 perfect tiers, 15 to 25 inches in height, from 15 to 30 inches across, $1.25, $1.50, $1.75, $2.00 to $2.50 each. Please bear in mind that the above mentioned varieties are the cream of Belgium's productions. We have thousands of them and can meet all demands.

Kentia Forsteriana, 7-in. pots, made-up, 1 large one in center, 3 smaller sizes, 22 to 25 ins. high around, $2.00 each; 6-in. pots, single plants, 35 to 40 ins. high, 5 to 6 good leaves, 4-year-old, $1.25 to $1.50 each; 30 to 35 ins. high, 4-year-old, 6-in. pots, 5 good leaves, $1.00 each; 25 to 30 ins. high, 5½-in. pots, 3-year-old, 5 leaves, 75c; made-up plants with 3, 18 to 20 ins. high, 25c to 30c.

Kentia Belmoreana, 6-in. pots, 4-year-old, 5 to 6 leaves, bushy, 30 to 35 inches high, $1.25; 5½ to 6-in. pots, 3-year-old, 5 to 6 leaves, 75c to $1.00 each. These are the sizes entered in the customs house.

Cocos Weddelliana, 15c.

Jerusalem Cherries or Solanums, same varieties we sell at Xmas for 75c, $1.00 each; 2½-in. pots, $5.00 per 100.

Ficus Elastica (Belgian importation), 4-in. pots, 25c.

Areca Lutescens, 4-in., made up with 3 plants in a pot, 25c.

Cycas Revoluta, sago palms, 6 to 7-in. pots, 7 to 20 leaves to the plant, 10c per leaf.

Assorted ferns for dishes, large, bushy plants fine assortment from 2½-in. pots, $5.00 per 100.

All goods must travel at purchaser's risk. Cash with order, please.

I THINK the REVIEW the best paper for florists.—GEORGE WOLF, Elkins, W. Va.

Greenhouse Heating.

BOILER CAPACITY.

I have six houses running from northeast to southwest. They are 18x120 feet, and have 10-foot ridges. A shed six feet wide extends across three of them, and the boiler is at one end of it. The boiler is twelve horse-power. Will that size heat the houses to 50 to 60 degrees, with an occasional outside temperature of 25 degrees below zero? R. A. M.

I assume that you purpose to use steam heat in this plant. I also understand that you have six houses each 18x120. These houses on a steam basis require about 3,400 square feet of radiation to maintain the temperature specified. To supply this radiation the boiler should have at least 425 square feet of surface exposed to the heated gases. This amount of heating surface will be provided by a thirty horse-power horizontal tubular boiler. A twelve horsepower boiler is hardly half large enough. L. C. C.

HEATING SASH HOUSE.

I am building a sash house 20½x105 feet, using 3x6 sashes, so that I can remove them in summer. It is for lettuce, and will want 50 to 55 degrees in cold weather. How many 2-inch pipes do I need, using hot water? Both gable ends are glass, and there are twenty-eight inches of glass in the south wall. The walls are four feet, the ridge nine feet nine inches, and I have solid beds. Can I put all the pipes on the walls, or must I put some in the center? P. N.

The house in question, 20½x105 feet, constructed of sashes, can be satisfactorily heated by using twelve 2-inch pipes running the length of the house. These can be arranged in two coils and placed on the side walls. One pipe in each coil should serve as a flow and at the far end of the house empty into a manifold carrying five returns. Another arrangement is to have a 3-inch flow under the ridge, and a manifold carrying five returns on each side wall. A well elevated expansion tank will be necessary in either case. L. C. C.

RICHMOND, IND.

The big new range of the E. G. Hill Co. is rapidly approaching completion. Growers will be interested in it because of a number of new features. Among the notable things is the extensive use of cement. The outside walls are of cement and so are the benches, while the big stack for the heating plant is of the same material, the first one so far reported to be made of cement.

Denison, Texas.—The Munson nursery has installed oil burners at the greenhouses for the steam heating. This is the first plant of its kind in Texas to be heated by oil.

Convention Notes.

Miss Bessie Evangeline Dornbusch has composed for our convention a most beautiful poem, which she read before the club at its meeting July 30, and deafening and thunderous applause was her reward. This young lady, a daughter of one of our members, is a young woman of no mean poetical ability, and is a most excellent elocutionist. It was decided that she should deliver this poem just before the illustrated lecture on landscape gardening takes place at Far Hills, and following the banquet, all in the open air on the big lawn.

Quite a few more surprises have been added on the exhibition grounds, and even the members of the club are in the dark as to what the surprises will be.

The presidential reception will take place at the residence of J. H. Patterson, Far Hills, at 7 p. m. August 21. The illumination will be finer than we have ever seen. Of course there will be music and Mr. Patterson will serve a dainty lunch on the big lawn. A great many requests are pouring in for cards of admission for members and for nonmembers of the association for the presidential reception. Now, all members desiring to bring friends for this occasion must send in the names at once.

When you arrive in Dayton, make free use of the bureau of information at the depot. It will be conducted by the Merchants' Police, of Dayton, under the control of the Dayton Florists' Club. Do not forget to register at once with the secretary at the exhibition hall. We will have a five-minute service from the Algonquin hotel to the fairground; there will always be a car waiting, coming and going.

From all indications this convention will be a hummer. Come one and all. Every one of the boys will receive you with the most generous spirit and open heart, and we shall see that the city is turned over to you. Those who want to be assisted in getting lodgings in hotels or private houses, please don't wait until the last day, for the chairman on hotels has other duties to perform besides looking out for your comfort. Please make up your mind in time, and write all communications, if you want to be assisted, to J. B. Heiss.

North Bridgton, Maine.—C. L. Chadbourne is making an addition to his range of houses. The new house will be 20x50 and will be used for carnations.

Murphysboro, Ill.—Lewis R. Allen has sold his greenhouses and business to J. E. Null and has removed to Pomona. Mr. Null was formerly with the landscape department of the Lake Shore railroad, at Hillsdale, Mich.

HEATING WITH NATURAL GAS.

After three unsuccessful attempts, I. Parker & Son, of Fort Scott, Kan., have drilled a well which gives an abundant flow of natural gas, which they will use in heating their plant. The flow is in sufficient quantity to supply all the heat that is required in the coldest winter.

To obtain this flow of gas Mr. Parker drilled three wells, and the expense will aggregate $1,000. That amount of money would purchase considerable coal and it will be some time before he will be getting the gas for nothing. The first well developed a good flow of gas, but Mr. Parker was overzealous to find a stronger flow and he continued the drilling in the same well. The result was that the hole filled up with salt water and drowned the supply. Then he drilled another well, but did not find sufficient gas to supply his needs. The third has just been brought in and it is fine. The well is about 275 feet deep. The pressure is good and the volume is sufficient to furnish the fuel for many years to come.

AUSTIN, TEX.

This section is doing more in flower growing than ever in its history, and plans are being made for extensions. The Hyde Park Floral Co. has just completed a new palm house 18x50 on the west end of its greenhouses. This company handles the crop of tuberoses from Ramsay's Austin nurseries. There are several acres of these lilies and the field is a grand sight, the graceful stems waving in the strong breeze. These lilies are irrigated from surface wells by the use of a gasoline pumping plant.

A. J. Seider, who organized this company a year ago, has sold his interest and is reported to be going in business on an extensive scale for himself.

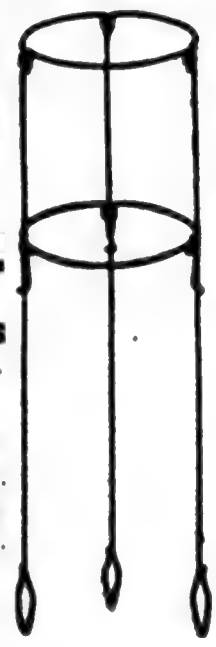
Charles Alff & Co.'s nurseries are busy.

Mr. Hall is reducing his business, as he is planning to retire.

Alfred Holm has recently built another new palm house. Mrs. Hillyer's cut flower trade is good. Ricinus.

Iron Mountain, Mich.—G. F. Plowman is preparing to build a house 20x80.

Bloomington, Ill.—The Phoenix Nursery Co. has contracted for a new house, to contain 3,000 square feet of glass. When the building is completed the old establishment on Park street will be torn down.



PEOPLE who know a good thing when they see it, and will take advantage of the same, must be possessed with good judgment and are generally successful. One of our successful growers has this year taken out 6000 feet of wooden gutters, which were only 5 years old, and replaced the same with 6000 feet of the GARLAND IRON GUTTER, this being his fifth annual order.

Our long list of orders of this kind is our best reference. By writing any of the large growers at Chicago you will confer a favor on the

have been made from time to time in greenhouse construction, all toward more light, longer life to the house—but because only 24-in. glass is used—greatly increasing the light, while all the vital supporting parts are metal encased and thoroughly protected from decay.

U-BAR GREENHOUSES Are the Best Greenhouses Built

The Test of Workmanship

No greenhouse is a perfect house unless all the materials which enter into its construction are properly made by experienced workmen. All of our material is made by men who know that perfect material is needed to make a perfect house and you can't grow the best stock without a perfect house. Well made material costs less than the inferior kind—less repairing to be done.

Our workmanship will stand the most critical test—how about making a comparison with the houses you have? Write for catalogue.

H AND C

It's an Accepted Fact

That a sectional boiler does some work under some conditions better than a corrugated—that's why we improved this sectional boiler—but there are plenty of cases where the old corrugated is the "easiest on coal"—the best greenhouse boiler.

We are Looking for an Argument

With the man who doubts that a single even-span house is not more economical, and does not produce better plants than two ridge-and-furrow houses of same ground space.

Not only a saving of 25 per cent in fuel, but an even ventilation, and equal humidity—a house fortified against sudden outside changes by the large amount of heated air that acts as an insulation.

Send for our Iron Frame circular and get posted before you argue.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Bouvardias.

Pinch back the strong growths of the bouvardia. The little, weak growths that were made in the small pots before you planted them out are useless and should be cut away. The only growths of use to you are the strong growths that spring from the root. By September 1 or the following few days they should be benched. We have learned from experience that it is of little importance whether or not you lift a carnation with soil attached to the roots, so long as you get most of the roots when lifting. This will not hold good with the bouvardia. Lift with all the roots as little disturbed as possible, or they will wilt for many days. They will need spraying and the house must be damped down several times a day, even if the plants are lifted under the most favorable circumstances.

For the first week under glass some shading will be a great help. There is nothing better for this short period of shading than clay diluted with water. If there is no clay on your farm, you will find it on the banks of the nearest creek, where the muskrat loves to disport, and there is no better way to apply it to the glass than with your wife's dipper, the old tin dipper that hangs by the well. The first heavy shower will wash the glass and sashbars clean. This very primitive shading has been a boon to many a carnation grower, who wanted a shade for the first ten days after planting in July and August, and none afterwards.

Cyclamen.

This is about the time to give your earliest cyclamens their last shift. The best plants in 4-inch pots should go into 6-inch, and the less strong from 3-inch into a 5-inch. I know good cyclamen growers who, after the last shift, plunge the plants in coldframes, in tobacco stems, and shade by lath shading nailed on light frames. If this is not convenient, then a bench in a house where an abundance of ventilation will reach them will do very well, but not with a permanent shade overhead. It should be a small house, where shading can be used during the hot, bright hours and removed during morning, evening and on dull days.

Begonia Lorraine.

There is no particular date when Begonia Gloire de Lorraine should be shifted. It depends on the condition of their roots, as from now on to flowering time they grow rapidly. They will bear and enjoy plenty of root room, so shift from 4-inch to 6-inch pots or from 3-inch to 5-inch. While growing fast they must of necessity receive an abundance of water at the roots. The whole big genus of begonias gets along well without the leaves being wet, so it is well to water without wetting the foliage, although a humid atmosphere in the house is beneficial, as it is to all the vegetable kingdom, except an Arizona cactus.

Show Pelargoniums.

Those who grow these fine plants, the show pelargoniums, should now prepare to propagate them. Plants unsold in June will have made a strong, flowerless growth and should have been kept rather dry for the last month. If you wish to save the old plants you should cut last year's growth hard back, leaving only an inch or two of the current year's growth. The old plants, if kept for two weeks almost dust dry, will break out at adventitious eyes that you don't see and about three weeks from cutting down should be shaken clean of any old soil, their roots shortened back and repotted in smaller pots than they flowered in. Pot firmly and do not overwater for the first month.

The mistake that inexperienced growers make is that they are afraid to cut back these plants short enough. Don't be afraid; cut them hard back. The tops you cut off the old plants will be of several degrees of hardness. The top tender growth cut off with three or four eyes will root readily in the cutting bed, with a slight shade and moderate moisture of sand, and so will the next few eyes if you can save a leaf or two on the cutting. Don't expect these cuttings to root as quickly as a verbena or ageratum, but if kept moderately moist and shaded only in hottest weather you will lose few. In communities where this good old plant has not been overdone it should be a grand market plant, as it was thirty years ago in the east, but the rise and improvement of the semi-double geranium has made it "go away back and sit down."

Weeds.

I am going to say a word on a very plebeian subject, and that is weeds. I once heard a well-known nurseryman of Chicago say, at a convention of the Park and Outdoor Art Association, at Detroit, that on his nursery of 400 acres he did not believe you could find a dozen weeds. This fine looking and manly gentleman might have been carried away by the exuberance of his own verbosity, but if his statements approached the truth he deserves a Carnegie hero medal. Many florists are extremely untidy and careless of their outside crops. They will have a quarter of an acre of carnations, or a batch of vincas, stevias, bouvardias or many other things, and while they know that it is to their interest to keep weeds out of the beds, they will leave a forest of them on the sides and ends of these plantations, the sight of which pierces the heart of an old gardener.

As far as the margin of your little farm reaches, see that no weed goes to seed. You may say: "Oh! Over the fence our neighbor will send us all the weed seeds we want." Don't think so. Show him a good example and after your carnations and other crops are lifted don't think the so-called weeds will have a right to assert themselves. There will be time and weather for them to flourish and bear seed and give you endless work next year. Keep down the weeds in the waste places, as well as in the cultivated spots. The Creator sent the weeds as well as the rose, jasmine and dianthus, but he sent them so that the industrious should reap the benefit of their hard work and the lazy and indifferent should be smothered with ragweed, quackgrass and dandelions. Don't send one lone man out to hoe the weeds on an acre. Get up good and early and say, "Hurrah, boys! We are going to kill all the weeds on the farm today." So polish your hoes and set the whole gang at it and it will go merrily.

Pertinent Paragraphs.

Don't forget to pinch your sweet stevia about now. It will be growing rampantly and what you want is a broad, stout plant. Every break made now means a spike of flowers later.

Pansy seed I notice is well up, sown in the broad sun about July 25. Keep moist until out of the seed leaf. After that it is safe, even if dry occasionally.

Don't forget to have your winter-flowering sweet peas sown by September 1, and sooner is better. The fall sunshine is what makes them early.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

SELECTING THE BUDS.

The question of selecting the proper bud is a thorn in the flesh of many cultivators, and causes more worry than any other detail of chrysanthemum culture. Many inquiries reach me at this season relative to this subject, and I shall endeavor to make it as clear as possible.

The terms first crowns, second crowns, etc., have served to puzzle many people, because while plants propagated in February may produce four or five crown buds, late struck plants may produce only one. The average plant set out in May has produced one or perhaps two buds to date, and any bud that sets after the middle of August will produce a flower. I always figure on a date rather than on whether the bud is a first crown, etc.

An experience extending over some fifteen years has proved to me that on general principles a bud set around August 20 is an all-round reliable bud and will always produce a satisfactory flower. There are some exceptions, of course. A few varieties can be taken earlier and some should be taken later. These I shall name. Varieties that can be taken earlier are for very early flowers, and include October Sunshine, Monrovia, Montmort, Miss Alice Byron, Fitzwygram, Lady Harriett and Lady Hopetoun. Those who have taken only late buds of Miss Alice Byron have no conception of its wonderful depth and finish when caught on a bud early in August; Monrovia will make a fine early flower in many sections of the country from a late July bud.

Varieties that do better on a bud taken early in September are Col. Appleton, S. T. Wright, Dr. Enguehard, Jeanne Nonin, Merstham Crimson and the white and yellow Chadwicks. This bud taken in September may still be a crown bud, but, being later in the season, the cooler weather possibly assists its more perfect development.

The difference between a crown and a terminal bud is easily seen when one once understands the terms. A crown bud is always known by the fact that it has growth shoots around it, while the terminal bud only has smaller buds. Many commercial growers keep removing the buds until the terminal appears, and as a consequence will tell you that many of the finest kinds we have are useless for their work. Nellie Pockett and its sport, Cheltoni, W. Duckham, Leila Filkins, F. S. Vallis and many others are superb when taken on a crown bud from the middle of August on, but are thin and poor taken on the terminal bud a month later.

It is sometimes argued that the neck is long on the crown buds and the color of the flower is much poorer. This applies with little force any more with the kinds we are now growing. The neck is little if any longer except on plants that have been drawn up thin and spindling; these would be weak-necked, anyway. As to color, few pinks at any season can approach Lady Hopetoun, flowering early in October from a crown bud taken August 5.

In taking buds early in the season there are several points that should be kept in mind. Do not remove all the growth shoots at once. If the bud is earlier than you think it should be, do not rub it off and run your chances on getting another one, but let all the shoots stay around it. These will grow and hold the bud in check, whereas if they have all been removed, the sap must necessarily go into the bud, and cause it to swell too soon. After the lapse of a week or so, the shoots can be removed one by one, and no harm is done to the bud.

If feeding has been commenced with liquid, it should be greatly reduced or stopped altogether during the process of bud formation, if the plants are large-leaved and gross, because they are almost at a standstill. This perhaps does not apply to the commercial grower much, whose plants as a general thing do not get feeding enough, but it does apply to a large and increasing class of growers for exhibition, who are pushing their plants all they know how right from the first. A strong dose of chemical has been responsible more than once for the failure of a bud to swell, and there is no sense in wasting good material.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS OUTDOORS.

I want to ask a question in regard to raising chrysanthemums under canvas outdoors. Do you think it best to put the canvas over the top of the shed as soon as the buds form, or does the dew injure the buds? C. F. P.

While I have had no practical experience in raising chrysanthemums under canvas outside, I am safe in saying that the dew will not hurt the bud before it shows color, any more than spraying under glass hurts it. Water sometimes lodges in buds that are cup-shaped, as early buds of Timothy Eaton are, and rots them; but I question if the night dews would be heavy enough to do any damage. If C. F. P. has heavy fall rains in his section, the canvas might be a good protection, but otherwise, as long as no danger from frost threatened, I should say leave the canvas off.

BUD SELECTION.

Will you please inform me when to take the buds on the following varieties of mums. They were planted in benches out of 4-inch pots May 19, and are for exhibition purposes. My plants are Nellie Pockett, Cheltoni, F. S. Vallis, Mrs. G. Heaume, Mrs. H. Partridge, Merza, Wm. Duckham, A. J. Balfour, Mrs. H. Weeks, T. Carrington, J. R. Upton, Minnie Bailey, Lucy Evans, Janet Lady Clark, Merstham Yellow, C. J. Salter, Belle of Castlewood, Mrs. T. W. Pockett, F. A. Cobbold, Loveliness, Gen. Hutton, Col. D. Appleton, Dr. Enguehard, Mrs. W. B. Chamberlain, Glenview, Golden Wedding, Glory of Pacific, Polly Rose, and Monrovia. F. W. R.

Without going into detail for each variety specifically, I should say that buds of any of the varieties mentioned, with the exceptions of Col. Appleton and Dr. Enguehard, may safely be taken about August 20. The two varieties named produce better flowers from buds taken the first or second week in September. If you will read carefully my notes on buds in this issue, you will probably find all the information you need in bud selection. C. H. T.

CARNATIONS

CARNATION NOTES.—WEST.

Watering.

As soon as the plants you benched show signs of having gained a new root hold, you want to reduce the syringing. If the day is bright, spray once about the middle of the morning, and wet down the walks again after dinner to keep the atmosphere in a good growing state. See that the plants are dry by night. If you keep up the excessive syringing too long, you are liable to get your plants too soft, and what is still worse, you are likely to start some of the spot diseases. After you have broken up the surface of the soil, you can begin to water liberally, as the plants will be making rapid growth from now on, and the stronger this growth is the better will be your early crop of blooms.

Removing Shade and Mulching.

You want to be getting rid of the shade you put on your houses just as fast as the plants will stand it. The quicker it can be done the better. Carnations like the full sun, and will make a better foundation for the winter's work than when they are shaded. The growth will not be so rapid, but it will be better matured and healthy. Rust and spot diseases will not start as readily, either.

When you have taken off all the shade, you will want to put a light mulch of some loose material on your benches to protect the roots from the sun. The sun is quite hot yet, and will dry out the soil in a short time where it strikes with full force all day. A light mulch will prevent this and will hold in the moisture, besides keeping the soil cool. Stable manure that has been piled up about a year and allowed to rot will answer the purpose admirably. Put it on about half an inch thick only. After putting on this mulch you must watch the watering more closely. It is easy to get the soil too wet when the roots have not yet worked through it, and the sun cannot draw from it. After you have finished planting, pot up a few plants of each variety to be used in filling up where a plant may have failed to take hold here and there, or perhaps has died from stem-rot. Very few may be required, but you will be sure to need a few before winter sets in. Five per cent of what you benched ought to be plenty. By potting them now you will have them re-established when they are needed, and you can set them right in and no further care will be needed.

HINTS FOR A BEGINNER.

How many square feet of glass should a man have for growing carnations profitably for the wholesale market, if the owner, who has a good knowledge of the business, expects to do the work with a good assistant? C. B.

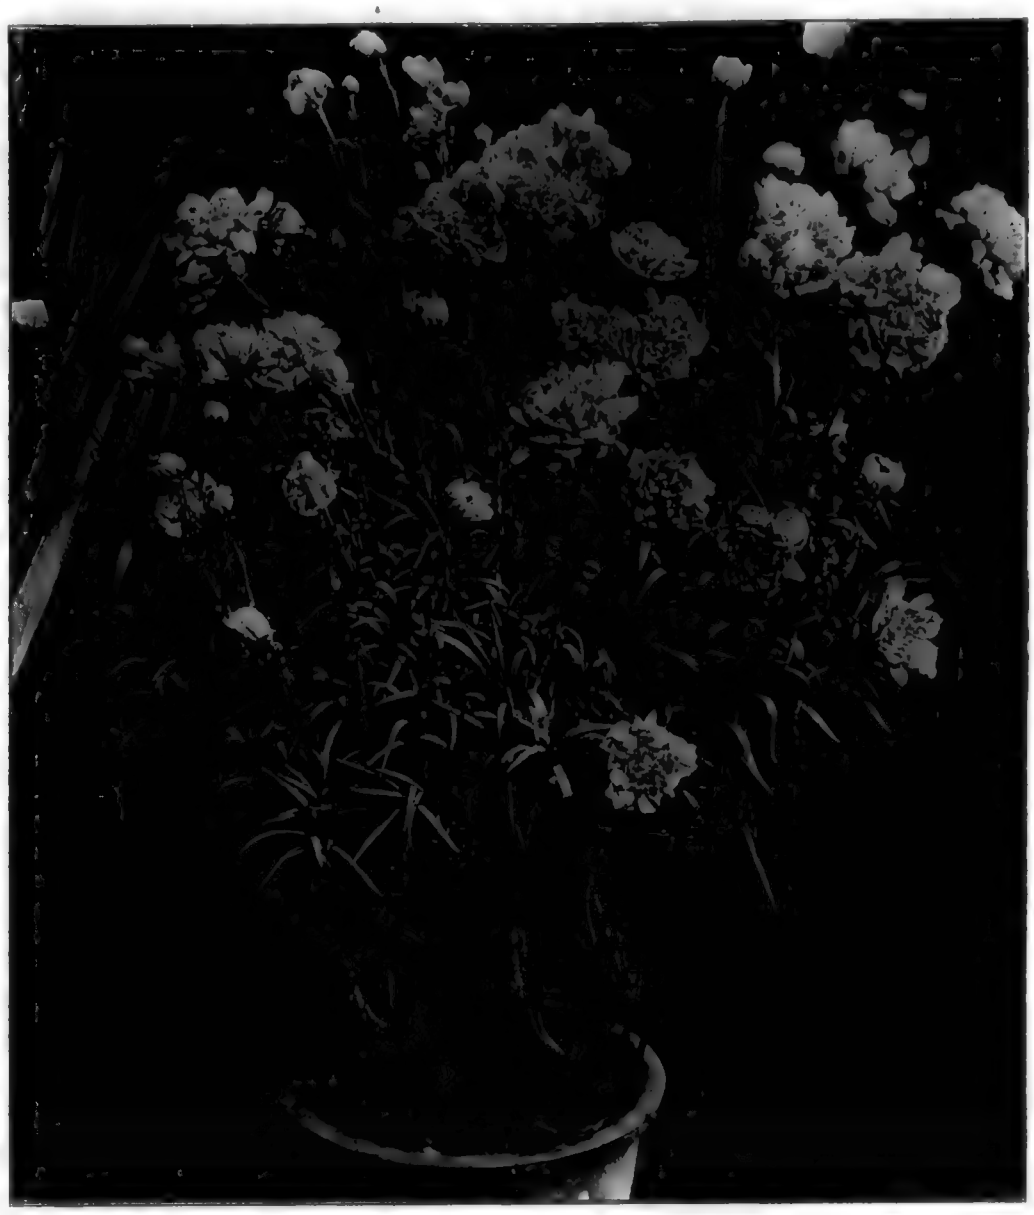
Your question has more in it than appears on the surface. In determining how much glass would be required many things must be taken into consideration; I will undertake to point out some of them, and we will try to reach some conclusion.

In the first place, it will depend largely on the nature of your outlet and what kind of competition you may have to contend with. If you consign your cut to some good commission house it will not matter so much how large your cut is. It will be handled along with stock from other growers if there is not enough of yours to fill orders completely. For the small grower this is no doubt a good method of disposal. If, however, you mean to sell your stock directly to some retailer, you ought to have enough room so you can plant enough varieties in each color to cover the whole season, and enough of each variety to make it worth while. A shipping business requires a plant of considerable size to work to good advantage.

Then the competition you may have to contend with will cut a figure. If you have to buck up against some large grower of high grade stock, you will have a hard time of it unless your cut is of considerable proportion, or is very high in quality. If you can grow a grade of blooms that cannot be obtained from your competitors you need not fear them, whether you cut 100 blooms a day or 1,000.

Your facilities for delivery must be taken into consideration. If you have to drive a considerable distance to your customer, or to the express office, the quantity you send out each trip will count. You can haul several thousand blooms as cheaply as you can a hundred in your wagon.

We take it for granted that you are a first-class grower and that you will produce high grade stock. You are industrious and sober, and you will manage to make every foot of bench space pay a high revenue. All these are very essential, especially on a small place. We need say nothing of being economical and thrifty. On these will depend largely whether you want to make any headway in adding to your glass area and building up your business.



If you are alone in the field and can dispose of whatever you cut to fair advantage, then the question is easy to solve. All you need is enough glass to produce enough stock to bring in a certain amount of revenue in a season. You can figure pretty well what your expenses will be by enumerating the larger items, such as labor, fuel, water, etc., and then making a liberal allowance for incidentals. You can do that better than I could do it for you. In figuring up what you ought to take in, you will have to take into consideration what kind of prices your market will pay. In one market the products from a house 25x100 may bring $1,000, while in another they may bring fully twenty-five per cent less. And finally after all is said and done, it will depend on the man in charge whether the business goes or not. I have known men who started on a small scale, and in the face of strong competition made a success, and they could do it again today. The fact remains, however, that the little fellow is at a great disadvantage in many ways, and it frequently requires fine management to keep his head above water.

After weighing the matter carefully, I believe that 10,000 feet should be the minimum amount of glass a wholesale grower of cut flowers should put up under average conditions, in the way of competition, prices obtainable, etc. Even then he will be obliged to specialize on one or two things in order to work to advantage. A. F. J. B.

CARNATION RUST.

I am sending a few leaves from some diseased carnation plants. The trouble has become bad on my young Crusader plants, the other varieties not being affected. Can this be checked? They are losing lots of foliage. R. B. T.

Your Crusader carnation plants are affected with the common carnation rust. This variety seems especially subject to this disease, and is ever ready to contract it after every check. To get rid of it, pick off all the spotted leaves and burn them. Spray these plants overhead just as little as possible, and give them every possible opportunity to grow. If they are well established, you might dust them with air-slaked lime, but don't do it unless the plants are well established. The disease, like many others, requires a certain amount of moisture to be active. When kept absolutely dry, it remains dormant and will do no harm. From this we have learned to keep the foliage dry, except to keep down spider, etc. A. F. J. B.

Malmaison Carnation Princess of Wales.

MALMAISON CARNATIONS.

Accompanying this is a reproduction of one of the Malmaison carnations, Princess of Wales, shown in a group of carnations by Hugh Low & Co., Bush Hill Park, London, which lifted the silver cup at the recent Temple flower show. These plants carried on an average sixty flowers and buds. This firm is one of the oldest and largest carnation growers in England. They grow three large houses full of the pink Malmaison, and handle some of the American varieties in similar fashion.

It will be interesting to the American carnation growers to know that the average Malmaison flower measures eight inches across, and realizes in Covent Garden market from six to twelve shillings per dozen, whereas Enchantress would bring from two to four shillings per dozen on the same market. Of course, the cut of the latter would be considerably heavier during the season. At present the Malmaison reigns supreme during the London season, yet all this is significant of the fact that there is still an opening for a carnation even larger than Enchantress or Nelson Fisher, particularly if it possessed the perfect pink shade of Malmaison Princess of Wales.

Many American growers smile at the antiquated method of propagating the Malmaison carnation followed in Europe, but it is practically impossible to propagate this class of carnation by cuttings and meet with any measure of success. Those which you did root would only produce flowers half the size of those propagated by layering. This will be most easily understood when it is taken into consideration that the wood of the layer or cutting is half an inch thick at the propagating period, which is July and August. During the winter months this plant lies dormant. We all agree that the Malmaison will gradually decrease in popularity, while the perpetual flowering carnation will increase.

MONTAGE C. ALLWOOD.

PLANTS FOR PARK.

We have a piece of ground to bed for a private park, and are puzzled as to the nature of plants to use. The bed is intended for a miniature mountain and runs east and west. It must be planted with hardy stock that will make a good show and withstand the winter weather. The temperature runs as low as zero and sometimes 5 to 10 degrees below. We can get any amount of hardy ferns, if you think that they can be transplanted safely. The ferns which we speak of would come from Pennsylvania. Ferns are wanted for the north side of the mountain. What shall we plant on the south side? The mountain has shade in the afternoon and partial shade in the morning. The outlet of an artificial lake passes around the north base of the mountain. The soil has been made good but has some gravel and rocks in it.

The gentleman who wishes this work done is a crank on flowers and has told us to go ahead and fix it up, and he would foot the bill. If you will kindly give us all the information that you can we shall appreciate it very much.

O. & H.

You do not give the dimensions of the miniature "mountain," which makes it difficult to advise as to the plants to be used. However, you can hardly go wrong in using for your taller plants such perennials as: Anemones, Japanese, St. Brigid and Virginian; aquilegias, Rocky Mountain Blue, long spurred yellow and Canadensis; Coreopsis lanceolata and C. verticillata, Oriental poppies, Helianthus rigidus, campanulas of sorts, delphiniums, foxgloves, phloxes, lilies, hemerocalis, boltonia, etc. For your dwarfer plants use: Phlox subulata, Campanula Carpatica and rotundifolia, Viola cornuta, Arabis alpina, Tunica saxifraga, aubrietias, dianthus of sorts, Iceland poppies, Geranium Carolinianum, Gypsophila gallioides, Saponaria ocymoides, primroses, veronicas, achilleas, etc. For more woody things use yuccas, filamentosa and glauca; Teucrium Chamædrys, Spiræa A. Waterer and S. callosa alba, artemisias, Plumbago Lady Larpent, perennial candytuft, Abelia Chinensis, Daphne Cneorum, etc.

Ferns should do well if given partial shade and not allowed to get dry. They are easily transplanted. Among your ferns might be planted some of our shade-loving plants, like our native orchids, smilacinas and thalictrums, with some of the finer grasses and wet ground irises. If there is to be sufficient moisture at some point at the base, alismas, sagittarias, orontium, arisemas, etc., will afford a pleasing variety.

The above list, supplied by J. F. Cowell, will make a fine show for two or three years, but herbaceous plantings are like shrubberies, never finished. There is needed a yearly transplanting or thinning out.

NEPHROLEPIS AMERPOHLII.

It is a far cry from Nephrolepis exaltata to its youngest descendant, Nephrolepis Amerpohlii, although it is only a few years since the development of the race began with the advent of the Boston fern. Amerpohlii is one of the filmy ferns, the first of which was Piersoni. The accompanying illustration gives a very fair idea of the lightness and grace of the broad frond. As in Elegantissima, Barrowsii and Whitmani, so in Amerpohlii are the pinnæ in themselves miniature fronds, in this case being subdivided and again subdivided ad infinitum.

Frond of Nephrolepis Amerpohlii.

This new fern originated with Edward Amerpohl, proprietor of the Janesville Floral Co., Janesville, Wis. He has been growing it for several years and has now worked up considerable stock. He thinks he has in it a most valuable novelty and all who have had the pleasure of seeing the plants have agreed with him. Thus far the stock shows no sign of degenerating; that is, there is no sign of reverting to the old Boston form.

Mr. Amerpohl will be at the convention next week with a display of his fern.

THE CYCLAMEN.

Its Commercial Production.

Every commercial grower will, I believe, concede that the cyclamen as usually handled is by no means an easy plant to grow, that is, to any degree of excellence, and at the same time return a fair margin of profit. Several years spent in raising these plants by continuous culture in pots convinced the writer that to produce them commercially required some different method, whereby less care and attention would be needed through the summer months, a method that would result in reducing the number of weak, undesirable specimens.

Every year would see at the harvest time a considerable number to be disposed of at a low price, and as the cost is no more to produce a plant selling for $3 than one bringing but 50 cents, it is easy to imagine the determination with which numerous experiments were conducted to gain the desired end.

To private gardeners, with whom cost of production is of small account, and cyclamen specialists, who are expressly equipped for production in large quantities, a great proportion of which move while in the 2-inch or 3-inch stage, this article may not prove of special interest, but it is the grower of a general line of plants for retail at his greenhouse or store, whose time is anybody's but his own, that I hope to assist, and perchance furnish food for thought to others.

Time to Sow Seeds.

To secure specimens of desirable size, seeds should be put in by October 15 at the latest. This allows fourteen months for the plants to reach maturity and be in bloom for Christmas of the following year. For reasons given later, it is preferable to begin operations between August 15 and September 1. A passing reference to the importance of using none but the best strains of seed obtainable is sufficient.

Flats for Seeds.

Seeds may be sown either in earthen pans or wooden flats, but for convenience in handling, and inasmuch as sowing in straight rows is one of the smaller features of this method, specially constructed flats are advised. These may be made of any kind of lumber, although planed cypress is preferable as being more durable and in the end cheaper. Each flat requires six pieces of ½-inch material 2½x18 inches for sides and bottom, and two pieces of 1-inch material 2½x12 inches for the ends. Nail together as ordinarily, except one side, which should be fastened to the ends with four screws. We then have a flat 2½x12x16 inches, with provision for drainage, and a detachable side for use when seedlings are large enough to prick out. Two coats of paint will increase the life of a flat fourfold, and besides contribute to cleanliness.

Sowing the Seeds.

As cyclamen seeds are slow to germinate, it pays to take extra pains in preparing the soil in which they are to be sown. Not only must it be of such a nature as to remain in good mechanical condition in spite of repeated waterings, but precaution should be taken against its souring also. All weed seeds, worms, insects, fungous spores and other objectionable matter should be destroyed or killed by exposure to strong heat.

Although elaborate to a degree almost British, a mixture in the following proportion has given invariably good results: One bushel new soil made of well rotted sod from medium to light land, one peck leaf-mold or rotted peat, a 6-inch potful of finely broken, not pulverized, charcoal, the same of clean, coarse sand, not gravel, and a double handful of air-slaked lime; no manure should be used.

Pass the soil and leaf-mold through a sieve of ½-inch mesh, mix all ingredients and bake two hours in a quick oven. When cool, sift again to reduce any lumps which may form by the heating, fill flats even full, press with a board to firm the soil, leaving a level surface about half an inch below the top edge of the flat.

Using one corner of a square stick sixteen inches long, make eight or ten V-shaped depressions or furrows about one-quarter of an inch deep, running lengthwise of the flat; into these drop the seeds about half an inch apart, and cover to a depth not to exceed four diameters of the seed when the soil is firmed. Sown at this rate, a flat of the dimensions given will accommodate from 250 to 325 seeds, according to the number of rows.

Place where the temperature does not vary much from 70 degrees, also where they cannot fail to come under daily observation; but do not allow any drip on them or do not place on a bench containing soil.

Water as occasion demands, keeping the soil evenly moist but not soaked. An occasional slight stirring of the soil between the rows as soon as the seedlings are well up, also the removal of any mossy growth liable to appear on the surface, will aid in keeping the soil sweet, and will encourage sturdiness.

Transplanting.

By December or January the seedlings should be large enough to prick out. Remove the detachable side, cut midway between the rows with a knife, when the whole or part of a row as desired can be taken out intact and the soil carefully broken away without loss or injury to the roots.

Some plants of extra size might be put at once into thumb pots, but experience has shown that better results are obtained, also less care and attention are required, by transplanting all into similar flats, keeping those of a size together to encourage more even growth.

Soil for this operation need not be heated, but should consist of the same ingredients as that used in sowing seed, with the addition of a 4-inch pot of finely ground sheep manure; or, if this is not obtainable, use sod with which a small amount of stable manure has been incorporated when rotting.

When pricked out, the seedlings should stand about two inches apart each way, and should be at 70 degrees as before.

Subsequent treatment will be described in an early issue. GEO. S. OSBORN.

NOTES FROM ENGLAND.

For many years past the Royal Sovereign strawberry, probably Messrs. Laxtons' greatest success in any new variety, has been the great money maker for the fruit growers in all parts of the United Kingdom. The only fault of this valuable variety has been that it is more liable to the attacks of mildew than any other sort, and this year the disease has had the best of the growers.

I notice an inquiry in the REVIEW of July 5 as to whether lilies can be had in bloom in first-rate condition in November, and a reply that November is the most difficult month of the year to get liliums in bloom. This may be so in America, but in England it is one of the best blooming months for retarded longiflorum and auratum. They would come out of cold storage during the last week in June, and would not have been in storage more than about four months. That time would hardly commence to affect the bulbs so far as future successful growth was concerned. It is when liliums have to be kept in cold storage until along in October, and are required to bloom in February and March, that the effect of cold storage is the worst. One of the greatest points to observe is to induce the bulbs to make ample root growth before the top growth gets many inches high, and in England this is accomplished by covering the pots with six or eight inches of dry straw and standing them in a shady place outside, unless a large and lofty house can be spared during the growing period. This forms an ideal place to grow retarded liliums, when heavily shaded during the summer months. A small house, where the atmosphere is confined, tends to make the bulbs make too much top growth before sufficient roots are formed, and this is always at the expense of satisfactory flowering. J. ALL READY AT DAYTON

TROUBLE WITH SMILAX.

I am having trouble with something eating the leaves on the young shoots of smilax. It seems to be a small black fly, as that is the only insect I can find in the greenhouse. I have chrysanthemums, Asparagus plumosus, Sprengeri and some other plants in the same house, all doing well. The smilax is the only thing attacked. Could some one give a remedy? M. B. F.

I am not acquainted with any black fly that troubles smilax. There is a worm that is often troublesome. If it is a fly or aphis, try successive fumigations with tobacco dust, but not too strong, as the tender growths are easily hurt. If that does not do the trick, then fumigate with hydrocyanic acid gas. W. S.

DENVER, COL.—F. L. Reid is starting on plans for a $1,000 addition to his range of houses on West Thirty-fifth avenue.

BLACK SPOT.

The season is now approaching when Beauties are liable to be attacked by black spot, and every grower of these who is alive to his best interests should be on the lookout for the trouble and be ready to stamp it out as soon as it makes its appearance.

Houses which are situated on low, marshy ground, or where they are too much sheltered, and where naturally the foliage is soft, will be the first to suffer. Care should be taken to keep the atmosphere of the house in as dry a condition as is consistent with the health of the plants. Avoid all sudden fluctuations of temperature, and be sure to have the foliage dry by sundown.

To prevent and hold this fungus in check, a spraying of carbonate of copper is recommended, using three ounces of the carbonate and one quart of ammonia to fifty gallons of water; apply once a week.

Cleanliness and care play an important part in preventing and checking the spread of this trouble.

Those leaves at the base of the stem which touch the soil should be picked off, as it is there the trouble usually begins. All ripe, spotted and decaying leaves should be carefully picked off every day and destroyed. If this treatment is persisted in for a few weeks, and special care taken not to overwater so as to check root action, if the temperature is kept right and intelligent ventilation practiced, this disease need give us little trouble. Ribes.

TROUBLE WITH NEMATODES.

I have greenhouses in which I have raised tomatoes for several years; the plants are in the ground, not on benches. They have become infested with nematodes. Being told that each species of plant life has its own kind of nematodes, which would trouble nothing else, I put cucumbers, beans and some carnations in the same house. The first two became infested, but so far the carnations are untouched. I want to put some roses in also. Will they become infested? A. L. H.

That there are innumerable species of nematodes, both parasitic and free-living, is certain, but that there is a separate species for each plant or animal appears to be a far-fetched theory, and quite beyond my powers of research.

The free-living forms are found everywhere, in salt water and fresh, in damp earth, moss, and among decaying substances. They are always minute in size and, like many other lower forms of life, are capable of retaining their vitality for a long period, even when dried, which accounts for their wide distribution.

If the soil is good and properly enriched, and the rose plants are of good constitution and properly handled after benching, there is little danger to be apprehended from eel worms.

It would not be advisable to plant roses in any worn-out soil, however rich the fertilizer may be, as they rarely do well in soil which has been in use in greenhouses until it has been exposed to the open air a sufficient length of time to recuperate. Try fresh, virgin soil, with the addition of one-fifth of its bulk of decomposed cow manure, thoroughly incorporated, and give your roses a chance. Ribes.

S. S. PENNOCK, MEEHAN CO.

The most important combination ever made in the wholesale commission business of Philadelphia was effected this week, when it was announced that Samuel S. Pennock and Charles E. Meehan, the latter of the Philadelphia Wholesale Flower Market, had agreed to form a partnership to be incorporated under the name of S. S. Pennock, Meehan Co., with a capital of $60,000.

This news was the more surprising because both houses stood among the leaders in the wholesale business, and it was believed the competition between them was very keen. It is thought that the fact that both Mr. Pennock and Mr. Meehan have summer cottages at Ocean City, N. J., may have led to confidential chats during their daily trip from and to the shore, enabling them to reach an agreement that would not have been possible under ordinary circumstances.

The new firm will carry on business at 1608-1618 Ludlow street, Mr. Pennock's present quarters, and they believe that they will be in a better position than ever before to handle and distribute cut flowers and supplies.

Charles E. Meehan.

Samuel S. Pennock started in business in 1888, with his brother, Charles E. Pennock, who was the pioneer wholesale florist of Philadelphia. At that time the business was carried on in the basement of a plumber's shop at Sixteenth and Sansom streets, and it was of modest size. Mr. Pennock threw his whole energy into his work and gradually developed it, taking entire charge after the death of his brother, until it reached its present splendid proportions. He is a hard worker, an excellent organizer, genial, kindly, full of enthusiasm, and commands the absolute confidence of his business associates.

Charles E. Meehan was for many years salesman for John Burton, commencing when he was hardly tall enough to see over the counter on which he placed the flowers. He was known as the best salesman in his city. About 1886 he went into business for himself, building greenhouses in Germantown, where he prospered exceedingly. In 1902 he was chosen as manager for the Philadelphia Wholesale Flower Market. He has pushed this business with such perseverance that from being of rather doubtful strength it has become one of the strongest commission houses in the city. Mr. Meehan is now the controlling stockholder. He is a wonderfully good judge of supply and demand, of quality in flowers and plants and an excellent buyer. Like Mr. Pennock, he is far-seeing, punctual and systematic. There can be no question that these two young men will make the new firm a brilliant success.

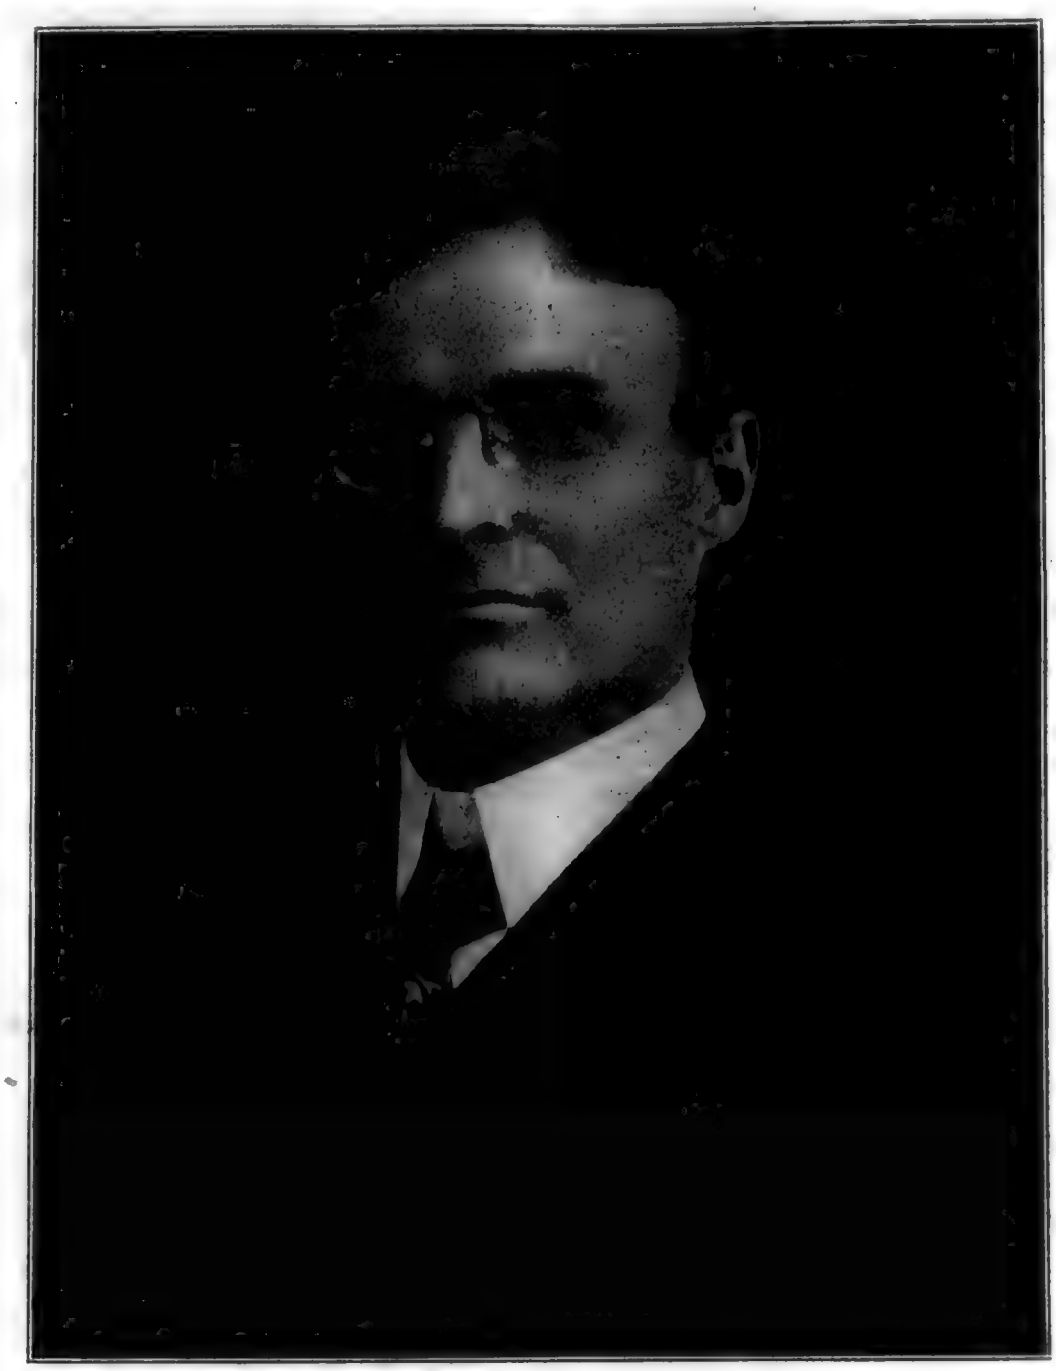
NEW YORK.

The Market.



The hot, humid weather of the last month beats the record. The last week has been no exception to the rule. Every day it has rained heavily. The heat, too, has been excessive, and the quantity and condition of the flowers reaching the wholesale market may be better imagined than described. The consensus of opinion is that July and August of 1906 have so far established a record for abundance of stock, lack of quality and unsatisfactory results.

A great many of the roses coming to the market these hot days are anything but satisfactory in quality, and it is necessary to close them out at a great reduction from even the low quoted prices. There is no demand for asters. Pretty nearly everything is unloaded at the buyers' option. There is absolutely no limit to the gladioli. The sources of supply are very numerous this year. The beautiful pink variety, America, from Childs, of Floral Park, maintains its popularity. The next surplus announcement will doubtless be of the dahlia. Hydrangeas are abundant, and a trip through the suburbs of New York demonstrates that the supply is inexhaustible.

The wet weather has had a bad effect upon outdoor stock, especially the asters. Carnations are poor. There seems to be an excess of valley, and lilies have depreciated. There is little prospect of a change for the better in the market before the first part of September.

The Convention Trip.

The interest in the Dayton convention grows daily. Walter Sheridan reports all the berths in one car booked, which, at this early date, is more than encouraging. You may safely put down New York as good for fifty, and it is quite possible this total will be added to when the magnificent entertainments promised by the Dayton people are thoughtfully considered. The train leaves the Grand Central depot at Forty-second street at 2:04 p. m. on Monday. Chairman Nugent, of the catering department, has forgotten nothing that will tend to make the trip an enjoyable one from beginning to end.

Samuel S. Pennock.

Various Notes.

A visit to the great gladiolus farms of John Lewis Childs, Floral Park, last week revealed a scene of expansive and variegated coloring such as I never have before witnessed. Over 125 acres are devoted to the cultivation of this king of summer flowering bulbs, and as the average production is 80,000 to the acre, you can reckon for yourself the enormous output yearly. There are over 400 named varieties, the most popular one of all to date being America, a beautiful soft pink. I am indebted to I. S. Hendrickson, for whom a beautiful white and deep pink gladiolus was named, for many courtesies, and my visit to the offices, greenhouses, bulb warehouse, and printing offices was made of a special interest. Mr. Childs himself is busy in the preparation of his new catalogue. An enormous increase in the value of real estate in this section has demonstrated the foresight of Mr. Childs. The firm will send a fine exhibit of gladioli to Dayton, under the supervision of Mr. Hendrickson.

Two interested visitors at the establishment of Anton Schultheis, of College Point, August 10, were Mr. Pfister, of Washington, D. C., and J. F. Huss, of Hartford, Conn. Mr. Schultheis has ten acres of fine land, bought years ago, before the boom, that cannot be purchased today for less than $3,000 an acre. It was seventeen years ago that he made his first purchase here. Now he has one of the most complete horticultural plants on Long Island. Thirty-seven houses are devoted to a large variety of stock for the New York market, and great quantities are shipped every season all over the country. He has a splendid stock of ficus, large assortments of the popular ferns, houses of kentias, orchids, begonias, ardisias, double daisies, primulas, cyclamens, asparagus, ericas, dracænas, cycas, oranges, etc. Mr. Schultheis is just completing a new packing shed, 45x66.

The Schultheis boys are enjoying a holiday in Sullivan county. These youngsters, of whom there are seven, have now four greenhouses of their own, where they are taught practically the methods that have made their father so successful.

R. Dreyer and family have just returned from a two weeks' holiday in Sullivan county and the Thousand Islands. Gerard Dreyer leaves on Saturday for Neversink, N. Y., and will end his vacation at Dayton and Niagara Falls. Mr. Dreyer, Sr., has eight and a half acres of land here which has risen rapidly in value, and on which he has planted a splendid stock of hydrangeas, ficus and California privet, thousands of the latter averaging four to six feet in height. The greenhouses are filled with dracænas, palms, and Scottii, Boston and other ferns. Some extra fine phœnix and cycas add to the interest of the exhibit.

Van Praag will open his new store at 66 Broadway, close to the entrance of the subway at New street, on September 1. This is one of the best possible locations in the Wall street district, and ought to prove a most profitable venture.

Will Siebrecht, of Astoria, is so busy rebuilding his houses, which have been shortened on account of the widening of the boulevard, that he finds it impossible to complete his improvements in time for the Dayton convention.

John Nash and family are at North Asbury Park, N. J.

Phil Kessler left on Tuesday for a four weeks' trip to Germany. Many of the members of the Cut Flower Exchange and his brother wholesalers saw him off with appropriate celebration.

A. M. Henshaw is residing at Summit, N. J., and has, during the last two weeks, given most of his time to visiting his growers.

James Maloney, bookkeeper for Horace E. Froment, has returned from his vacation at Greenwood Lake. Mr. Froment himself left on Monday for Lake George.

W. H. Gunther has taken his brother, Jack, into partnership, and from September 1 the new firm will be known as Gunther Bros. This is a fitting reward for eighteen years of faithful service.

Arthur Dacre has purchased the wholesale establishment of R. G. Wilson, on West Thirtieth street, and will conduct the business hereafter on his own account.

A. Warendorff is recovering rapidly from the effects of the operation last week for appendicitis.

Max Limprecht died at his residence in Hoboken August 10, at the age of 45 years. He was buried on Sunday, and many beautiful floral offerings were sent to the bereaved family. Wreaths from Ford Bros. and an immense standing wreath from John J. Perkins were among the offerings of the wholesalers. Mr. Limprecht left an estate valued at over $30,000. He was a Master Mason. For over twenty years he has conducted a florists' supply business on West Thirtieth street. Every year he has had charge of the immense decorations in St. Patrick's cathedral, and his greatest accomplishment was the superb decoration of the Dewey arches. The immediate cause of his death was locomotor ataxia. He was faithful and tireless at all times, and was respected by all who knew him. The business will be continued by the family and will be in charge of his son, who has been for a long time associated with him.

The French bulbs are arriving in large quantities and their quality is up to the standard. All the seed stores are busy and fall shipments promise to be enormous. The Thorburn Co. is now comfortably settled in its new and commodious store, reaching through from Park place to Barclay street, and larger and more convenient in every way than the one they occupied on Cortlandt street. The new station being built by the Pennsylvania on Thorburn's old site reaches through to Fulton street and, whether by foresight or good fortune, the new store of William Elliott & Sons is directly across the street from the entrance.

All these wholesale bulb and vegetable men will have an abundant field for their operations in the new scheme which the Long Island railroad is developing. Two hundred thousand acres of waste land on Long Island is to be converted into market gardens. This is the land which the farmers considered useless. A stretch was purchased and developed by the railroad company, and extra cultivation given it, and it has been demonstrated that every acre can be made profitable. The Wading River station was called the most desolate, the soil sour and with a depth of only three to six inches. Agricultural experts were invited to study the experiments made upon the soil and they have been declared entirely satisfactory.

Mr. Wertheimber, of Wertheimber & Co., is back from two weeks' stay in the Catskills, and Mr. Lessner, of the Yokohama Nursery Co., is testing the same grade of ozone.

Will Elliott is recuperating by frequent voyages to the fishing banks and indulging in his favorite game of bowls. He was bemoaning the loss of the silver loving-cup won from his club by the Kearneyites last Saturday. His brother is taking the waters at Saratoga. J. B. Kidd, many years ago with William Elliott & Sons, and later with the Hinode Florist Co., has returned to his former love and is again with the old house.

Roderick, brother of Patrick O'Mara, has been very sick for some weeks from affection of the lungs and heart and was seriously ill on Monday. He has been many years with the Peter Henderson Co. and is very popular with all his associates.

H. H. Berger & Co. report the safe arrival of their French bulb shipments and a sufficiency of 7x9 Harrisii to fill fifty per cent of the orders, which is a better average than many give.

J. Frank Darrow will make his annual call on his customers about October 1.

J. Austin Shaw.

terially changed regarding other flowers, except that prices are a little lower on roses. Gladioli are still plentiful and create quite a demand. White hydrangeas are plentiful. Greens are selling a little better than two weeks ago, especially asparagus and maidenhair fern.

A Step in Advance.

The Leo Niessen Co. has completed arrangements by which it will come into possession of three floors, that is, basement, first and second floor, of a new building that is being erected at 1209 Arch street. This building is of the most modern type, being of concrete construction, and equipped with all the latest improvements. One of the features in the new quarters will be an artificial refrigerating plant of the best make. There will be two cooling rooms, one in the cellar, with a capacity of about 2,500 cubic feet, and one cooling room on the first floor, having a capacity of about 4,000 cubic feet. The entire first floor will be devoted to the sale of cut flowers. The supply department and office will be on the second floor.

It will be the aim of the Leo Niessen Co., to make its new quarters the best equipped wholesale establishment in the country. The business has been growing rapidly and for the last two years had outgrown the present quarters. This move will increase the capacity of the Leo Niessen Co. threefold.

Mr. Niessen is a very strong believer in the future of the commission house, and he claims that it is an established fact that the commission man is the most advantageous channel by which the grower can dispose of his product, and for the retailer the most reliable source of supply.

After the Meeting.

The August meeting of the Florists' Club had adjourned. The debate had been exciting, lasting until later than usual, and the members were scattered about in groups talking eagerly, when the president rapped for order. Silence, or something approaching it, having been restored, he said: "I hope each member will do all in his power to convince the florists whom he meets at Dayton that we want them here next summer." There is no doubt of that. Every member present agreed that we ought to have a convention, and a really good convention at that. Our last meeting was held at Atlantic City in 1893. We hope those who came there enjoyed themselves and will want to come here next summer, and we hope those who have never been here will come and see what we have to show them. We have Independence hall, the Liberty Bell, Betsy Ross's house, a magnificent natural park, Memorial and Horticultural halls, with their gardens; Girard college with its beautiful grounds; the magnificent greenhouses and grounds at Riverton, the perfect trial grounds at Doylestown, unequaled supply houses, splendidly equipped seed and commission houses, and a progressive lot of palm, fern, rose, carnation, violet and Easter plant growers.

Better come to Philadelphia in 1907.

Wissinoming.

"I could not buy plants like these," said Lemuel Ball, as he displayed house after house of nicely grown stock that it did one's heart good to see. Kentias were the staple crop, a house being devoted to this or that size of Belmoreana or Forsteriana, either in single or made-up plants. The larger sizes of both these varieties are particularly fine. The 6-inch and the 5-inch sizes also showed the effect of skilful culture. Areca lutescens is grown in limited numbers. Latania Borbonica and Livistona rotundifolia are important side lines, well done. A feature of the place is Dracæna terminalis, which Mr. Ball has learned to color beautifully. The plants in all sizes were very thrifty. Cocos Weddelliana, Pandanus Veitchii, an assortment of crotons, Ficus pandurata and two of the fancy-leaved Bostons, N. Barrowsii and Piersoni (the former is preferred) are also grown.

A bed outside in front of Mr. Ball's home, and surrounded by a neatly trimmed lawn of velvet, was of more than usual beauty. It was a circle of perhaps six feet, planted with the best bedding varieties of crotons and edged with well-colored Pandanus Veitchii. Mr. Ball is a plant lover with ideas worth considering. Here is one:

"Proper atmosphere is just as necessary in growing good plants as proper soil, maybe more so. Plants don't like too much fire heat."

Wyncote.

Joseph Heacock evidently believes that the kentia is still the palm and that the American Beauty is still the rose. A glance at his place shows this to be true, also that he knows how to grow kentias and Beauties to perfection. Among the kentias some pretty specimens are made up, a Forsteriana in the center and Belmoreanas around it. The palms closely sold in the spring are now grown into fine, salable plants in all the sizes. The Beauties are full of vigor, breaking strongly from the base. Other foliage plants there are Dracæna terminalis, Cocos Weddelliana, Nephrolepis Whitmani, etc.; other roses, too: Liberty, strong two and three-year-old, cut back and replanted in bed and bench; Killarney, only as lesser lights, set along around the stars; carnations also, and cypripediums; a place full of good stock. Cleanliness and system are in evidence everywhere. A new shed and cellar are the latest improvements.

Various Notes.

Through an error the fare to Dayton was published last week as $26.07. It should be $20.67. For single fare to Dayton $15.50 is paid at this end. A certificate from the secretary of the S. A. F. entitles you to a one-third rate of $5.17 for return ticket, bought in Dayton.

John Westcott, chairman of the transportation committee, Ridge and Lehigh avenues, announces that the Philadelphia party will leave via the Pennsylvania at 4:30 p. m. Monday, August 20, arriving at Dayton at 9 a. m. August 21.

Visitors in town, reported by M. Rice & Co., C. Young, St. Louis; Henry Pfister, Washington.

Alphonse Pericat, of Collingdale, orchid specialist, is building a new greenhouse for cattleyas.

Louis A. Couché, of Seventy-second and Haverford avenue, West Philadelphia, has 150,000 feet of sashes devoted to violets. He grows four varieties, La France, Princess of Wales, California, and Luxonne, and is exceptionally successful.

E. J. Ludwig, Allegheny, was a visitor reported by H. Bayersdorfer & Co.

H. E. McDermott, of The Fernery, Baltimore, was in this city recently.

A. Farenwald, of Roslyn, has this week completed planting his new trussed houses with Richmond roses.

Israel Rosnowsky, with H. F. Michell Co., will go to the convention and take a business trip through Ohio and Pennsylvania.

Leo Niessen is going to the convention.

Charles E. Meehan will be in Dayton next week.

Fred J. Michell will meet you in the exhibition hall.

Edward J. Fancourt, right-hand man at S. S. Pennock's, will be at the convention.

Paul Berkowitz is going to the convention.

Charles D. Ball, W. H. Taplin and Charles D. Ball, Jr., are going to the convention.

William P. Craig is going to the convention.

You will see John Westcott at the convention.

Be sure to go to the convention and vote for Philadelphia in 1907.

Edward Reid is extending the hand of fellowship to his friends in the south.

The Henry A. Dreer Co. will be represented at Dayton by some of its brightest stars.

George F. Christie, of Clifton Heights, is sending fine asters to W. J. Baker.

W. E. McKissick has wonderfully improved the interior of his store, the changes giving additional space.

J. G. Whilldin has been enjoying the breezes at Ocean Grove.

Charles D. Ball has added Ficus elastica once more to his list. Palm orders with him are ahead of last season.

Bowling.

The final games in the bowling tourney have been rolled; Dame Fortune has smiled on her favorites. F. Adelberger, D. T. Connor, W. Falck, William Graham and William Robertson, with Samuel Dunlap substitute, make a good team and one that will battle manfully for the honor of the Quaker City at Dayton next week.

Answers to Correspondents.

Review readers are invited to send any questions relating to culture or marketing of plants and flowers in Philadelphia, to Phil, in care of the leading seed or commission houses or the Flower Market. Each question will be submitted to a competent person and answered under number. Correct name and address must always accompany inquiry, but will not be published.

55.—My yearly pay roll amounts to twenty-two per cent of my gross receipts. How does that compare with other growers?

A.—One of our most successful growers of bulbous stock, asters, ferns, Easter lilies, etc., states that his yearly pay roll does not exceed fifteen per cent of his gross receipts. A carnation grower of high repute writes that his yearly pay roll does not exceed eighteen per cent of his gross receipts. A rose grower, whose standard is high, considers thirty per cent as about right, while a grower of miscellaneous pot plants, flowering and foliage, believes that twenty-two per cent is low, stating that his own figures are much higher.

A glance at his place shows this to be true, also that he knows how to grow kentias and Beauties to perfection. Among the kentias some pretty specimens are made up, a Forsteriana in the center and Belmoreanas around it. The palms closely sold in the spring are now grown into fine, salable plants in all the sizes. The Beauties are full of vigor, breaking strongly from the base. Other foliage plants there are Dracæna terminalis, Cocos Weddelliana, Nephrolepis Whitmani, etc.; other roses, too: Liberty, strong two and three-year-old, cut back and replanted in bed and bench; Killarney, only as lesser lights, set along around the stars; carnations also, and cypripediums; a place full of good stock. Cleanliness and system are in evidence everywhere. A new shed and cellar are the latest improvements.

Various Notes.

Through an error the fare to Dayton was published last week as $26.07. It should be $20.67. For single fare to Dayton $15.50 is paid at this end. A certificate from the secretary of the S. A. F. entitles you to a one-third rate of $5.17 for return ticket, bought in Dayton.

John Westcott, chairman of the transportation committee, Ridge and Lehigh avenues, announces that the Philadelphia party will leave via the Pennsylvania at 4:30 p. m. Monday, August 20, arriving at Dayton at 9 a. m. August 21.

Visitors in town, reported by M. Rice & Co., C. Young, St. Louis; Henry Pfister, Washington.

Alphonse Pericat, of Collingdale, orchid specialist, is building a new greenhouse for cattleyas.

Louis A. Couché, of Seventy-second and Haverford avenue, West Philadelphia, has 150,000 feet of sashes devoted to violets. He grows four varieties, La France, Princess of Wales, California, and Luxonne, and is exceptionally successful.

E. J. Ludwig, Allegheny, was a visitor reported by H. Bayersdorfer & Co.

H. E. McDermott, of The Fernery, Baltimore, was in this city recently.

A. Farenwald, of Roslyn, has this week completed planting his new trussed houses with Richmond roses.

Israel Rosnowsky, with H. F. Michell Co., will go to the convention and take a business trip through Ohio and Pennsylvania.

Leo Niessen is going to the convention.

Charles E. Meehan will be in Dayton next week.

Fred J. Michell will meet you in the exhibition hall.

Edward J. Fancourt, right-hand man at S. S. Pennock's, will be at the convention.

Paul Berkowitz is going to the convention.

Charles D. Ball, W. H. Taplin and Charles D. Ball, Jr., are going to the convention.

William P. Craig is going to the convention.

You will see John Westcott at the convention.

Be sure to go to the convention and vote for Philadelphia in 1907.

Edward Reid is extending the hand of fellowship to his friends in the south.

The Henry A. Dreer Co. will be represented at Dayton by some of its brightest stars.

George F. Christie, of Clifton Heights, is sending fine asters to W. J. Baker.

W. E. McKissick has wonderfully improved the interior of his store, the changes giving additional space.

J. G. Whilldin has been enjoying the breezes at Ocean Grove.

Charles D. Ball has added Ficus elastica once more to his list. Palm orders with him are ahead of last season.

Bowling.

The final games in the bowling tourney have been rolled; Dame Fortune has smiled on her favorites. F. Adelberger, D. T. Connor, W. Falck, William Graham and William Robertson, with Samuel Dunlap substitute, make a good team and one that will battle manfully for the honor of the Quaker City at Dayton next week.

Answers to Correspondents.

Review readers are invited to send any questions relating to culture or marketing of plants and flowers in Philadelphia, to Phil, in care of the leading seed or commission houses or the Flower Market. Each question will be submitted to a competent person and answered under number. Correct name and address must always accompany inquiry, but will not be published.

55.—My yearly pay roll amounts to twenty-two per cent of my gross receipts. How does that compare with other growers?

A.—One of our most successful growers of bulbous stock, asters, ferns, Easter lilies, etc., states that his yearly pay roll does not exceed fifteen per cent of his gross receipts. A carnation grower of high repute writes that his yearly pay roll does not exceed eighteen per cent of his gross receipts. A rose grower, whose standard is high, considers thirty per cent as about right, while a grower of miscellaneous pot plants, flowering and foliage, believes that twenty-two per cent is low, stating that his own figures are much higher.

Greenhouse Heating.

A MODERN HEATING PLANT.

The new heating plant of Bassett & Washburn, at Hinsdale, Ill., contains some novel features which will be interesting for those who contemplate building or renewing their heating systems. The boiler-house is of brick, on concrete foundations, being 50x125 feet in size. In the center of the house is an immense stack, 135 feet high and eight feet six inches in diameter at the top. This stack is made of steel. It is firmly bolted to a concrete foundation twenty-five feet square and ten feet in depth. On each side of the stack are five boilers, 150 horse-power each, making a total battery of ten boilers with 1,500 horse-power. These boilers rest on a solid concrete foundation made twenty-six feet wide, 100 feet long, and two feet thick. The boilers are connected with a steam header which is connected to the two main flows entering the greenhouses. All connections are made with goose-neck bends. The object of these goose-neck bends is to provide for any expansion or contraction of the pipes.

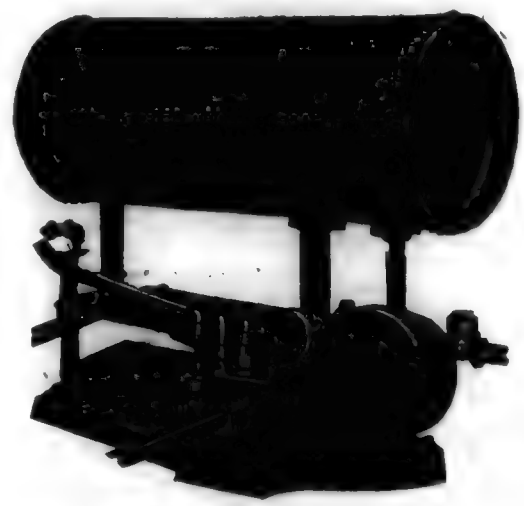
Each boiler is arranged with valves so that it can be run independently of any other, or all can be run together. Leaving the boiler-house the two main flows are carried overhead in a central aisle in the middle of the greenhouses. The smaller pipes for heating each house are so connected with each flow that either of the main flows can be worked separately or run together. The main flow is ten inches in diameter starting from the boiler and tapering down to four inches in diameter at the extreme end, which is 800 feet from the boiler.

The condensation or return pipes commence at the houses nearest the boilers and flow to the further end, when the water returns to the vacuum pump. This vacuum pump is the main center of the heating system, as it sucks the condensation back and pumps it into a large steel tank, from which it is pumped into the boilers, almost as hot as when it left.

Each boiler is equipped with a Jones underfeed stoker, which mechanically supplies the coal to the fires. A small pea coal gives the best results. This heating plant is located in a residence section of Hinsdale, so it is necessary for Bassett & Washburn to provide some means of doing away with the smoke, and these stokers do the work very nicely.

SOLVES HEATING PROBLEMS.

"Every pipe in the greenhouse of equal heat," is a condition striven for by all progressive growers utilizing steam heat. This is not a difficult matter when approached in the right way.



The old systems of gravity returns by placing the boilers below the ground, or the employment of a pump to return the water to the boiler against the steam pressure, are fast becoming obsolete, as involving too great an expense as well as an immense amount of trouble. In their place has appeared the return steam trap. Although a great improvement over the old methods, the steam trap at the introductory period had one main drawback—too complicated and always in need of attention and repairs.

With a full understanding of the situation, the Morehead Manufacturing Co., of Detroit, designed and introduced to the trade a tilting trap, which was quickly taken up by many of the largest and best known growers, and is now in very general use. Once installed, it requires no further attention, but at once shows a saving in fuel, equipment, labor and repairs, often beyond the expectations of its purchaser.

The trap will take water from the condensing surfaces of steam heating systems and automatically return it into the boiler as feed water, filling the dual capacity of steam trap and feed water pump. This is accomplished regardless of the position of the returns, whether above or below the water line in the boiler.

In construction the trap is extremely simple, consisting of a cylindrical steel tank receiver swung on a trunnion and actuated by a counter-weight of suitable size. A second counter-weight is so connected that it automatically operates a steam admission and an air relief valve. A steam port and two water connections, the latter provided with check valves for maintaining a flow in one direction, completes the list of trap parts.

The condensation in the returns is forced into the trap tank by the steam pressure from behind. When the tank has received a requisite amount of water it tilts, automatically opening the live steam valve, admitting steam at boiler pressure to the tank, thereby equalizing the pressure in the system and permitting the contents to flow into the boiler by gravity. The air relief valve before mentioned prevents the trap from becoming air-bound. All moving and adjustable parts are entirely outside, consequently easily accessible.

The trap requires no attention; needs no cylinder lubrication; will not race or run away; never sticks; is noiseless; occupies a minimum amount of space; requires no foundation, and, above all, will handle water at any temperature.

These notes on a useful invention are brought to mind by the receipt from the Morehead Manufacturing Co. of an attractive booklet devoted to the interests of florists and greenhouse owners in general.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

There is little business, and it is just as well that it is so, as there are few flowers coming in. The demand seems to be greater for asters than for any other flower, and as a consequence these are sold up clean on sight, and more could be disposed of to advantage. Gladioli are in heavy supply, and sell but poorly. The demand is more for the lighter colors, which can be used in funeral work. Roses are not plentiful, and the quality is poor. Carnations are also scarce. It will not be long now till there will be a good supply of these flowers, and they will be given a hearty welcome.

Vacation Time.

This is the time of vacations among the florists, and many of the craft are out of the city enjoying a well-earned rest. The following are among those who are away:

Nicholas Weber and wife are visiting at Chicago and Milwaukee, and Nick writes that the fishing is fine.

Fred Gear and wife are taking in the wonders of Yellowstone National Park.

Miss Laura Murphy, daughter of William Murphy, is visiting at Birmingham, Ala.

William Murphy and wife leave shortly for Erie, Pa., going from there by boat to Chicago. Mr. Murphy expects to continue from that city to Los Angeles, Cal., for a visit among relatives.

C. E. Critchell and wife have just returned from a trip east.

Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Kyrk are spending a few days near Tiffin, O.

The writer, while strolling down the far-famed board walk at Atlantic City, was pleasantly surprised at meeting two of the lady florists of this city. They were Miss Laura Steigler and Mrs. A. Garges. Both were enjoying themselves greatly, and thought Atlantic City the greatest summer resort they ever had visited. They expected to remain a couple of weeks.

Various Notes.

George Tromey is passing around the cigars to his friends. It is a boy, and in consequence George's chest has expanded several inches.

All the arrangements have been made for the Cincinnati delegation to the convention at Dayton. This will be my last chance to remind the craft in this city to be on hand promptly. Our train leaves the C. H. & D. depot promptly at 8:15 a. m. Everything points to a great crowd from this city, and we are going to have the time of our lives.

C. S. Ford, of Philadelphia, was a caller, as also was William Lodder, of Hamilton, O. C. J. Ohmer.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Business in funeral work must have been good last week, as several prominent men died. In other lines everything is dull, as usual, at this time of the year.

We have had some good rains, which were badly needed by the outdoor stock. All of last week there was a big demand for white stock. Kaiserin roses are the best on the market. Just now a few good Golden Gate are to be had. Bride and Maid are poor. Beauties are coming in better, with a big demand for all grades. There are some very good field-grown carnations coming in, though rather short in stem. Extra fancy are out of question just now. Some extra good lily of the valley is seen.

Asters are in heavy supply, much poor stock being in the market. Gladioli are still plentiful and sell slowly. Tuberose stalks sell well. Hydrangeas are just coming in and were quite a help to the trade last week.

Greens of all classes are abundant, except galax.

Alexander Waldbart, Jr., aged 31 years, was probably fatally injured last Friday morning by falling from the second story window of his home. He sustained internal injuries in addition to minor hurts.

Club Meeting.

The St. Louis Florists' Club held its regular meeting August 9. The attendance numbered thirty. The meeting was opened by Vice-President John Steidle, President Ammann being delayed. The trustees reported that they had $38 left from the picnic, which was placed in the entertainment fund.

Fred H. Meinhardt, who has charge of the transportation to Dayton, reported that the St. Louis delegation will number twenty-five and will leave Monday night, August 20, at 8:15 over the Vandalia road, arriving at Dayton Tuesday morning at 8 a. m.

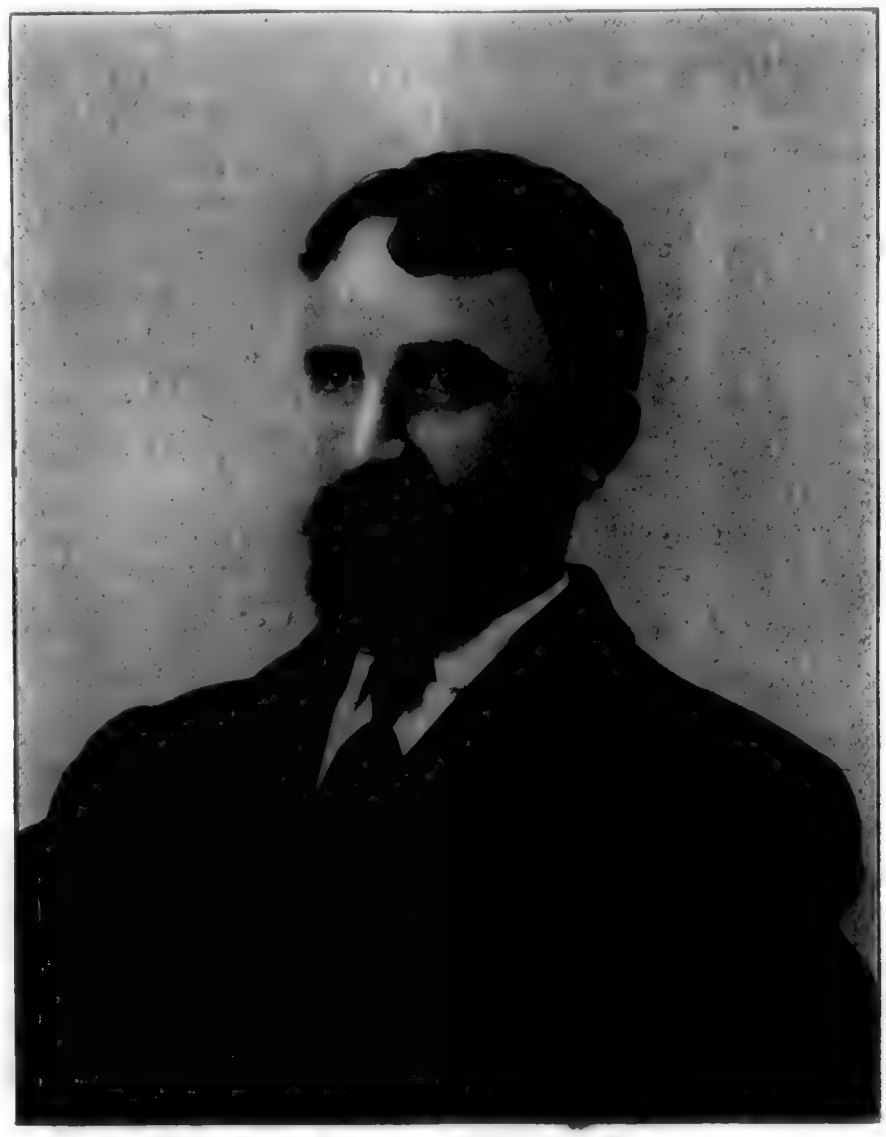
Applications for membership included the following: Edwin Denker, of St. Charles, Mo.; Chas. Fullgraf and G. H. Pring, of the Missouri Botanic Garden; Wm. C. Young, Frank Vennemann, of Kirkwood; C. W. Wors, F. Hettemann and Fred Alves.

The secretary was instructed to extend the club's sympathy to the bereaved family of the late James Hartshorne, also to the Chicago Florists' Club in the loss of one of its foremost members.

The election of officers was then proceeded with. Prof. H. C. Irish, of the Missouri Botanic Garden, was elected president. John Connon, of Webster Grove, was elected vice-president on the third ballot. Emil Schray and J. J. Beneke were the candidates for the office of secretary, and J. J. Beneke was elected. Mr. Schray, who has faithfully filled the office for the last fifteen years, moved to make the election unanimous. For treasurer there were four candidates and after three ballots A. G. Bentzen was elected. Fred Meinhardt, the present treasurer, was not a candidate for reelection. Wm. C. Smith was elected trustee.

The president then called for remarks from the visitors. They were George M. Kellogg, Dr. A. S. Halstead, W. C. Young and Emil Denker.

The discussions for the next meeting, September 3, were announced, as follows: "Growing Choice Chrysanthemums for Cut Flowers," by Emil Schray, and "Growing and Forcing Bulb Stock," by E. W. Guy.



Various Notes.

Visitors last week were George M. Kellogg, of Pleasant Hill; Dr. A. S. Halstead, of Belleville; Emil Denker, of St. Charles, all of whom are going to the convention with the St. Louis delegation. Mrs. A. C. Canfield, of Springfield, and A. C. Sterns, of Philadelphia, also were callers.

Hugo Gross, of Kirkwood, is a happy father. It's a boy, and Hugo was so delighted that he missed the last club meeting.

Arnold Scheidegger, of Kirkwood, has built for Phil Goeble, and for A. P. Erker, each two new houses for violets and carnations. Mr. Scheidegger is himself a grower.

George Jacobson, of Meramec Highlands, will build two new houses this summer and will go in for forcing bulb stock. Bedding stock always has been his specialty.

Prof. H. C. Irish.

Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Weber and daughter left Tuesday for a river trip south. They will be back in time to go to Dayton.

Mrs. Smith, mother of W. C. Smith, is visiting her son-in-law, H. V. Hunkel, of Holton & Hunkel Co., Milwaukee.

Fred Alves, of Angermueller's, is at Niagara Falls. He will be back in time to let the boss attend the convention.

Beyer Bros. again have the decorations for the big Schwabenfest at Lemp's park. This big annual affair always comes in the month of August. It prevents one of the boys from attending the convention.

Henry Lohrenz, who is making improvements at his Park avenue place, says he will be too busy to attend the S. A. F. meeting this year. J. J. B.

PROF. H. C. IRISH.

Prof. H. C. Irish, who has just been elected president of the St. Louis Florists' Club, was born on a farm near Janesville, Rock county, Wis., April 22, 1868. After the death of his parents, in 1884, he moved to Spink county, South Dakota, where with a brother he ran a farm for four years. In 1888 he entered the South Dakota Agricultural College, graduating in 1891. His expenses while at college were paid by teaching school during the long vacation and by working a few hours each day in the horticultural department under the direction of Prof. C. A. Keffer, now of the University of Tennessee. After graduating he taught school one year and then did postgraduate work at the Iowa State College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts, specializing in botany and horticulture under Prof. L. H. Pammell and the late J. L. Budd.

The year 1894 was spent in practical nursery work with C. L. Watrous, of Des Moines, Ia. In the autumn of 1894 he went to the Missouri Botanic Garden as horticultural assistant, occupying that position until the beginning of 1903, when he was made superintendent. The early part of the years 1896 and 1898 was spent in special and postgraduate work at Cornell University, with Prof. L. H. Bailey, leave of absence having been granted by the garden for that purpose.

Prof. Irish has contributed articles on various horticultural topics to the press and monographed the genus capsicum, and garden beans, these two being published in the reports of the Missouri Botanic Garden. He is a member of several national horticultural bodies and also many state horticultural societies. He has been secretary of the St. Louis County Horticultural Society and the Engelmann Botanical Club, of St. Louis, and is secretary of the preliminary organization of the National Council of Horticulture. J. J. B.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.—C. A. Doswell, of Lake Winona, gave an interesting talk on landscape gardening before the Marion County Agricultural and Horticultural Society Saturday, August 4, at the home of Frank P. Johnson, near the state fair-grounds.

DAYTON, O.—Thoughtless people have been despoiling the outdoor S. A. F. exhibits at the fair grounds of their flowers. It resulted in a warning being published in the daily papers, threatening prosecution for grand larceny, and the depredations ceased.

THE READERS' CORNER.

Summer Flowers South.

L. J. in the Review for August 9 has well said that rose culture as described July 26 by D., in answer to S. B. S., is too expensive and that carnations are what we need. We are located in central North Carolina and have had the highest temperature for the last five days of any place in the United States, yet we are cutting blooms from old stock indoors of May Naylor and John Young, white carnations, but as yet we have not found a pink that will hold out, as thrips takes full possession of them. We have finished housing all but a few benches of the varieties named, which we cannot afford to throw out yet. We have some thirty varieties benched now. Many of them are the new ones on trial, but Wolcott is our money-maker. For white, White Lawson is the best.

ST. SWITHIN.

For the benefit of the "crude westerners," we shall say, after much delving in histories, books on mythology, etc., that St. Swithin, he whom the enlightened east holds responsible for its weather at this time of the year, was bishop of Winchester in the ninth century. When he was canonized in the next century, the monks wished to transfer his remains from the Winchester churchyard, where he had been buried at his own request, to the cathedral, and they set July 15 as the date. Heavy rains lasting for forty days delayed the transfer; hence the popular belief (in the east) that if it rains on St. Swithin's day, it will rain for forty days thereafter.

The groundhog for ours, here in the west.

which I consider the best dollar's worth that any florist can get if he wants the latest news and methods of culture.

HUGH SEALES.

Birmingham, Ala.

Aug. 7, 1906.

IN MEMORIAM.

It was with great surprise and still greater grief that we learned of the passing of our good friend, Jimmy Hartshorne. He was well known in Buffalo, as in all large cities of this continent, and was on particularly close and friendly terms with the writer. He was all gold and full measure. Mr. Hartshorne came into prominence like a meteor, with the great renaissance of the carnation, and no one did more by his enthusiasm and industry to make the divine flower the leading feature of floriculture in this great country. His biography and achievements were well but modestly written up in the pages of the Review of last week.

Only once did I have the pleasure of visiting Jimmy at his home and industry, and no place that I have seen was better managed or in more perfect order. We loved him as a wholesouled, honest gentleman and, as the writer in the Review said, if he was deceived in the qualities of any of the varieties he sent out, no one regretted it so much as Mr. Hartshorne. But what matter all his achievements or disappointments? The sad fact is that he is no longer with us to give us his cheery smile at our annual gatherings. Deep is our sorrow that we shall see Jimmy no more, yet light is our grief compared to the great grief which hovers over Joliet.

A countryman of mine by birth, arriving in this country a poor boy, he was a glorious example of what integrity, industry and intelligence can gain without graft or injury to another fellow-being. I am no believer that we shall have wings in the future world, and most skeptical on the teachings of orthodoxy, but I believe the great Creator through evolution has not endowed us with the character and intelligence which good men possess unless there is a future and higher destiny, and, therefore, I confidently believe that Jimmy Hartshorne, in some blessed and pure realm, will be given an honored seat and, in spirit, if not in flesh, meet again his loved wife and children. William Scott.

[We have received, from S. S. Skidelsky and others, other tributes which lack of space compels us to forego the pleasure of printing.—Ed.]

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

Last week was quiet, but business started in briskly Monday morning, nearly every house in town reporting an excellent day's sales. Local buyers took hold stronger than at any time in the last fortnight and shipping demand was good. Monday is nearly always a good day in this market, and Tuesday a dull one. Wednesday and Thursday are quiet, and Friday and Saturday brisk.

Beauties from new plants are becoming more plentiful. Quality is good, but of course stems are short. The cut of tea roses from new plants is also increasing, but quality is not yet anything to brag of, stems being short and buds small. There are few indoor carnations and those from the fields are not of good quality, the rains having served to rot the blooms.

The early crops of asters have passed off and receipts are now of the later and better varieties. Quality has much improved, large flowers and long stems being now the rule. White was scarce early this week and commanded a premium. The supply of auratum lilies is not so heavy as it has been and not many longiflorums are seen. Gladioli continue to be a tremendous glut. Sweet peas are not abundant and if received are of poor quality, almost unsalable.

The retail windows are full of hydrangeas, phloxes and other garden flowers, the water lily being a feature with many. Green goods are abundant but selling slowly.

Out in Time.

Two men well known and liked in the trade are Messrs. Weiler and Pontius, of the Superior Machine and Boiler Works. The bank nearest their place is the Milwaukee Avenue State and they formerly did business there. About a year ago they heard rumors of the rottenness since brought to light and removed their account. Their friends tell them they are glad they got out in time, "but they're not half as glad as we are," says Mr. Pontius.

A. F. Kohr, the pot-maker, was not so fortunate; all his ready cash is tied up, in addition to which his boiler has failed, and he is practically shut down at the busiest season of the year.

Various Notes.

A big crowd will attend the convention next week, probably the largest delegation Chicago has ever sent. The special train pulls out Monday at 12:45 from the Illinois Central station.

At the club meeting last week the only action, aside from instructing a committee to prepare resolutions on the death of James Hartshorne, was to elect two new members, James Hamlin, of Geneva, Ill., and J. J. Wolniewiz, of this city.

W. E. Lynch, of E. H. Hunt's, has gone to his old home at Hatfield, Mass., to spend two weeks. His family were already there.

C. L. Washburn is back from a week's fishing and Louis Gresens is again on deck, so Mrs. Horton has been despatched to Detroit for a rest.

E. C. Amling says he looks for an especially good season this fall. He says there has been no great rush for stock this summer, but a good, steady demand that has made it his best summer.

A. H. Budlong's family is at Lake Geneva, and Mr. Budlong goes up each Saturday to spend Sunday with them.

At Eaton's, on Jackson boulevard, a lily pond was one of the attractive features last week, the work of C. H. Grant.

The George Wittbold Co. stores were closed and the greenhouses turned over to a watchman August 11 for the annual picnic at Edgebrook. As the firm has some seventy employees on its pay roll, with their families it made a big and jolly party. These annual outings help immensely in keeping up enthusiasm, for it is the only day in the year when a good part of the force forgets business.

L. Baumann & Co. will take a big display to Dayton. Mr. Baumann goes down Friday night.

Miss Tonner writes the A. L. Randall Co. that she will sail from Liverpool for New York August 29.

Frederick Sperry, of Vaughan & Sperry, is at Saugatuck, Mich., but will return to let A. L. Vaughan attend the convention, after which he will make an eastern trip.

Weiland & Risch report a good sale for tuberoses, the receipts not being heavy as yet.

The George Wittbold Co. has not lost faith in the Boston fern, having now the largest stock of it ever held.

Wietor Bros. have their place all planted and are, indeed, cutting quite heavily from young roses.

Leonard Kill, of Peter Reinberg's, plans to spend a few days in Cincinnati after the convention. Mrs. Kill will accompany him.

The E. F. Winterson Co. reports French bulbs in and a good share of them out again.

Flint Kennicott has been laid up for several days with another siege with his old enemy—rheumatism.

Joe Curran is no longer in the flower business, being salesman for W. E. Dee Co., dealers in sewer pipe, etc.

The Chicago Rose Co. is beginning to cut Killarney roses in considerable quantity.

Joe Straus, of Randall's, is at Manitou Beach for a fortnight.

Visitors.

Visitors this week have included William Henry Evans, of the Pikes Peak Floral Co., Colorado Springs, Colo.; Edward Amperpohl, Janesville, Wis., showing his new fern; B. F. Shilling, Lafayette, Ind., getting prices on greenhouse material; Harry Ramm, with C. A. Dards, the New York retailer, on vacation; N. B. Stover, Grandville, Mich., visiting relatives; Miss Annie K. Luffman, Spokane, Wash., on her way to Dayton and her old home in Alabama; Hans Tobler, Traverse City, Mich., and Jacob Tobler, Kansas City, also Ed. Ellsworth and A. Elberfield, of Kansas City, on their way to Michigan; W. A. Haggie, of Haggie Bros., Deerfield, Ill.; J. W. Davis, Morrison, Ill.; A. B. Silliman, Boone, Ia., the mistletoe man.

Next week conventionites will be thick.

The Club Meets.

At last we have had a meeting of our club. It was so long since we had met that we had to be introduced to the officers. With the exception of Mr. Kasting, all of the old guard were on hand, and a new member, Mr. Liebsch, of Batavia, was introduced and several candidates were nominated for membership.

The first important business was to decide where and when we should hold our annual outing. President Neubeck appointed Mr. Legg, Emil Brooker and William Scott a committee with power to decide on place, sports, date, etc., and they have selected Fort Erie grove as the place and Wednesday, September 5, for the date. There are many features connected with this pleasant resort that make it an ideal place for such an outing. The ferry runs every twenty minutes, so there is no arbitrary time of going or returning, and if you miss a boat you don't have to wait four hours for another. There is an excellent diamond for the ball game, east side versus west side, and a spacious bleacher for spectators. Then there is a fine meadow for the other sports, and for those not interested in these games there is a fine figure eight for giddy old men and women who need some electricity injected into their fading systems. For spinsters over 40 there is a razzle dazzle, and for the younger element there is a spacious roller skating rink and a fine dance hall. A merry-go-round for the children, shooting galleries, bowling alleys and vaudeville show, where we shall expect a monologue from Conie Forbach on how to grow Gloire de Lorraine; one from John Milley called "Money on Dogs," and a third by W. Warring, Jr., on the effect of horse racing dope on the brain. Then, again, we must not forget that we are on the pebbly beach of Lake Erie, where we can bathe or be refreshed by the cooling breeze ever blowing over these inland seas. The day is to conclude with a substantial dinner at the hotel. There is one feature about this place that keeps it refined and respectable. No intoxicants are allowed on the grounds.

There will be mailed shortly to all members tickets for transportation as well as tickets for the dinner. You can go as early as you like, and return as early or late as you choose, so let there be a big turnout. We don't see much of each other from one picnic to another. September 5 will be the day to renew acquaintance.

Route to Dayton.

The Dayton convention is next in order and I am glad to say the attendance from this city will be larger than we expected. The route from Buffalo to Dayton will be: Leave Buffalo on Sunday evening by the C. & B. boat, arriving in Cleveland about 8 a. m. The palatial steamers are equal in size and accommodations to the famous sound steamers, and a night ride over the bosom of Lake Erie will be a most agreeable change for those who have traveled on the cars from Boston or New York. The round trip from Buffalo to Cleveland is only $2.50, berths extra. We should suppose that many eastern men would avail themselves of this fine lake ride, and those wishing to secure berths can do so by notifying W. F. Kasting, 383 Ellicott street, Buffalo, N. Y. Some may desire to push on to Dayton from Cleveland. We shall expect to spend Monday, August 20, in the city of Cleveland and travel with the Cleveland crowd in the evening on the Big Four railroad to Dayton.

and carved out his own fortune. He is president of a Texas railroad, but what interests us more, he is president of the Green Floral and Nursery Co. and takes the liveliest interest in horticulture. He is a grand, big man. I wish I had in gold all the weight he is over 300 pounds. He is a type of man that this country is producing in increased numbers; big brains on a big body. The molecules of gray matter need no stimulant; they are kicking and revolving incessantly and keep their host ever on the jump, with new ideas and new, broad, and brilliant enterprises. Col. Green fires a practical question at you which staggers you for its shrewdness and practical good sense and expects an answer at rapid-fire speed in return. He is as free of airs and style as a Nebraska farmer. His visit here was not for pleasure alone. He was here to inspect Mr. Kasting's cement benches and was so well pleased with them that he invested heavily to equip his own large place, and obtained the right to manufacture these benches in the Lone Star state.

Our desire is going to be gratified and we are going to have a trap shoot, so bring along your old fowling piece. I knew Mr. Altick would do it for us.

DETROIT.

The Market.

There has been no noticeable change in business for the last month or so. Good roses are not overplentiful; the best bring $5 and $6 per hundred. Carnations, despite the small, inferior flowers, move quite well. Good sweet peas are scarce.

There are plenty of asters on the market, but the majority of the stock is of poor quality, short stems, small flowers, and as a rule the edges are bad. Good, clean stock in asters sells readily for 75 cents to $1, but the poor stuff won't sell at any price.

All Aboard for Dayton.

The Detroit delegation of about twenty-five will leave in a special car for Dayton Monday, August 20, at 12:35 noon, over the C. H. & D., picking up the Toledo boys at 2 p. m., and arriving at the convention city at 6 p. m. The fare from Detroit is $5.80 round trip, on the certificate plan.

The Detroit florists extend a hearty invitation to their brethren in Michigan and Canada to join them and enjoy the privileges of a special car or cars.

Various Notes.

Mr. Pease, of the Detroit Cut Flower Supply House, reports an exceptionally good summer. This firm has been making some large shipments of asters to Cleveland. Their book-keeper, Hubert Pierce, is spending a few weeks with friends in Wisconsin.

Mr. and Mrs. Gus H. Taepke have just returned from a profitable and enjoyable eastern trip.

B. Schroeter, Jr., his sister, Clara, and Mrs. Hugo Schroeter left lately for a trip through the Thousand Islands and up the St. Lawrence to Quebec.

Charles Plumb is still sojourning in Europe.

The Market.

A week of hot, muggy weather has not been conducive to good business in the flower markets. Outside of funeral orders and some little shipping to seaside resorts, demand has been light. Good material continues scarce and sells without any trouble. Roses remain about the same. Some nice Beauties, Carnots and Kaiserins are coming in. A few carnations of the new season's crop are arriving. About $1.50 to $2 is secured for the best stock, poorer grades running down to 50 cents. Sweet peas from outdoors have been poor this season, owing to an excess of humidity. The few coming in bring 20 cents to 25 cents per hundred.

Gladioli continue of good quality. Asters are abundant, but many come spotted, owing to the heavy rains. Some nice Bouvardia Humboldtii comes from one or two growers. There is no change in other flowers or green stock.

Welch Bros. to Move.

Welch Bros., owing to the continual increase in their business, and finding it impossible to secure additional floor space needed at their present location, have decided to move to 226 Devonshire street, Winthrop square, where they will occupy the whole of the first floor and basement, each having over 6,000 square feet of floor space, a total of 12,500 square feet, making it the largest wholesale florists' store in the country.

The location is an ideal one in every way, convenient to the retail flower stores, only a short distance from both terminal stations, and close to the offices of the express companies, these according unexcelled opportunities for the prompt delivery of goods for shipment. The new premises will be fitted up with a large cold-storage plant, new counters, benches, etc., of the most up-to-date pattern and every effort will be made to make it one of the best equipped wholesale houses on the continent.

Welch Bros. now have been in business twenty-eight years. Their receipts and shipments of cut flowers cover every part of New England, as well as outside states. They receive more high grade American Beauty roses than all other New England houses combined. The genial trio of brothers, Patrick, Edward and David, have worked hard to build up this business and it cannot fail to grow and prosper in such able hands.

CONVENTION NUMBER

THE WEEKLY FLORISTS' REVIEW

Is to be Issued August 23

Advertisers know the interest with which the Trade looks forward to Our Special Issues. Advertising copy must be in our hands Wednesday morning, August 22, at latest.

Various Notes.

The Gardeners' and Florists' Club will resume its monthly meetings September 18. Present indications are that the applications for membership that evening will break all records.

H. A. Stevens Co. has a very fine display of perennial phloxes at the nursery in Dedham. They have a large and representative collection of this popular plant.

Matthew Gray will succeed Robert Marshall in charge of the E. W. Converse estate in Newton.

Robert T. McGorum, whom we recently mentioned as a new stallholder at Park Street Market, has returned to his old love and in future, as in the past, all his shipments will go to Welch Bros.

Many carnation growers now have their stock all housed and some are already picking from the new crop. Bacteria, owing to the almost continuous damp weather, are reported to be unusually rife.

Among the exhibits to be seen at Horticultural hall on August 18 will be an extensive display of gladioli from John Lewis Childs, including that beautiful and very popular variety, America.

Welch Bros. report business as very good for the dull season. They continue to receive quantities of fine summer roses, valley and other flowers, and are planning for the biggest fall business in their history.

James Wheeler recently branched out into the bee business and finds it very engrossing sport. He has made a pronounced success of it. His favorites are "Root's long-tongued Red Clovers," guaranteed not to sting unless squeezed, and the greatest honey producers extant.

Taunton Greenhouses are making a specialty of the new Nephrolepis Whitmani, for which they find an almost insatiable demand. They will have a grand lot of large plants for fall trade.

Thomas Rolland finds the demand for Lorraine begonias, in the culture of which he is a past-master, heavier than ever and has had to refuse orders for them of late.

Dahlias are remarkably fine here this season, thanks to the copious moisture we have had. John K. Alexander, of East Bridgewater, who grows some 550 varieties, has a splendid show, as have the other large growers in this section.

There was a large display of choice flowers at the funeral of Mrs. Thomas W. Lawson last week. McMulkin furnished flowers for the family.

The Market.

Trade is quiet, and thousands of pink and white Cochet roses are thrown out daily. Good asters are scarce, but plenty of poor stuff is dumped on the market, for which there is no sale. Gladioli and auratums of good quality are coming in and sell fairly well. Asparagus is plentiful, but smilax is out of the question.

Horticultural Society.

The annual meeting of the State Horticultural Society was held at Orlando Harrison's place, in Berlin. The Gardeners' Club, being the guest of the Society, was largely represented, about fifty members taking advantage of the special invitation. The trip was one that will be long remembered, from a social point of view, as well as for the instructive good which the guests derived.

Three hours each, by boat and by railroad, was the time it took to get to Berlin. After arriving, dinner was at once served on the lawn at Mr. Harrison's place. The table was decorated with flowers and fruits, and plenty of good things to satisfy the inner man were provided. After dinner there were several addresses delivered, which lasted until 4 o'clock. Mr. Harrison then had every vehicle in Berlin that could be utilized for passengers, even one of the large hay wagons, pressed into service. About forty of the visitors rode over the 7-mile drive to inspect the Harrison nursery of over a thousand acres of trees. The nurseries comprise fourteen farms, and each farm has its superintendent and employees. The visitors saw colored men, women and boys, who are largely employed on the place, engaged in budding peach trees that had been grown from seed. An idea of the immensity of these nurseries can be realized when it is known that there are in the neighborhood of 3,000,000 peach trees ready for budding, and over 1,000,000 now ready for the market. There are also large numbers of apples, pears and plums, and sixty acres are used each year in growing strawberries. The working force at present consists of 250 people, and fifty-four horses and mules are used. The entire place is kept in a clean, first-class condition.

After the inspection of the farms, the return to the town of Berlin was made, which, by the way, is inhabited by about 1,300 people, as open-hearted men and women as you ever met. Especially is this true of the Harrison family. At 7 o'clock the train was taken for Ocean City, a run of about six miles. This place is a little overcrowded, just being in the height of the busy summer season. A number of the party had difficulty in getting hotel accommodations, and a few had to sleep on chairs. morning everybody was out bright and early on the board walk, and about 10 o'clock the majority of the florists took a dip in the ocean, which was the first time for many.

On the way home, the members of the Gardeners' Club decided to take up a collection among themselves. Fifty dollars were at once subscribed, and it is expected that some sort of silver piece will be purchased as a present for Mr. Harrison.

Various Notes.

John M. Rider, of Brooklyn, Md., one of our largest carnation growers, lost his barn and the entire crop of hay which it contained recently by fire. The loss was partially covered by insurance.

Mrs. McRoberts has rented her greenhouses to the firm conducting The Fernery, on North Charles street. A. F.

BEREA, O.—M. Bloy says weather conditions are decidedly against good growth, being extremely hot and damp, inducing soft growth on roses and necessitating a hard fight against mildew. Carnations are being planted and Mr. Bloy expects to be finished in time to attend the convention.

GALENA, ILL.—B. F. Vandervate has received the first shipment of material for the new houses which he will build this fall. There will be two, one 16x100 and the other 24x100.

The Market.

There seems to be no improvement in the condition of the market, everything remaining dull. White asters are in great demand on account of the scarcity of carnations. The early asters are about gone, and the late varieties are just coming in. The stems are getting much longer and flowers much larger. We feel that we could not do without the aster. Prices on asters are low, only $1 per hundred for the best, the pink and the purple being the most plentiful. Gladioli still hold their own in making a show in the downtown store windows. They seem to be fine this year, and the recent rains have brought them out in fine shape. Dahlias are short in stem and there seems to be little call for them.

We look for better business next week, as some have booked advance orders for large weddings.

Some of the growers have stopped planting carnations on account of the rainy weather the last week. This has been the wettest August we have had for many years.

Various Notes.

Your correspondent visited Maywood, Mo., where the large plant of R. S. Brown & Son is located. Here we found everything in good order. They have a large field of stock geraniums, which is a grand sight. Just north of this lot of geraniums is a large patch of cannas. They are staked perfectly true to name. Nathan Brown, who has personal charge of this place, surely has a right to be proud of such a field. They also grow begonias in large lots.

John Schneider, the Grand avenue florist, has purchased a new horse and wagon. He keeps this outfit standing in front of his store for "hurry-up" orders.

Miss J. E. Murray has a neat show window this week. Ferns predominate, with some extra nice vases of gladioli to give color.

Charles Heite, manager of the W. L. Rock Flower Co. greenhouses, has gone to the Ozark mountains on a vacation.

A visit to Ed. Bunyar's place at Independence, Mo., found him with sleeves rolled up pushing into fall work with all his might. He has one house in roses, grown in solid benches, which is worth seeing. Mr. Bunyar is quite successful in growing violets. He has them in pots this year, and will soon bench them. He also has one house in Piersoni and Boston ferns. He intends to build another fern house soon, as the demand is great.

Robert Tindall & Son's greenhouses also are located in Independence, almost in the heart of the city. Their houses are all filled with carnations and chrysanthemums. They grow quite a large number of mums, especially white. Mr. Tindall, Sr., is ill at present, but his son is pushing the work along in fine shape.

Alfred Broman, who is located one mile east of Independence, has everything in fine shape. He owns ten acres of ground, a fine house, plenty of fruit, and 25,000 square feet of glass. He has six houses in roses. As a sort of side line, he owns a long row of beehives, which we inspected with interest—and caution.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., Henry W. Wood, Richmond, Va.; First Vice-Pres., Charles Burge, Toledo, O.; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland. The 25th annual meeting will be held at New York City, June, 1907.

"A poor man at a seed store tried
For work—for he was needy.
'You can't work here,' the owner cried,
'Because you look so seedy.'"

FROM all reports radish seed will be radish seed next spring.

IN the Toledo market last week closing prices for clover seed were: Cash, $7.15; October and December, $7.27½. Prime alsike, $6.95; prime timothy, $2.

FRANKLIN ELY, manager of the flower seed department of the Henry F. Michell Co., Philadelphia, is on a trip through New York state, inspecting flower seed crops.

VISITORS to the seed farm of Watkins & Simpson, near London, speak of the breadth of Eschscholtzia Mandarin as being especially noticeable for its vivid color.

THE continued wet weather is doing much damage in the eastern districts where tomatoes are grown extensively. Both quantity and quality of the seed harvest are likely to be affected.

H. H. GROFF, Simcoe, Ont., sends out handsomely printed copies of an address entitled "Practical Plant Breeding," sent to the international plant breeders' conference now in session in London.

BEAULIEU, the seedsman of Woodhaven, N. Y., says that a few days ago he happened into a place at Woodside, N. Y., just as they were burning at least 10,000 packets of government free seeds.

ARTHUR T. BODDINGTON, New York, has been appointed sole agent in the United States and Canada for the Edwards cyanide machine, manufactured in England. This simple contrivance makes the use of cyanic acid gas possible without the danger which prevents its general use.

As indicating the large things likely to be accomplished by the seed departments of the big general mail-order houses attention is called to the statement of total sales made by Sears, Roebuck & Co., Chicago. In seven months of 1906 the volume of business was $27,754,370.

CHARLES TREICHLINGER, Chicago, questioned the validity of a reappraisement on millet seed because made by a single general appraiser, but was overruled because he filed a "protest" when he should have "appealed" under section 13 of the customs administrative act. The treasury department can split some fine hairs upon occasion.

The firm of F. Barteldes & Co., Lawrence, Kan., recently has incorporated, and will be known as the Barteldes Seed Co. It has a fully paid-up capital stock of $300,000. F. W. Barteldes is president, Max Wilhelmi vice-president and J. Uhrlach secretary-treasurer. The managers of the Denver branch will be the same as before—C. R. Root, H. Warnecke and J. Wiesel. C. F. Eltzholtz will continue in charge of the Oklahoma City house.

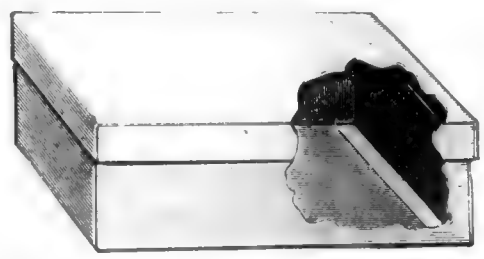
A HAIR LINE ON BULBS.

There has been considerable change of conditions in many of our productions in the last few years, but one quite noticeable at this time is the Harrisii lily, or Bermuda bulbs. The cry of diseased bulbs resulted in considerable damage to the islands' products, although many florists who had varied success with them continued to grow them.



This year in particular, on account of Easter being early, the demand exceeded that of the last two years. A shortage of crop is likely to occur in any growing product, but nevertheless that should never cause the change of measurement. Crop conditions may be beyond control, but the making of the measure is not. It is not many years since the present 7x9 size bulbs were true 5x7, and the 9x11 of today were about correct at 7x9 measurement. Why should another size creep in, called 6x7? This is virtually taking away the best out of the 5x7, which we all know were already small enough, thus leaving the 5x7 size nothing but 3x5. If you buy a car-load of horses and there is a shortage, no shipper would put in ponies as horses. The measurements in vogue, viz., 5x7, 7x9 and 9x11, should have remained the same, and the standard of measure likewise should have been maintained, giving the purchaser at least the true size he purchased.

Now comes another new creation, the pure Harrisii and the common Harrisii. This idea probably originated with some one trying to meet low priced competition by statements of the cheap ones being common stock, and in the same breath offering pure Harrisii at an advanced price. Naturally the trade do not want to grow what they think inferior, and buy the so-called pure Harrisii. We grew both side by side. The bulbs appeared the same, the plants were the same, and the flowers were the same. The only difference we could see was the difference in price and the supposition that they were different when purchasing. There may be a variation of crop conditions among the Bermuda growers, but that should not label the product pure and common. It's pure Harrisii every-

A HAIR LINE ON BULBS.

There has been considerable change of conditions in many of our productions in the last few years, but one quite noticeable at this time is the Harrisii lily, or Bermuda bulbs. The bulbs appeared the same, the plants were the same, and the flowers were the same. The only difference we could see was the difference in price and the supposition that they were different when purchasing. There may be a variation of crop conditions among the Bermuda growers, but that should not label the product pure and common. It's pure Harrisii everybody wants, and the common would be worth just as much if they label it such. Give us one grade only and the correct measure, and the shortage of crops will govern itself according to supply and demand.

The shortage of 7x9 and 9x11 Harrisii probably makes those sizes all pure Harrisii this season. The trade will stand for shortage due to crop failure, but will not tolerate discrepancy in measurement, or hair line divisions in sizes, or the doubtful representations as to variety mostly created for financial benefit. C. C. Pollworth.

GERMAN VALLEY CROPS.

Latest reports from the lily of the valley growing districts of Germany are very satisfactory. The crop looks well and probably above an average quantity of finest quality pips will be harvested. The weather conditions have been very favorable and the fields are vigorous in growth. The great fear now is that too much wet may occur during the next two months, in which case many black or premature bells may be expected in next autumn's delivery. Should it not be wet, we may expect as fine a sample as has been harvested for some years past.

ANNUAL GLADIOLI.

For a long period I have grown, year by year, a quantity of gladiolus seedlings. The seeds are sown about the beginning of May in coldframes, and the bulbs lifted in autumn and planted the following year in the open ground, etc. Several years ago I noticed a plant that began to bloom in the seedbed, but the flower spike was killed by frost before it came to full development. I selected the bulb, planted it separately, and crossed the flowers with my best flowering sorts. I selected seeds from this cross carefully, and sowed them the following year about the middle of March. Several of these seedlings began to bloom about the end of August, and I obtained some ripe seeds of the plants. Last year the first flower opened July 23, but this year the first flower opened July 12. By crossing and selecting the very best and most perfect seedling plants and seeds of these, also by new crossings with pollen of the different types of gladioli, I have in my annual type of gladioli not only a rich collection of colors, but also all the different types of gladioli; also last year I noticed some plants with very widely-opened flowers similar to those of amaryllis. The beds show a continuance of blooming from July until very late in the season; the last flowers were killed by frost. On many of the flower spikes are opened five to six flowers at once. The colors vary from white to yellow, flesh, rose and pink, bright red, cherry red, blood red to maroon and brownish red, etc. Last year I noticed a few with light and deep blue flowers. The individual flowers are of good size and form. Frederick Roemer.

PUBLICATIONS RECEIVED.

[Mushrooms and How to Grow Them, by John F. Barter; published by John F. Barter, Ltd., Wembley, Middlesex, England; one shilling.]

American growers of mushrooms will find much to interest them in the pamphlet of fifty pages just received from John F. Barter, Ltd. It is from the pen of the senior member of the firm, who is one of the oldest of growers of mushrooms for the London market and is at the head of what is said to be the largest spawn exporting establishment in England. Mr. Barter deals thoroughly with the methods of culture in vogue at Wembley and his text is illustrated with a large number of fine half-tones printed on plate paper, showing the preparation of the beds, the crops of mushrooms and the processes of the manufacture of spawn. It is interesting to note that at the Barter establishment, said to be the largest of its kind in the world, all the spawn is now produced on the pure culture system. Mr. Barter says that by experimenting he has found that dry, hard spawn may be made to start as quickly as fresh if the bricks are placed in water and soaked, say, from three to five hours on the day they are required for use.

EUROPEAN SEED NOTES.

The onion crops mostly all over Europe appear to be in a very unsatisfactory state and the latest reports are that some varieties have been totally destroyed by hail in some southern cultures. The crops of white onions in Italy appear to be only moderate. Reports from both Holland and Germany say the mildew has spoiled the crop in many cases.

The cauliflower crop in the south of Europe is very short, the low contract prices of late years paid to growers causing a much decreased acreage. I have not received reports from Denmark and other northern cultures, but it is to be hoped it is a more satisfactory crop than the south.

Many complaints are heard from seedsmen and market growers of the very poor quality of the German aster bloom this season and the great prevalence of mildew in the centers of the bloom. Most sufferers in England are blaming the quality of seed supplied from Germany last season. The flowering of plants from seed supplied from Italy is in every way satisfactory. German growers have made some very heavy purchases of aster seed in Italy and it is now generally known that Italian asters are, so far as mildew is concerned, much to be preferred to those grown farther north.

The turnip harvest in England is now in full swing and generally, I think, the yield will be light, especially of the more tender and fancy varieties of garden sorts. Swedes, I think, will be up to the average.

There is again much complaint in England of weak growth of both Canadian stocks of garden peas and Californian stocks of sweet peas. The percentage of germination of American peas is generally high when grown here, the growth and general appearance is also regular, but the haulm is weak.

FREE SEEDS AGAIN.

A special Washington dispatch dated August 12 says:

Indications are that the Congressional free seed distribution will be fought more bitterly next session than ever before. Encouraged by the pronounced opposition of the Senate and House Committees on Agriculture to this appropriation, and its almost universal condemnation by the press and public, those interested have undertaken a "campaign of education." The seed dealers make no secret of their opposition to the free distribution of common garden seeds. In an open letter to the public, Henry W. Wood, of Richmond, Va., president of the American Seed Trade Association, says that the seed dealers oppose the practice because it is an unjust interference with a legitimate industry, and because it is a waste of public money. Mr. Wood points out that the total packet seed trade of the country amounts to 120,000,000 packets, of which the government gives away 40,000,000 and the dealers sell 80,000,000. "What industry could survive if the government gave away free half as much as those engaged in the industry sold?" he asks. He also suggests that it is time for Congress to change off and give away axes, saws, pocket knives and looking glasses.

The American Seed Trade Association is composed of growers, wholesalers and retailers, and is thoroughly in earnest in its opposition to government interference in its business. The Wholesale Seedsmen's League is also out against it. Between them they are in touch with about ten thousand persons engaged in growing and selling seeds, and with at least fifty thousand store-keepers who carry seeds in stock. As some of the larger seed merchants have more than one hundred thousand customers who purchase seeds in small lots, it is expected that they will have been in communication with hundreds of thousands of people before next session.

The granges have taken up the matter in a systematic manner. Farmers are said to be tired of the idea that their votes can be influenced by the receipt of a package of seeds which they can buy at the corner grocery for five cents, and which usually arrives too late for planting. They say they do not want sunflower and pumpkin seed from Congress, and point out that the $242,000 now wasted in this manner would support a national agricultural college with eighty professors at $2,500 a year and sufficient funds to maintain the institution. Divided among the agricultural colleges, it would give each state institution between five and ten thousand dollars more than they now receive. This, the farmers say, would do much more good than the distribution of seed.

SKIDOO NUMBER.

Next Week, August 23.

Advertisers who wish to chase out their share of the early orders should make haste to send copy for special announcements to appear in the Review's Annual Convention Number next week. Copy received up to Wednesday morning, August 22, can be handled, but a little time is a great help in getting good display.

Readers will find in next week's Review the season's most comprehensive array of trade offers, besides a full report of the Dayton convention and much other interesting matter.

STREATOR, ILL.

Streator has attracted the attention of George A. Whitcomb, of Morrison, Ill., and his son, George G. Whitcomb, of Cleveland, O., who are to come here and establish immense greenhouses. The gentlemen have been here during the present week and have gone over the details fully. They have options on two tracts, one east of the Santa Fe and the other adjacent to the C. I. & S. tracks.

Not only the splendid railroad facilities of the city caused them to come here, but the further fact that the geological bureau of Illinois reported that Streator in the last five years had more days of sunshine than any other city in Illinois was an inducement which could not be overlooked, sunshine being an essential factor to the success of a greenhouse plant.

Messrs. Whitcomb purpose to cover an area of 200,000 square feet with glass. If present plans can be consummated they will next winter supply the wholesale market with tomatoes and cucumbers, adding other products as time progresses. Cut flowers will be grown for the wholesale and retail market.

TWIN CITIES.

The Market.

Trade is quiet, and does not vary much from the last two or three weeks' business. The majority of the florists claim to have had a better summer's business than in a great many years. It appears that what little activity there has been has confined itself almost entirely to funeral work. But very few weddings have occurred and counter trade amounts to little.

Stock seems to be getting a little more plentiful, and is of a better quality. Outdoor flowers are handled to a large extent, and decorations are heavier in the stores. Prices are kept up nicely. Sweet peas seem to be the special favorite, but they are not so good as we have had in former years.

The convention seems to be the main topic among the trade, and if all go who now contemplate doing so, the Twin Cities will be well represented.

Minneapolis.

Miss Whitted, of the Whitted Floral Co., will attend the convention. They report a fair trade for the last week.

Carl Johnsen, of the Powers Mercantile Co., says trade is fair, but makes no attempt at carrying a big stock.

Ralph Latham says that trade has kept up remarkably well, and considers it only a matter of a few weeks before another active season will come.

Rice Bros. have handled large lots of sweet peas lately.

The G. A. R. convention is now on, but the florists do not expect much trade, outside of a few minor decorations in palms.

St. Paul.

C. F. Vogt reports a few good days the last week, but says trade is not at all steady. He recently received some fine Boston ferns.

Gus Colberg, of the Swanson Floral Co., says trade is fair. He carries an odd lot of outdoor flowers, which decorate his place nicely.

L. L. May & Co. have been fairly busy. Their place is pretty well torn up, as they are making improvements.

JOLIET, ILL.

Just at this season of the year, the time when everybody is building new houses, the firm of Longren & Olsem is kept busy glazing and finishing these additions. They also install heating plants.

The business of this firm extends over a wide area. They have just completed a contract for glazing and steam-fitting at Omaha, Neb., for Hess & Swoboda; also the building of a house 30x200 feet for Joseph Labo, of this city. Work is now being pushed at Richmond, Ind., for the E. G. Hill Co. The work to be done there consists of the glazing of five houses, each 27x500 feet, and one house 12x500 feet.

Longren & Olsem, unlike most of the large eastern firms, make contracts only for the labor on jobs in their line, and do not furnish material.

COLUMBUS, OHIO.

The Market.

Although we are right in the midst of the dullest season of the year, trade is not wholly stagnant. Counter trade for asters, gladioli and carnations has been quite good; many roses have been disposed of in the regular funeral work, which has been of unusually steady volume this summer. The seedsmen this week began to get the first real autumn inquiries and orders, customers placing orders for potted strawberry plants, nursery stock and bulbs.

The Florists' Club.

The first meeting of the month was held August 7, at the club-rooms in Iroquois hall. President Stephens was in the chair, and a large number of members attended. The interest of the evening centered on the trip to Dayton. It looks like fifty or more will go. Some of our members will no doubt go to Dayton by trolley line; most prefer the Big Four; the round-trip fare is $2.80.

Various Notes.

The Livingston Seed Co. has been devoting much care and pains to its floral window displays this summer, a feature which has occasioned much favorable comment, not only with the customers but the craft as well.

William Graff, of Graff Bros., is again in the harness, after a vacation in Chicago. James McKellar, with the same firm, goes today for his outing, and will be at Dayton.

Albert Knopf, the president of the Franklin Park Floral Co., and family have gone for a ten days' vacation at Lakeside. Mr. Knopf will attend the convention. Zero.

THE FLORISTS' MANUAL.

We note your advertisement in the current number of the REVIEW of the second edition of Scott's Florists' Manual and request that you enter our order for a copy of this valuable book. The writer is thoroughly acquainted with the first edition of this work, having often had occasion to use it for reference while a student at the Michigan Agricultural College. Please rush this order, for we feel, with Mark Twain, that we "would rather not use violence."

NORTHERN TEXAS.

We are having a season of unusually fine weather for this time of year. Crops are looking at their best, and from what I have seen so far there need be no alarm but what florists here will have some fine stock to house this fall. Carnations are in the pink of condition where handled right. Roses are commencing to get a move on them. Asters are looking well, while hardy plants, such as gaillardias, gypsophilas, phlox, etc., are doing better than was expected. Trade is beginning to pick up a little, advance orders coming in at some places for fall delivery. Indications point to a banner year for the trade in this section.

J. W. Goree, of Whitewright, visited the new plant of the Byrne Floral Co., of Sherman, recently, accompanied by his wife. Mr. and Mrs. Goree are making quite extensive repairs on their place and are going to have their share of the business, and they deserve it.

Business here is in the usual midsummer dull condition. There are plenty of flowers, especially roses, asters, dahlias and hydrangeas.

The Cottage Floral Co. has built one new house this summer.

Mrs. J. N. Daggett has retired from business on account of ill health, and has gone to Vermont to make her home.

D. M. Tipton, of Tipton & Hurst, left August 11 for his annual fishing trip. He will be gone a week. J. B. Hurst will take his vacation when Mr. Tipton returns.

PORTLAND, ORE.

Notes of Vacation Rambles.

We continued our visits among the florists and ventured as far as Oregon City, a picturesque little place on the Willamette river, accessible by boat, steam railway and electric car service. We chose the latter mode of transportation because of the scenic attractions and convenient time schedule.

Oregon City is probably most widely known for the beautiful Willamette falls, situated right in the heart of the town and furnishing power for various manufacturing industries. Property on the ground floor being too valuable for greenhouse purposes, we were obliged to scale a 500-foot hill before locating R. G. Pier e, who combines fruit growing with a nice little cut flower business.

After a second alpine-like climb we were glad of another hospitable reception, this time by Sam Roake. When not looking after home industries Mr. Roake occupies his time with private gardening, at which his services are always in demand. With only a population of 10,000, the cut flower trade is not large yet. Both these gentlemen appear prosperous.

After feasting our eyes on the grandeurs of nature we shot the chutes to the railroad track and hit the ties for home. Our first breathing spell was taken at Gladstone, where we called on Wilkinson & Hughes, whose specialty is growing carnations for the Portland market. The regular summer cleaning, repairing and replanting was in progress.

Our next stop, a few miles farther on, was at Clackamas, where that skilful grower, Charlie Street, was just recovering from a sprained ankle. He went fishing out of season and got hurt by some driftwood while trying to land a big salmon trout. While some fine roses are grown here, it is on violets that Mr. Street has won his reputation, and he cannot be beaten.

We then came across lots to Milwaukee and into the back yard of Julius Broetje. All shapes and sizes of fancy Japanese shrubs are kept in stock here, and a distinct feature of the place is an artificial lily pond. These beautiful aquatics are rare in Oregon, Mr. Broetje having a monopoly on them, and it is rumored that they were such an attraction to a certain young lady that she consented to become Mrs. Broetje last June.

We reached home at the supper hour, having covered the distance of twenty miles from Oregon City in the remarkably short time of four hours and fifteen minutes, including stops.

H. J. M.

CARE OF SEEDLINGS

It is during the months of July and August that we plant most of our hardy tree and palm seeds on this coast. It is possible with most of the varieties grown here to get well ripened seed during those months, and it is always best to sow hard-shelled seeds during warm weather. Much time can be saved if seeds are grown under glass either in a greenhouse or in a frame. Seeds like a warm atmosphere to make them germinate readily, although usually they should be removed to a cooler place after they begin to show they have germinated.

It is a great assistance in starting any of our hardy palms to dip the seeds for several seconds in boiling water at intervals of ten minutes apart, and to plant them when they are still moist. The varieties of fan palms can be made to grow in a few days by this method, and with this variety it is just as well to leave them under glass for a couple of months. With the several sorts of chamærops germinating does not proceed so quickly, and the little plants are of slow growth until they are about two years old. It is a good plan to leave these also under glass for a whole season, or if no glass is available a shade house does very well. With the various kinds of phœnix, it is also a good plan to leave them inside until they have commenced to make their second seed leaf.

It is not a good idea with palms to plant the seeds too closely together, as it is usually the following spring at least before they are transplanted from beds or flats, and in the meanwhile many small plants will damp off if there is not a sufficient circulation of air around the stems.

This rule applies to all classes of tree seeds. The general tendency of gardeners seems to be to put too much seed in a given space. This becomes especially noticeable late in the season, when the days get short and the nights long and no bottom heat is resorted to. Acacias, cypress, eucalyptus, pittosporum, pepper, magnolia and many other ornamental trees well known here should be planted always at this time. None of these is of very slow germinating qualities, and it is possible to transplant them early the following spring, either into small pots or into the ground.

A lath house is convenient in growing all kinds of seedlings. Taken in connection with a greenhouse, it goes a long way toward keeping the stock of young plants from damping off, and at the same time protects them from too much heat overhead. Lath houses always should be constructed with benches of the usual height, so that it will not be necessary to put the flats or small pots on the floor.

On hardy seedlings too much water should not be used, and plenty of air should be given to the houses. This encourages a heavier growth and renders the young plants less liable to a setback when they are transferred to cooler quarters. G.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

The aster crop is now at its height, and as a consequence there has been less demand for carnations and other stock. The price of asters is about twenty-five per cent less than that obtained by the growers last season. The quality of most of the stock is fair, although it is easy to see that a considerable quantity of it has been neglected. Sweet peas, owing to the continued cool weather, are better at this time than they have been for several months. They cost the retailers an average of 75 cents per dozen bunches. An improvement has been noted also in the supply of roses, and for the same reason. The price of good stock remains about the same as it has for the last month.

Amaryllises and Japanese lilies are to be had in any quantity at low prices, but they are of slow sale. Gladioli are about over for the season.

Business is quiet enough, although there are indications that there will be considerable doing in a short time. Many people are returning from the country, and now that the schools have opened again quite a difference will soon be noted. Funeral work continues to be the main source of revenue at present, and on several days last week there was an abundance of it, well divided among the various dealers.

In Oakland and Alameda business has been fair, considering the season. There has been a good quantity of wedding work in addition to the usual number of funeral orders. Things in general are slowly but surely drifting around to normal conditions again, and I think in a couple of months the dealers will have all the trade they can handle.

Various Notes.

Mrs. G. L. Grant is visiting in Oakland for a few days.

A fire in the stables of David Neely, the Berkeley nurseryman, on August 2, did $500 damage.

E. J. Wickson, of Berkeley, has returned from his trip to southern California.

N. Rolleri is on a two weeks' trip to Los Angeles.

Joseph Goldstone, formerly located at 113 Sixth street, has opened a well appointed establishment at 1814 Post street, near Fillmore.

R. Groves, of the Park Floral Co., Haight street, reports a heavy funeral trade for the entire month of July. Mr. Groves also has a large shipping trade.

George Fitzgerald is located at present with F. Ludemann, at the Pacific Nurseries, Millbrae.

YOUNGSTOWN, OHIO.

The Templin Co., the firm that has made Calla, Mahoning county, famous, has bought out the old stand of Walker & McLean, 115 West Federal street. The Templins will manage the store and supply the seed stock for the same, making the establishment a first-class seed and flower store. John Walker, of the original firm of Walker & McLean, will have charge of the greenhouses at Crab Creek as formerly. Owing to a disagreement among the partners, the florists, Walker & McLean, went into the hands of a trustee some months ago. William Cornelius has filled the position which on August 15 became a court record only.

The Templin Co. does an immense business in the greenhouse line. The revenue derived at the Calla postoffice from this firm alone makes the postoffice the second in importance in Mahoning county. The fact that they have interested themselves in the local establishment means much to the future of the business.

John Walker is an expert grower. He has had years of experience in Philadelphia before coming to Youngstown. The firm will do much of its shipping from this city, but the main offices of the Templin Co. will be retained at Calla.

JAMESTOWN, N. Y.

The development of the establishment of the Lake View Rose Gardens has been something remarkable, and not less noteworthy is the addition at present under way. It consists of forty-five houses, each 20x200, and constitutes the largest single addition which has ever been made to the establishment. When completed the total glass area of the place will exceed a million square feet.

The new houses are to be planted as follows: Eight to smilax, 52,000 plants; thirteen to Asparagus plumosus, 48,000 plants; two to Sprengeri, 6,000 plants; three each to Bride, Bridesmaid, Richmond and Liberty roses, 48,000 plants in all; nine to carnations, White Lawson, Queen, Mrs. Lawson, Enchantress and Estelle, 30,000 plants; one house to adiantum.

In a block of old houses 96,000 carnations have been planted. Thirty houses each 300 feet long are devoted to roses, including Beauty, Meteor, Killarney and La Detroit. Chrysanthemums to the number of 75,000 are also planted and 75,000 lilies are grown annually, besides many thousands of French and Dutch bulbs. One house is devoted to sweet peas. In the older ranges eight houses are given to asparagus and eight to smilax. Several houses are devoted to Easter plants, including Crimson Rambler, azaleas, hydrangeas, rhododendrons, etc. Several houses are devoted to palms and ferns and 20,000 geraniums in 4-inch pots are grown for the spring trade.

I AM overwhelmed with orders, from Boston to Seattle.—J. D. BRENNEMAN, Harrisburg, Pa.

CHICAGO TO DAYTON.

The Chicago Florists' Club has concluded arrangements for the special train over the Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago & St. Louis R. R., leaving the Illinois Central passenger station, Twelfth street, Chicago, at 12:45 Monday noon, August 20, and due to arrive in Dayton, via Kankakee, Lafayette and Indianapolis, about 8:40 p. m., practically a daylight ride all the way. The train will consist of three or more new day coaches, one combination car, one dining car to serve luncheon and dinner a la carte.

The rate by the certificate plan for the round trip is only $9.70. The tickets are good on all trains August 17 to 23, and for the return trip the validated certificates will be honored up to and including August 31.

The Chicago Florists' Club cordially invites the florists of the northwest and southwest, delegates to the convention, to join this special train at Chicago Monday noon as above stated, and see that when they buy their tickets and secure their certificates that these tickets read via Big Four route from Chicago to Dayton.

Delegates who can join us at any point along our route are requested to do so. The committee will be glad to hear as early as possible from all who decide to join our party, so that the necessary arrangements can be made in time. Delegates buying tickets in Chicago will secure them at the city ticket office of the Big Four, 238 South Clark street, with certificates.

Hello! Brother Florists,

SHALL WE SEE "YOU ALL" AT DAYTON?

We sent a few of our new Cannas to be planted in the city parks last spring and we are anxious to have "you all" see them and tell us if they are any good. We think a "heap sight" of some of them, but want to know what "you all" will say about them. There are 188 kinds, all but 17 of them are of our own originating. We are all ready to "whoop em up" in big shape if "you all" think they are worth it, so be sure to see them and tell us just how they strike you.

DAYTON, OHIO.

Convention Notes.

Make free use of the information bureau at the Union station. You cannot miss it. Some members of the Dayton Florists' Club will be at the depot at all times to help you along as much as possible. Leave your baggage with the baggagemaster at the information bureau and he will deliver it to your hotel or boarding-house at once.

In the office of the exhibition building you will find a postoffice established, so have your letters addressed reading: "Convention, Society of American Florists, Fairgrounds, Dayton, Ohio." You will find a telegraph office at the secretary's office, besides the free use of telephones.

We should like to direct your attention to a novel feature of this convention; that is, the exhibition of plants for parks and suburban and city homes, of some of the largest concerns in the United States, also of some undiscovered talent. You will be surprised what talent is slumbering in the art of landscape gardening and garden architecture. As the S. A. F. has made no provision for prizes for such an exhibit, the Dayton Florists' Club will do so in the shape of gold, silver and bronze medals.

We regret to say that, through some misunderstanding, a large southern concern has placed its exhibits of cannas in the public parks. However, the same concern will exhibit its cut flowers in the exhibition hall, and all desiring to see these plants in the beds will be taken into the respective parks in a private conveyance by our genial park superintendent, Mr. Killworth.

J. B. Heiss.

Archbald, Pa.—Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Gerbig entertained the Scranton Florists' Club on Friday, August 3, at their home. Refreshments were served the guests and a good time was enjoyed by the members of the party. All present voted Mr. and Mrs. Gerbig royal entertainers. Among those present from Scranton were: Mr. and Mrs. C. B. McClintock, Mr. and Mrs. E. B. McDonnell and Messrs. Arthur Carr, William Clark, G. R. Rodham, E. D. Schultheis and Miss Emily Schultheis.

OBITUARY.

Alexander Emslie.

Alexander Emslie is dead, after a long illness with tuberculosis. Mr. Emslie was born in Aberdeenshire, Scotland, in 1868, and came to this country when 10 years of age. He had been engaged extensively in the florist business at Barre, and had built up his plant from a small one to many times its original size. He is survived by his wife and two children, two brothers, George and William, in Berlin, besides his father and mother in Scotland. He was a prominent member of the Clan Gordon, Odd Fellows and Masons.

DAYTON HOTELS.

The headquarters during the convention will be the Hotel Algonquin. All hotels are within one square of all street-cars, taking you to the exhibition grounds within ten minutes. We give here a list and prices of the leading hotels:

AMERICAN PLAN.

The Algonquin—From $2.50 to $5 a day; 300 guests.
The Beckel—From $3 to $4 a day; 200 guests.
The Phillips—From $2 to $2.50 a day; 150 guests.
Hotel Daytonia—From $1 to $1.50 a day; 100 guests.
The Aldine—From $1 to $1.50 a day; 25 guests.
The Vendome—$1.50 a day; 25 guests.

EUROPEAN PLAN.

The Atlas—From $1 to $2 a day; 75 guests.
The Wehmer—From 50 to 75 cents a day; 50 guests.
The Stag Hotel—50 cents a day; 25 guests.
The Urban—From 50 cents to $1 a day; 60 guests.

We have also on our list a number of smaller hotels and many private houses, prices from 50 cents to 75 cents for single rooms. If enough applications are made a camp will be established, with well-furnished, double roof tents, four cots to a tent, at a nominal cost of from 50 cents to 75 cents each. Any one wanting accommodations, if no individual arrangements are preferred, should make application as soon as possible to J. B. Heiss, president of the Florists' Club, who will see that arrangements are made to the satisfaction of all concerned.

I LIKE the REVIEW best of all; it is very interesting and instructive.—LUDWIG ZIMMER, St. Louis, Mo.

Watch Us Grow

ARAUCARIAS, the best decorative plants Nature produces, our specialty.

Every man in business and life, to be successful, must adopt one thing as his specialty and that specialty, of whatever nature it may be, he must guard, study and push to such an extent that it not only benefits himself but he must continue it so every one who seeks his aid, services or his article, which he advertises or practices, will share a slice of his activity and prosperity. I made the importation and cultivation of araucarias a special study in my life. The figures below will show my success in business from the first year; by commencing with an importation of 250 and now, the eleventh year, my importation has grown up to 6,000 (come and see it), the reason being that the araucaria grows yearly more in favor with the plant consuming people all over the country, as a most admired decorative plant for the parlor, bed-room, dining and sitting-rooms, stores and hotels, lawns and porches. The outlook will be of an importation of at least 8,000 to 10,000 in spring of 1907. To secure this vast amount for 1907, I am now on the ocean, per Steamer New Amsterdam, leaving Hoboken Aug. 15, striking for Belgium, making contracts for next year. I shall also bring over with me at the same time, a large lot of choice Azalea Indica and Palms, etc., for Christmas and Easter forcing. No money will be spared to secure for my customers the cream of the Belgium greenhouses only.

Please note lowest prices now August and September.

Araucaria Excelsa, 12 to 14 inches high, 5½-in. pots, 3 to 4 tiers, 2 yrs. old, 50c. 14 to 16 inches high, 5½-in. pots, 3 to 4 tiers, 2 yrs. old, 60c. 16 to 18 inches high, 5½ to 6-in. pots, 4 to 5 tiers, 3 yrs. old, 75c. 18 to 20 inches high, 6-in. pots, 5 to 6 tiers, 4 yrs. old, $1.00. 20 to 24 inches high, 6-in. pots, 5 to 6 tiers, 4 yrs. old, $1.25. 36 to 50 inches high, specimens, 7-in. pots, 6 yrs. old, $2 50 to $3.00.

Araucaria Compacta Robusta, have 1000 of them. Never were they as nice as this year. Plants are as broad as long, from 12 to 20 inches in height, 3 to 4 perfect tiers, 20 to 30 inches across from tip of one tier to the other, 3, 4 and 5 yrs. old. 6 to 7-in. pots, $1.25, $1.50, $1.75 to $2.00, up to $3.00 each.

Araucaria Excelsa Glauca, perfect jewels in shape and size, their beautiful greenish blue tiers give them such a striking appearance, that anyone seeing them must fall in love with them on sight. Plants, 6 to 7-in. pots, 3, 4, 5 perfect tiers, 15 to 25 inches in height, from 15 to 30 inches across, $1.25, $1.50, $1.75, $2.00 to $2.50 each. Please bear in mind that the above mentioned varieties are the cream of Belgium's productions. We have thousands of them and can meet all demands.

Kentia Belmoreana, 6-in. pots, 4-year-old, 5 to 6 leaves, bushy, 30 to 35 inches high, $1.25; 5½ to 6-in. pots, 3-year-old, 5 to 6 leaves, 75c to $1.00 each. These are the sizes entered in the customs house.

OUR LITTLE PETS

From Aschmann, in Philadelphia, we bought
An araucaria, a pet for our little girl.
Now we have two pets, the pride of our thought:
The little girl so sweet, a head full of curls,
And the araucaria with its everlasting green—
A more joyful home you never have seen.

Kentia Forsteriana, 7-in. pots, made-up, 1 large one in center, 3 smaller sizes, 22 to 25 ins. high around, $2.00 each; 6-in. pots, single plants, 35 to 40 ins. high, 5 to 6 good leaves, 4-year-old, $1.25 to $1.50 each; 30 to 35 ins. high, 4-year-old, 6-in. pots, 5 good leaves, $1.00 each; 25 to 30 ins. high, 5½-in. pots, 3-year-old, 5 leaves, 75c; made-up plants with 3, 18 to 20 ins. high, 25c to 30c.

Cocos Weddelliana, 15c.

Jerusalem Cherries or Solanums, same varieties we sell at Xmas for 75c, $1.00 each; 2½-in. pots, $5.00 per 100.

Ficus Elastica (Belgian importation), 6-in. pots, 50c.

Areca Lutescens, 4-in., made up with 3 plants in a pot, 25c.

Cycas Revoluta, sago palms, 6 to 7-in. pots, 7 to 20 leaves to the plant, 10c per leaf.

Nephrolepis Barrowsii, 6-in., strong plants ready for 7 to 8-inch, 50c; 4-inch, strong, 25c. Nephrolepis Scottii, 6-in, large, 50c; 5½-in., 40c; 5-in., 35c; 4 in., 20c to 25c. Boston Ferns, 4-in., 20c to 25c, also by the 1000. Ferns for dishes, 3-in., 6c; 2¼-in., 5c.

Asparagus Plumosus Nanus, 4-in., 10c; 3-in., 6c.

All goods must travel at purchaser's risk. Cash with order, please.

Here is a Business Book For Business Men

THOROUGHLY REVISED AND BROUGHT UP TO DATE.....

NO SCIENCE, BUT LOTS OF PRACTICAL COMMON SENSE

THE FIRST EDITION WAS SOLD OUT SO QUICKLY THAT

Several Hundred Orders Could not be Filled

"I have several times been consulted by those who would make a beginning in the Florists' business. In each case I have said that the first step is to subscribe for a Trade Paper, and the next to procure a copy of The Florists' Manual."—J. A. VALENTINE, Pres. Park Floral Co., Denver, Colo.

No dry-as-dust botanical classifications, but tells you just how to produce marketable plants and cut flowers in the best and cheapest way.

TELLS you just what you want to know about every plant that there is any money in for a Commercial Florist.

Treats of over 200 subjects and is freely illustrated with fine half-tone engravings.

INDIANAPOLIS.

Business Conditions.

The last week has been the hottest we have experienced this summer, and while this city has had several heavy rains, they were partial and only extended a few miles in any direction. Some sections of the country are needing rain badly. Carnation planting is going on apace, and this week will see the majority of the growers finished.

Various Notes.

Bertermann Bros. are having their store newly decorated. When finished it will make the place more attractive than ever.

John Rieman is also remodeling his store. He will gain considerably more room by the change he is making and will be in fine shape to handle his increasing trade.

Walter Bertermann is at Atlantic City trying to find out "What are the Wild Waves Saying."

William Billingsly is spending his vacation at Bass Lake fishing and boating, and getting in good shape for the S. A. F. meeting.

Homer Wiegand and wife are traveling in the east, taking in New York city, Buffalo, Niagara Falls, Cleveland, etc., on their trip.

Rodenbeck Bros. expect to build an addition to their plant at once. S.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

Pittsburg and the surrounding country have been visited by severe storms every day the last week, some of them seeming almost cloudbursts; they have done much damage to crops, in some cases ruining them entirely, but with the exception of the loss of several fields of early asters, the growers have not suffered.

The cut flower trade has been better than the average August business for the last week, especially with the wholesale houses. They have had a hard time to supply the amount of good stock wanted, but they are having their troubles with the poor grades of asters and small roses, which are coming in a deluge. Gladioli also are a drug on the market, and are selling so cheaply the wholesale men say it does not pay to pack them where they have to be shipped.

Various Notes.

Ernest Garland, formerly with the Washington Floral Co., has three houses under way, about 12,000 feet of glass, at Finleyville, which he will plant with carnations for the wholesale trade.

Joseph Seaman, of Washington, Pa., with Geo. Garland, his foreman, were visitors at the Pittsburg Rose & Carnation Co., Bakerstown, Pa., last Saturday, and were highly pleased with what they saw there. Mr. Seaman already has his stock all planted in the houses.

There will be quite a large delegation to Dayton from Pittsburg, most of whom will leave Monday, August 20, on the train leaving Pittsburg at 9 a. m., via the P. C. C. & St. L.; fare, $9.35, on the certificate plan. Those desiring further information should call up W. A. Clarke, of the Pittsburg Cut Flower Co.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Langhans, of Wheeling, W. Va., are spending their vacation on the farm of Samuel Taylor, Mrs. Langhans' father, near Bellevue, Pa.

P. J. Demas, of the Pittsburg Florists' Exchange, with a party of friends, is at Jamestown, N. Y.

E. C. Ludwig left for Milwaukee Monday night with the Eagles. He decorated the car with flowers.

William Falconer and daughter will attend the cemetery superintendents' convention in Detroit at the same time the florists are in Dayton.

George Marshall, of the Pittsburg Cut Flower Co., is at Conneaut Lake. He took his fishing tackle with him.

Howard Carney, of J. B. Murdoch's, is training for the firemen's convention at McDonald, Pa.

E. C. Reineman left August 8 for Mt. Clemens to recuperate, but will be at Dayton for the convention.

Miss Donahey, of the firm of Misses Forbes & Donahey, Wheeling, W. Va., is sick with typhoid fever.

John Bader and daughter are spending a few weeks at Kingston, Ont.

NOTES OF EASTERN RAMBLES.

In a mixed business and pleasure trip, we recently had the chance of seeing many places which have been unvisited by us for many years, and of conversing with their owners.

At Bedman's establishment, at Rahway, N. J., we were surprised at the acreage set apart for salvias. He has all the varieties, and they look good. A new sort, pink, sturdy habit and dark green foliage, he expects to have sufficient stock of to supply the trade in 1908. Portulacas, cockscombs, and striped and blotched petunias are also excellent features. Tomatoes are grown to the number of 500,000 plants. In plants for seed of all descriptions, over eighteen acres are grown on his place.

Carnations at C. H. Allen's greenhouses, Floral Park, L. I., thrive to the best advantage. Victory, Charles Webber's introduction, has proven so far the leader for the Long Island growers as the best scarlet.

John Lewis Childs has a large plant outside of his seed and bulb houses. New strains of Rex begonias, as well as fine specimens of crotons, stand out particularly well. He has also a good general collection of plants. Mr. Childs, with his customary hospitality, took us in his horseless carriage for a ride around his property. We had long known that gladioli were some of the leading features at Floral Park, but were astonished at the space devoted to this item.

At Despatch, near Rochester, N. Y., James Vick's Sons' trial grounds were showing good returns. Practically all the hardy annuals were in bloom. A large space was set apart, we were informed, for a contract order of 100 pounds of Phlox Drummondii grandiflora. Snowdrift aster was in full flower. Their other varieties were looking well, but the prospects are for a thin crop of seed.

At Cranford, N. J., where L. Ussing has been located for over thirty years, we found a class of plants which one rarely can discover in this country, especially grown for the New York market, such as wallflowers, myosotis, yellow and white daisies, etc., which are brought in for Christmas. Mr. Ussing always comes home from the city with an empty basket. He personally sells his stock.

W. H. Keyser, Jersey City, says he had the best trade for many years last spring. He grows a great many of the vegetable plants used by the seed trade in New York city and has also a good sale for bedding plants. F. S. P.

The Test of Products

Here is a test that every florist and grower can make for himself, as the construction of your house vitally affects the stock you grow. If your houses are not built right you cannot expect to turn out perfect plants.

Does your house produce the amount of stock and the kind of stock it should? Let us furnish you the material for your next house and then make a test—we only ask for a trial order.

The Real Test Cases

On boilers are often the isolated cases, the cases you and I don't hear of every day—(but after a while they get around to us—and to other boiler makers)—the cases where extra heavy work has been put on boilers, and they've met it without disproportionate coal cost—the kind of a boiler that always holds up its end—The Hitchings Boilers are made that way.

WE'VE BEEN TALKING SO MUCH THE LAST WEEK OR SO on the good there's in our truss construction that just for the moment we lost sight of the importance of our iron frame house. After all, this is really the most practical construction for the florist—we say "most" in answer to your assertion that, "Wood houses are good enough for me."

The iron frame house is not only the lightest house, but it's built on the century plan of endurance—it's the only way you can build the large even span houses successfully, and everybody nowadays is talking large houses. Send for catalog. It gives you the common sense of the Iron Frame subject.

It is hardly necessary to comment on the quality of

OUR STOCK

We can usually supply all grades, from the very best down to the short-stemmed ones. We do not contract, but charge Chicago market quotations according to quality.

No other house is in as strong a position as we are to furnish so often called for by your best trade. As we have a good demand for this class of stock it enables us to sell the medium and short grades cheap. Telegraph orders always filled to the best of our ability. Special cold storage rooms are being built at greenhouses, the better to take care of stock for the shipping trade. All correspondence cheerfully answered. Try us when your season opens up.

Regular Orders can be Filled From Greenhouse Direct.

Our greenhouse plant, comprising very nearly 1,000,000 square feet of glass, is entirely devoted to the growing of Roses, Carnations, Chrysanthemums, Lilies, Asparagus, Smilax, Sprengeri, Ferns, Tulips, Narcissus, Daisies, Mignonette and Snapdragon for the wholesale trade. We will be very strong on Beauties, Richmond, Chatenay, Maids, Brides, Uncle John Perles, Sunrise, Kaiserin and our own sport of Chatenay. We are actually benching 155,000 Carnation plants to cut from this season, the biggest field of Carnations under glass in the world. Come and see them. The trade is always welcome.

WE DEAL

With Every One

Straight From The Shoulder

Florists' Supplies

In our Supply Department it is a rule to make only Wire Designs that will give our customers entire satisfaction. We not only know how good wire designs should be made, but we go further and MAKE ALL OUR DESIGNS that way. Nothing but the best and proper grade of wire enters into the construction of our frames, and none but skilled mechanics are employed in making them. We do not do cheap work, but we do GOOD work, CHEAP. We give no one cause to complain that our designs are "flimsy." We have considered this common complaint, and have set a strong, substantial, and perfect design for our standard.

If you want a special design, give us the order. We make any wire design within the bounds of possibility, and make it RIGHT.

If anything that we may send you is not exactly as represented, or does not meet entirely with your approval, or if you feel that we are not giving you a dollar's worth for every dollar you spend with us, RETURN the goods at our expense. That is fair, isn't it?

Cut Flowers

Doing a very large shipping trade in Cut Flowers, with quality of stock at least the equal of any in this market, we shall have supplies this season to enable us to again increase our business in this department.

You can get of us anything and everything you need, for we handle every flower in its season and can take care of the largest buyers, while no order is too small to receive our careful attention. (Many a customer who started with us as a small buyer is now with us as a big one.)

Besides quality of stock, and large supply, we also guarantee promptness, as we decline to make promises which we are unable to fulfill, and you may rest assured that any orders placed with us will be executed in a manner to please you.

We do not want you as a customer simply for one order. We want to gain your patronage and retain it by square dealing. Therefore, when we make a statement, we do so because we can support it. But what's the use of arguing further? Unless you TRY US, you cannot appreciate our statements.

NEW SEEDLING HYBRID TEA ROSE

Countess of Gosford

Awarded the Gold Medal of the National Rose Society, 1905.....

This magnificent rose is destined to take a leading place among roses, both as an exhibition variety as well as for garden decoration and pot culture. It is

A Fine, Strong Grower, with a Free Branching Habit and Fine, Bold Foliage

As a profuse blooming variety it is unsurpassed among hybrid teas; its flowers have wonderful lasting properties, retaining both their color and shape for several days. Its color is distinct and unique among roses, and most difficult to describe, being a distinct salmon-pink—rose and pink, running into each other, the base of petals suffused saffron-yellow, and the whole bloom shaded salmon, making a and a color that never fades until the petals drop. The blooms are of perfect form, large, full, very long and pointed; petals large and of great depth and substance. A telling exhibition flower (after the style and form of Killarney), but quite distinct in color; it is the most refined and beautiful rose of this type. For florists and cut flower work generally, on account of the marvelous freedom with which it blooms, and its fascinating color, it is certain to be in great demand. We recommend this rose with every confidence to all rose growers.

Flower of Wonderful Brightness and Charm

PRICE 7/6 EACH, OR SIX PLANTS FOR 40/-

Strong plants in pots, which have been in the open air for past two months, thoroughly ripe, and specially suitable for shipping, now, or in fall. We confidently ask American nurserymen to give this rose a trial.

SAMUEL M'GREDY & SON

ROSE GROWERS, ETC. PORTADOWN, IRELAND

Press Opinions of the National Rose Society's Autumn Show at Westminster

A record number of exhibits appeared yesterday at the Royal Horticultural Hall, Westminster, when the National Rose Society opened its autumn show. The blooms shown were of every shade of color—white and cream, orange and pale pink, deep carmine. The best rose of all was the Countess of Gosford, shown by Messrs. M'Gredy & Son, Portadown.—Daily Standard.

New rose that obtained the much-coveted Gold Medal—Countess of Gosford (Samuel M'Gredy & Son, Portadown), a beautiful flower, rather in the style of Killarney, but deep in tint, and a much better and fuller flower.—Horticultural Advertiser.

Ireland still leads as winner of Gold Medals for new roses. On this occasion Messrs. S. M'Gredy & Son took a Gold Medal for Countess of Gosford, a lovely rose, a Killarney, with a yellowish and salmon shading pervading the flower.—The Gardener Illustrated.

Rose Countess of Gosford (Messrs. S. M'Gredy & Son, Portadown).—A pretty seedling H. T. of a bright, rich rosy-pink, faintly tinged toward the base with yellow. The flowers are beautifully pointed, with high center, and nice open guard petals. A rich, fine flower. Awarded Gold Medal.—Journal of Horticulture.

Another Gold Medal Rose is Countess of Gosford, which is shown by Messrs. S. M'Gredy & Son, Portadown, Ireland, and this is reminiscent of Killarney; but the shades of color are distinct salmon-pink, rose and pink running into each other, to make a flower of wonderful brightness and charm.—Daily Chronicle.

Ireland captured the honor of showing the best rose in ten thousand at the National Rose Society's record show in Westminster today. Rich fragrance was shed upon the surrounding atmosphere from an astonishing army of kaleidoscopic beauty, and anything more delicately charming than the shading of some of the blooms has never been seen. The queen of them all was adjudged to be one named after the Countess of Gosford, of which the proud growers were Messrs. Samuel M'Gredy & Son, Portadown, Ireland.—Dundee Courier.

Secretary, PHILIP J. HAUSWIRTH, Chicago.

Treasurer, H. B. BEATTY, Oil City, Pa.

Centrally located, as is Dayton, it has proven a most excellent convention city, the attendance at the twenty-second annual meeting of the Society of American Florists this week being as great as any in its history. There not being the number of distractions characteristic of larger places, and particularly of Washington, the visitors devoted most of their time to the exhibition and the business sessions.

Dayton is known far and wide for its beautiful streets, pleasant homes and open-handed hospitality. All these things the S. A. F. visitors appreciated at their full value. They found the hotel accommodations inadequate, but all not provided for by the hotels were comfortably placed by the committee, which had a large list of private residences at its command. The convention was held at the fair-grounds, something over half a mile out from town, and the street-car service, even though Dayton and southern Ohio have been the scene of the trolley's development, was lamentably poor. Once arrived at the grounds, however, there was everything required for the day, provided by the hard-working members of the Dayton Florists' Club, to whom a large measure of credit is due for the accomplishment of a greater task than ever before has fallen to the craft in so small a city, for we don't count Asheville, where there was no such elaborate preparation. Indeed, in Dayton the only provision not made by the club, or the National Cash Register Co., from which a majority of Daytonian blessings flow, was for good weather. It was hot and the humidity was great. Heavy showers were frequent and on Tuesday the opening session was delayed nearly two hours by a rainfall which at first was a miniature cloudburst. It precluded the holding of the president's reception on the Patterson grounds as intended.

The trade exhibit was larger and better than ever and all of the exhibitors did a satisfactory business. The two floors of the big, octagonal building were well filled, with a showing which included about everything a florist ever needs, be he grower or retailer. As is usually the case, Philadelphia occupied a majority of the space; but there were many new exhibitors. The shape of the building and the use made of the space by Superintendent Frank were most satisfactory, for each exhibitor had as good a place as any other, which is no small matter where the trade display is as important a feature as it now is at S. A. F. conventions.

The business sessions were held in a carriage shed! But it had been transformed into one of the finest of meeting places (when it didn't rain) by curtaining the walls and covering the ceiling with cheese-cloth, over which wild smilax and lyrata had been garlanded. The floor was carpeted with sawdust and chairs were provided in this breezy bower for all who could be lured away from the manifold attractions so handsomely displayed by the exhibitors in the big hall. Adjoining the convention hall similar arrangements had been made for housing the restaurant and the popular café.

The Opening Session.

The call to order Tuesday, when the deluge had passed, was with President W. F. Kasting, Vice-President H. M. Altick, Secretary W. J. Stewart, ex-Presidents Lonsdale, Breitmeyer and Vaughan and Executive Committeemen W. H. Elliott, H. V. Hallock, H. H. Ritter, F. H. Traendly and P. J. Hauswirth on the platform. Several other ex-presidents were present, but preferred seats on the floor of the convention.

Mr. Altick asked indulgence for any shortcomings in the arrangements or facilities, although the only criticisms were on the weather and things outside the control of the Dayton Florists' Club. But he knew everybody was pleased, and this was mere form. He then introduced Judge Charles W. Dale, who welcomed the society in place of the mayor, who was out of the city, doubtless seeking a cooler or drier climate. The judge, while the rain pattered on the roof, told of the sunshine and happiness florists bring to the whole people, for all love flowers, and said it is with pleasure that every Daytonian calls attention to the large influence floriculture has on the lives of the people of the Gem city, as they like to hear it called. He paid a tribute to the civic pride of John M. Patterson and lauded the welfare work of the city's pet industry, as do most of the people, and closed by presenting to the society its annual bunch of keys, left in his keeping by the rusticating mayor.

Judge Dale was warmly applauded, and when Prof. John F. Cowell, of Buffalo, was introduced to respond he told the simple truth when he said the welcome was among the most cordial the society ever has had. He said the trade had heard much of Dayton and had come to see and learn, to drink deeply at the fountain of knowledge and go away filled with new ideas as to how our mission to make the earth beautiful may best be fulfilled.

President Kasting, needing no introduction, was presented with the gavel and took the chair. After requesting the free expression of ideas as to furthering the work of the society, he read his annual address, which was as follows:

The President's Address.

Twenty-two years ago, I am told, while this society, then new-born, was holding its first meeting in the city of Cincinnati, there came an invitation to visit this city and view the horticultural wonders as set forth at the Soldiers' Home and other places. Today we come again, increased an hundred fold, to see not only the Soldiers' Home but to see and admire the thousands of plantations in the streets, squares and about the homes of the people; plantations that have made the name of Dayton known the world over and have been an incentive for other municipalities and an object lesson in civic cleanliness and good taste.

Amid such surroundings I trust our deliberations as a society may be immeasurably pleasant and profitable, and that as individuals we may carry away impressions and ideas that will enable us to improve our own environment and add to the beauty and general attractiveness of the localities which we severally represent.

Twenty-two years is not a long time in the history of a nation or even of a society, but it is time enough, I think, to prove the solidity of our organization, and time enough for us to have profited by our experiences. If there was a need for an organization of this character twenty-two years ago, how much greater is the need today, with the enormous expansion of our business that has come in two decades? The wisdom of the fathers has been amply demonstrated. We cannot afford, however, to stand still and rest upon the records of the past—we must put forth new efforts and keep pace with the great procession.

The question comes home to us: Are we making the most of our opportunities as a society with such broad aims and splendid possibilities? Would it not be well to pause in our congratulations and our commendations and indulge in a season of introspection and see if we cannot profit by example and still further augment our usefulness. Let us take a leaf from the history of our host city and clean up our back yard and put our front yard in such condition that it may be an example to all men, to the end that we may become a greater power for good in the years that are to come. Let us take an example, too, from the work that the National Cash Register Co. has done, and in our wider dwelling-place be leaders in improvement and education.

Wm. J. Stewart, President-elect Society of American Florists.

Perennial Questions.

There are certain questions that seem to be perennial sources of discussion, which crop up annually for our consideration. Occasionally one is settled; but its place is immediately taken, and it is only by constantly hammering at them that they are brought into shape and disposed of.

I purpose briefly to refer to the more important of these problems, not with the idea of giving you any fresh argument, but rather that they may not be allowed to rest until they are solved. Among the questions discussed by my predecessors perhaps none are of more general importance than those pertaining to education.

We as professors of garden art and craft will continue to be looked up to as those having authority to speak, and it devolves upon us to be prepared, as far as we may, to lead in all matters relating to horticultural pursuits. How we best can reach the people who are interested in garden matters, and increase their love for vernal surroundings, as well as to implant desire where no desire exists, are questions of vital importance and worthy of our most earnest consideration. Exhibitions as a factor in education are of the greatest value. It is by the eye more than by the ear that people are instructed. The value of local displays of plants and flowers, happily on the increase, has done much to stimulate a more general love for flowers and incidentally has increased the demands for the product of our art. Probably still more far-reaching on account of its greater publicity and more elaborate and comprehensive display would be an exhibition of national character, where the entire country would be represented.

National Flower Show.

This question of a national flower show was again before the executive committee of the society at its recent meeting in this city and was discussed at some length, and I believe no one dissented from the statement that such a show would be of the greatest benefit to our interests. The result of this discussion will appear in committee report. I trust that the details of plans for such an exhibition may be perfected in the near future and that such an exhibition may be held in one of the great centers of the country.

Perhaps it is unfortunate in some respects that our interests have been drawn away, or divided, by the organization of special societies devoted to the culture of individual flowers. I mean that in many cases the interest in the special has overcome the interest in the general, and to an extent has weakened the S. A. F. when it comes to a question of combination of all interests in one grand exhibition. Every one with the welfare of our society at heart must labor for the closer union between those vigorous offsprings and the mother society.

Trade Exhibitions.

Trade exhibitions, as they are now conducted at our annual meetings, are undoubtedly of great benefit to our members. They should be fostered, and the exhibitors should be encouraged in every way consistent with the proper disposal of the business of the convention.

I deem this subject of so much importance that I should recommend that special time should be given to the examination of the exhibits. The exhibitors come to our meeting under a great expense, they contribute largely to the success of our meetings both in interest and financially, and I believe they should have more consideration at the hands of the makers of the program.

We can well afford to call one day Exhibitors' day. We have made an experiment with outdoor exhibits and, while the result to date is not satisfactory, yet I believe the idea is good, and that this outdoor exhibition can be made an important adjunct. In order to make an exhibit of this kind a success time must be taken for proper preparation. A manager, preferably a local man, must be appointed, and the ground should be available a year before the date of the meeting, or, better still, a year and a half. It would then be possible for fall planting or even spring planting to be done, and plants could be properly established and prepared. This would enable our nurserymen to make an exhibit of trees, shrubs and such other hardy material as they might desire to show. A good exhibition of this character would add greatly to the interest of our meetings.

The Experiment Stations.

The experiment stations are doing much valuable educational work, and their publications are far-reaching. Every member of this society should avail himself of his opportunity to obtain the bulletins of his state stations and use his best endeavor to see that these stations are provided with sufficient funds to carry on their work. Any one who has been familiar with the work of these institutions for the last twenty years cannot have failed to notice the improvement in the quality of work done.

The complaint made by many that not enough work is done for the benefit of the florist and gardener is not so just as it was years ago, and in many instances more work along these lines would be done if it were called for. If you don't ask for it, you don't get it.

Horticultural Education.

Horticultural education as provided in the public schools is perhaps rather disappointing to many. But it must be remembered that in the common schools only the merest rudiments are possible, and just how much horticultural instruction is given will depend largely upon the people of the locality.

Nature study is in many cases really a primary course in horticulture. Some of the states are showing considerable activity along this line, and probably the great need at the present time is a more efficient plan of work and better prepared instructors. The way to stimulate the work is by arousing public sentiment in behalf of the value of such study. Mr. Hallock, who has given this subject much thought, will discuss the question at the meeting.

Free Seed Distribution.

Free seed distribution by the federal government still continues; but the efforts being made will if continued, I doubt not, effect a discontinuance of the practice and the "hoary fraud" will be done away with. Members of this society should give their representatives in congress no rest until this practice is abolished.

Parcels Post.

A parcels post would be to the great advantage of most people in the trade and a great boon to the general public. The elements opposed to such public convenience are well known, and so far they have had influence enough to prevent the passage of a law establishing it. The agitation should be vigorously continued, and every means taken to impress our lawmakers with the necessity for such a method of transportation. We are behind most civilized countries in this respect.

The Tariff.

The tariff on many articles which are of necessity imported or which might be imported to our great advantage still continues to vex us. Some of the duties imposed are indefensible as a whole, and others should be greatly modified. This subject has been before us often and some action has been taken in regard to it. I recommend the appointment of a committee whose duty it will be to lay before the proper authorities our views on the subject, and urge a revision of the duties whenever possible.

Secretary's Office.

To return to our more immediate concerns, it seems to me that we might profitably make some improvements in the conduct of our business affairs. The secretary's office is one of the most important, as well as one of the most permanent, within the society, and some changes in the manner of business might be well undertaken. In the first place the secretary should give bonds, as is now required of the treasurer. His books and vouchers should be presented at the meeting of the executive committee for auditing in connection with the accounts of the treasurer, and not be passed upon in bulk in the hurry of the annual convention. His accounts as published should be itemized, for every member has a right to know just how his money is being spent and to whom it is paid. He is now the purchasing agent of the society, and no check is kept upon his expenditures. I suggest that all bills be approved by the president before going to the treasurer for payment.

The secretary should be paid an adequate salary sufficient to remunerate him for his time and incidental expenses, and this should cover them all, so that bills for extra help, etc., would not be presented to the society.

Amendment to the By-laws.

The amendment to the by-laws, in regard to manner of conducting election, will come before you at this meeting and should not fail of action as recommended by the executive committee.

Membership.

Membership in the society should stand high. I cannot approve of the suggestion that the dues of certain members should be made less than those of others. While it is desirable to include in our membership every one engaged in ornamental gardening, whether he be on a private estate, in a public position, or in a wholesale warehouse, an effort should be made to induce all to join; yet it should be understood that all come in on an equal footing, and with equal responsibilities before the law.

The so-called private gardener of today may be a public gardener tomorrow; the employee of today may be, and indeed he probably will be, an employer tomorrow. Nor should it be forgotten that many an employee is better able to pay dues than are some employers.

It seems to me that this society should keep in closer touch with the local organization. It should have its accredited agent at the local flower shows and other gatherings of the craft. This would, I believe, tend to add new material to our membership list and add to the prestige of our society. In order to do this it would be necessary to have some one detailed for the purpose, and probably the secretary of our society would be most available for the purpose.

State Vice-presidents.

More care should be taken in the selection of the state vice-presidents. At the present time one or two men from a locality get together and place in nomination the person who suits them best, which as a rule is equivalent to the appointment for this office made by the president. This should be left entirely to the selection of the president, when he takes office. If he should not be acquainted sufficiently with a person from that territory or locality, it would be then the duty of the president to ascertain from the local society, whether there be one or few members in the craft, which is the best man for him to appoint. The office should stand for something and men should be appointed who will give some time to the interest of the society.

Business Methods.

Business methods need more study on the part of many men engaged in trade, and this is just as true of the flower trade as of any other. No man can hope to succeed who does his business in a loose and slipshod manner. No matter how small the business, a set of books should be kept so that the standing of the business can be found at a moment's notice.

Fair dealing both in buying and selling should be the rule, and a man's word should be a little better than his bond. Do not abuse your credit and you will find business very much easier. It is true in business as well as in other things that "A good name is better than riches."

I have alluded elsewhere to the trade exhibitions, and now I wish to add a few words in regard to their management. I believe that the society should take entire charge of these exhibits. It should appoint a manager, pay all expenses and receive any profits that may arise from such exhibitions. I am well aware that the custom has been otherwise, for the reason that the money realized was needed for the local people to help on the entertainment. Now this is all wrong. Is it not time that this society adopted an attitude of independence and dignity? Is it not time that this society selected its own place of meeting without putting it up to be auctioned off?

Would it not be possible for us to go in peace and quiet to some central point and hold our convention and entertain ourselves? There are many places that we could visit with profit to ourselves, where to be entertained by the local members of our trade would mean ruin to them. This entertainment has, in my opinion, grown to be a great evil and an unjust tax upon the communities visited. It has reached a point in the emulation of hosts where it behooves us to stop and consider the cost. Today there are only a few of the larger cities that dare invite a convention, because they cannot make the lavish preparations that have become customary. A reform in this direction is needed.

Sports.

Perhaps another reform is needed in the matter of sports. Do we not give rather too much valuable time to our games? It is true that they are enjoyable to many, but it hardly seems necessary to travel a thousand miles to play a game of baseball or shoot a few clay pigeons. I think we have gone a little too far and have suffered in the attendance on our meetings because of the time taken for these contests. I do not mean to decry the social value of our meetings, but is there not a better way of enjoying each other's society and one less embarrassing to the business of the convention?

I believe that these contests should be curtailed and so arranged as not to interfere with the working of the society as they do at present. Take a day for them if necessary, but let that day be after the business of the meeting is completed.

Horticultural Press.

One factor in the general success of our business that has received but scant notice from us is the horticultural press. While it may be said that these publications are purely commercial enterprises and outside of our societies, yet they contribute a great deal to our success as a society and contain from time to time the condensed essence of the brains of our more prominent members. They are certainly worthy of our support in every way and no man in our business can hope to be posted in the doings of our craft without the weekly perusal of these papers, advertisements and all.

In Conclusion.

A word more and I am finished. It has occurred to me that many good ideas are broached after the work of our committee is done. How easy it would be for every member of this society having opinions in regard to the management of the business of the society to put his ideas in writing and send the same to the secretary at any time previous to the meeting of the executive committee.

In surrendering the office of president to my successor, I want to thank you for your loyalty and consideration, which have made the work a joy, and will leave with me a most pleasant memory.

The consideration of the address was made a special order of business for Wednesday evening, after which Secretary Stewart made some announcements and read his annual report, which was as follows:

Secretary's Report.

I find it hard to realize that this is my nineteenth annual report as secretary. Twenty years seems a long period to look forward to, but very short in retrospect. Some of us who are awakening to the fact that the years count up very rapidly and that conventions come around with alarming frequency of late, can, however, take some comfort from Emerson, who wrote, "We do not count a man's years until he has nothing else to count." It is to be hoped that each and every one of us may be immune from year-counting for many a year to come. To quote again from the same writer, "Nothing great was ever achieved without enthusiasm." Dayton has been long on enthusiasm for many months,—hence this truly great convention opening, and as nothing is more infectious than healthy enthusiasm, it is not difficult to forecast what kind of a convention this, which we are now entering upon, is to be.

You all know that the executive board met here last spring, that we had a good time, as executive boards always do, and that we worked long and hard, as executive boards also always do. The program as printed discloses but scantily the quantity and quality of oratory which is promised as various important subjects are brought forward, and he who thinks to stay away from any of the sessions little realizes what he will miss.

Among the recommendations of the executive board are: First, the proposition that at all future trade exhibitions, the net profits therefrom be equally divided between the national society and the local organization. As this is a matter to be adjusted by the executive board each year, the main reason for referring to it here is that organizations planning to invite the society to visit their city may know before extending any invitation, and may govern themselves accordingly. The outdoor exhibition, wisely planned, earnestly urged and generously carried out, so far as the society and its Dayton friends are concerned, has not received the support that should have been given it by the plant growers and nursery trade generally. The project is on right lines, however, and should have another opportunity next year.

Recognizing the need of some better method of instruction in horticulture for young men, a sub-committee was appointed to confer with agricultural college officials, and it was voted to recommend to the society the appropriation of a sum not to exceed $150 toward the carrying out of some practical plan of co-operation between the society and the college.

According to instructions by the society, the scheme of numbered badges and a key book for members has been put in operation, and the name of every member registered up to July 15, 1906, appears therein. Other important transactions by the executive board are fully disclosed in the various items of the official program which you have before you.

Acting on the complaints of members living in New Jersey, an effort was made by your secretary and also by the chairman of the legislative committee, to get from the manager of the U. S. Express Co, a statement as to the reasons for the increased transportation charges made since last May upon flower shipments from New Jersey points to New York city, but we were met with a very decided refusal to give any explanation. A second request did not even receive the courtesy of an answer. Your secretary, in the meantime, had been making some investigations as to our privileges under the new Interstate Commerce Act, and on August 7, 1906, wrote the following letter:

Boston, August 7, 1906.

Mr. T. M. Jones, Mgr.,
U. S. Express Company,
39 Broadway, New York, N. Y.

Dear Sir: Referring to my letter of May 11, 1906, which thus far remains unanswered, I beg to state that in view of the universal sentiment of protest on the part of flower growers who are members of our society, and whose interests are affected by the advanced rates on flowers shipped from producers in your territory to the New York wholesale market, I deem it to be my duty to submit this matter to the Interstate Commerce Commission for investigation and adjustment, as is my privilege under the provisions of Section 13 of the amended Interstate Commerce Act, unless I receive some assurance from you that the increased charges complained of will be given prompt reconsideration by your company.

It would give me much pleasure to be able to report to our society at its convention in Dayton, Ohio, August 21-24, that the United States Express Co. had taken this question under advisement, and I hope to be able to announce a rate which would be generally accepted as just and reasonable.

Yours respectfully,
(Signed) WM. J. STEWART,
Secretary.

This letter shared the same fate as its predecessor, no acknowledgment having thus far been received. I believe we have a good case; I know that the Interstate Commerce Commission will give us a prompt and courteous hearing, and hope we shall be able to arrange for the appearance of our legislative committee with necessary witnesses before that body at an early date.

Regarding the domestic-grown narcissus bulbs exhibited by a Virginia grower last year, which were submitted to J. F. Sullivan for testing, that gentleman reports that he gave them identically the same treatment that was given the foreign-grown bulbs of the same varieties, and found the flowering qualities to be of substantially the same good value.

Medals have been delivered during the last year as follows:

Robert Craig & Son, Philadelphia, a bronze medal for Ficus pandurata, exhibited at the Washington convention.

Louis Wittbold, a bronze medal, for mechanical watering system, exhibited at the Washington convention.

Dennison School, Washington, D. C., through Miss Susan B. Sipe, bronze medal for superior work in gardening, October 16, 1905.

Through the American Carnation Society, January 24, 1906, a silver medal to the Cottage Gardens Co., for Carnation Mrs. C. W. Ward; a bronze medal to the Cottage Gardens Co., for Carnation Robert Craig.

Through the Cincinnati Florists' Society, March 10, 1906, a silver medal to R. Witterstaetter, for Carnation Afterglow; a bronze medal to the Minneapolis Floral Co., for Rose Miss Kate Moulton.

New plant names have been registered since my last report as follows:

August 26, 1905—Canna Uncle Sam, by the Conard & Jones Co., West Grove, Pa.

October 14, 1905—Rose Triumph, by Peter Henderson & Co., New York.

October 28, 1905—Canna Vesuvius, by Peter Henderson & Co., New York.

November 11, 1905—Cannas: Prince of India, Jupiter, Venus, by the Conard & Jones Co., West Grove, Pa.

Johnson, Emerald, Perfection, Daybreak, Sunbeam, Jumbo, Gov. Patterson, Chautauqua, Jr., by the Southern Floral Nursery Co., Fruitdale, Ala.

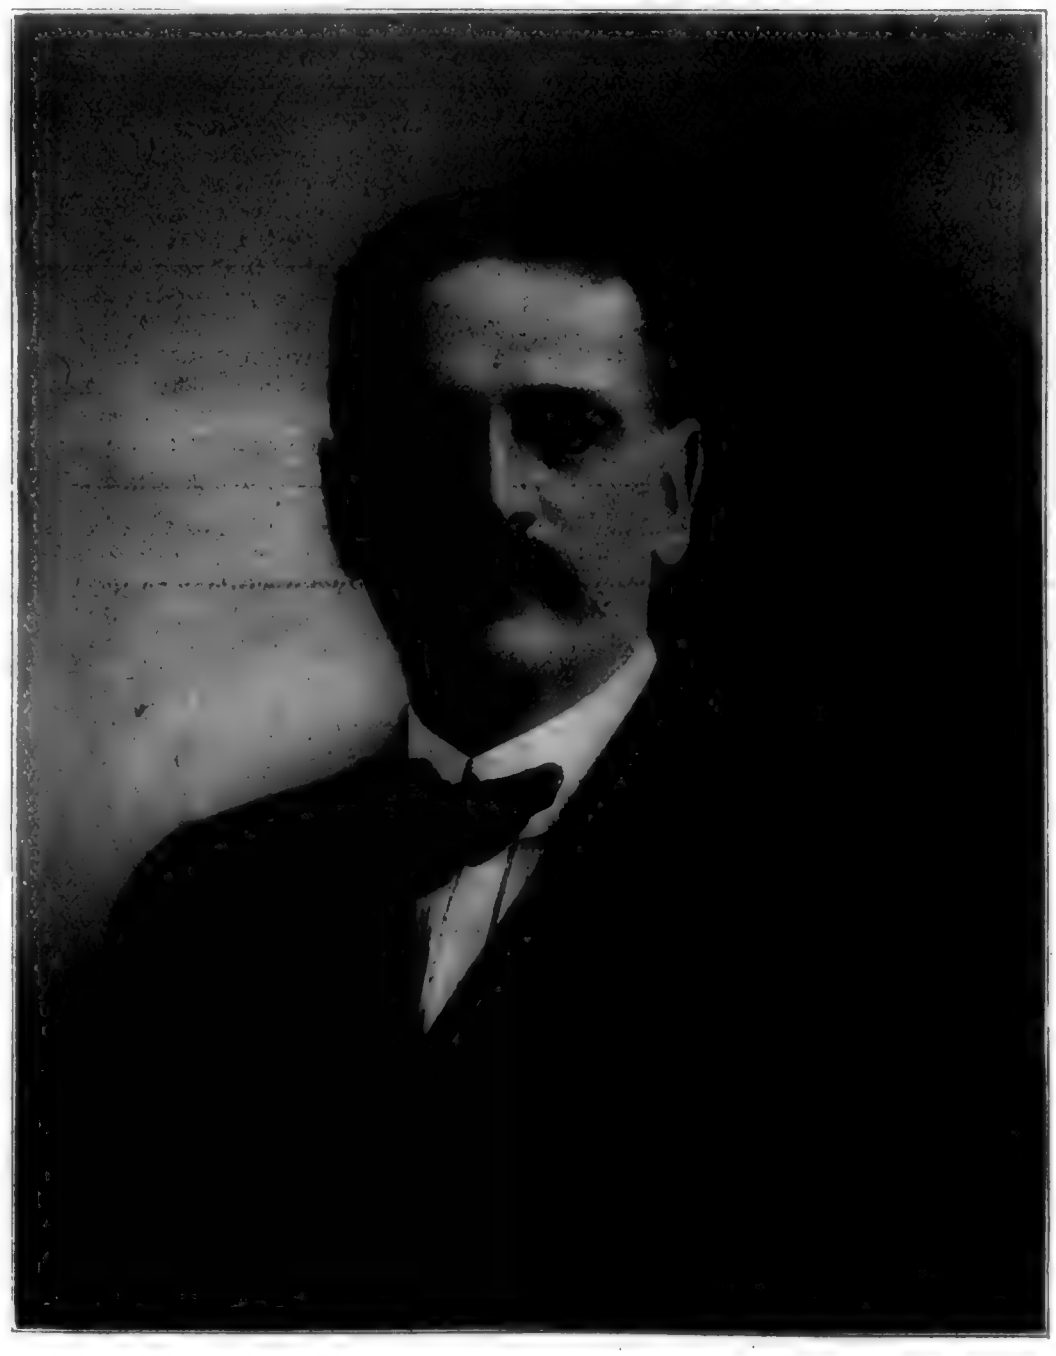
June 23, 1906—Nephrolepis Fruckii, and Berryii, by Henry C. Fruck, Grosse Pointe Farms, Mich.

July 14, 1906—Rose Aurora, by Paul Niehoff, Lehighton, Pa.

July 21, 1906—Hydrangea arborescens alba grandiflora, by the E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind.

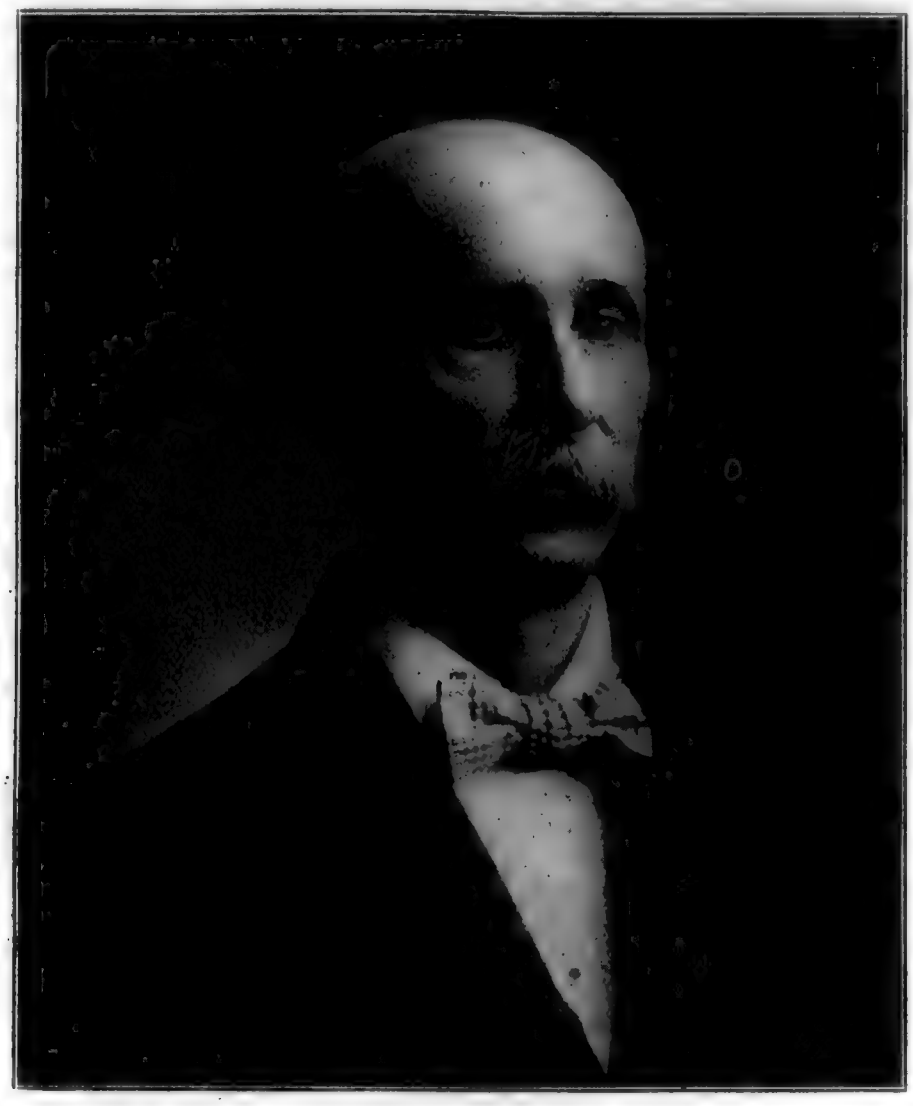
August 11, 1906—Lælio-Cattleya Lady Bernice, by Lager & Hurrell, Summit, N. J.

We have lost nine members by death since my last report:



C. G. Nanz, Louisville, Ky., August 17, 1905.

J. C. Rennison, Sioux City, Ia., February 24, 1906.



Aug. Rhotert, New York, N. Y., April 9, 1906.

C. H. Kunzman, Louisville, Ky., May 22, 1906.

George H. Rowden, Wallingford, Conn., May 17, 1906.

H. B. Beatty, Re-elected Treasurer Society of American Florists.

Charles Lutzenberger.

(Chairman Entertainment Committee, Dayton Florists' Club.

Hans Bartels, Milwaukee, Wis., April 30, 1906.

Abraham Hostetter, Manheim, Pa., April 10, 1906.

William Schray, St. Louis, Mo., May 15, 1906.

James Hartshorne, Joliet, Ill., August 6, 1906.

Other membership statistics are as follows:

Whole number of members, as per printed report for 1905, was 889, of whom 114 were life members. This included four life members and 173 annual members who had been added or reinstated during the year. The acquisitions are credited as follows: Alabama, Colorado, Iowa, Louisiana, New Hampshire, Rhode Island, one each; California, Missouri, North Carolina, Virginia, Ontario, Manitoba, two each; Indiana, Wisconsin, three each; Connecticut, Georgia, Kentucky, four each; New Jersey, eight; Illinois, ten; Maryland, Michigan, twelve each; District of Columbia, Ohio, thirteen each; Massachusetts, eighteen; New York, twenty-six; Pennsylvania, twenty-nine.

The number of lapses during the year, of members who had paid dues for the previous year but either resigned or failed to respond in 1905, was 111. These delinquencies are chargeable to the various states as follows: California, Kentucky, Maryland, Maine, Rhode Island, Texas, Ontario, one each; Colorado, Georgia, Kansas, Oklahoma, South Carolina, Tennessee, two each; Connecticut, Iowa, Minnesota, New Jersey, three each; Indiana, four; Michigan, five; Wisconsin, seven; Ohio, eight; Pennsylvania, nine; New York, twelve; Missouri, thirteen; Illinois, twenty-two. The list of names of delinquents in each state was sent from the secretary's office to its respective vice-president. A few of the vice-presidents reported; from the majority no response was received.

It is, I think, generally known among the members that I have decided not to be a candidate for re-election to this office, which with rare and generous confidence you have placed in my keeping for so many years. Since that day nineteen years ago in Chicago, when I had the privilege of thanking you for the honor you had conferred in unanimously selecting me as the successor in office of such men as E. G. Hill and Edwin Lonsdale, many changes have come about. Many loyal workers for the society, whose friendships were so dear to us, have been called away never to return. In meditating on the changed conditions and tremendous horticultural growth of this epoch in the society's history, I feel that while the ambitions and aims of the pioneers have in some respects fallen short of realization, yet as societies go, this society has done well. The balance in the treasury as reported at the Chicago convention nineteen years ago was $32.35. With this, our treasurer's report, which you are about to listen to, will compare favorably.

Our membership, however, is not what it should be. Every one identified with any department of horticulture is a sharer in the general benefits which the existence and the direct work of the society has made possible, and it is much to be regretted that thus far no effective means has been found of bringing the great mass of those engaged in those pursuits to do their share toward the support of the institution which has done so much for them, and might do so much more if it could only have the necessary backing.

In seeking to be relieved from the responsibilities of the secretaryship, I can assure you that my interest in the society's welfare will continue unabated, and I shall be ready at all times in the ranks to do whatever lies in my power for the grand old society whose burdens and whose joys have been so peculiarly my own for so many years.

At the completion of the report, B. Hammond moved the adoption of resolutions expressive of the society's appreciation of the secretary's long and faithful service, and voicing the regret at his decision to let a younger man take hold. The report of the treasurer was then read. A summary follows:

Treasurer's Report.

The financial statement for the calendar year 1905 is as follows:

Jan. 1—
Balance general fund	$2,923.07
Balance life membership fund	2,819.96

Cash on hand Dec. 31, 1905		$7,214.48

Other Reports.

The state vice-presidents' reports were ordered printed and the reading dispensed with.

The peony committee reported that it had nothing to report.

Alexander Wallace, for the committee to co-operate with the National Council of Horticulture, made a full report, placing in the society's records an account of the council's work reported from time to time in the Review, and well known to all the trade. The committee recommended that the council's publicity work be encouraged, and suggested an appropriation, the Seed Trade Association having given $200 for this purpose. Philip Breitmeyer said it is the duty of all florists to help this publicity work along, and J. C. Vaughan said credit for the idea of raising funds for this public purpose should be given Mr. Breitmeyer, with whom it originated, the results from a ten weeks' trial of the welfare work being out of all proportion to cost and far beyond expectations. J. G. Esler moved an appropriation of $200, which was carried. The president was authorized to appoint two delegates to the council.

A call was read in which the National Council of Horticulture asked co-operation in a national congress of horticulture at Jamestown, Va., August 19 to 24, 1907. It was referred to the executive committee.

A communication was read in which the Detroit Florists' Club asked the S. A. F. to undertake the task of finding a remedy for stem-rot in asters. On motion of E. A. Scribner, consideration of the matter was postponed until time should be less pressing. The same action was taken with a letter from H. Beaulieu regarding free seeds and a parcels post.

Judges Appointed.

President Kasting announced the appointment of the following judges:

On novelties in the trade exhibit: Wm. Scott, Buffalo; H. Papworth, New Orleans; Charles Vick, Rochester.

To award the Dayton Florists' Club's medals for landscape plans: J. F. Cowell, Buffalo; Edwin Lonsdale, Philadelphia; H. D. Seele, Elkhart, Ind.

To award the prizes in the essay competition: Chas. T. Guenther, Hamburg, N. Y.; F. C. Weber, St. Louis; E. F. Winterson, Chicago.

The Trade Exhibits.

Henry A. Dreer, Philadelphia, the usual large line of palms, ferns, araucarias, and other decorative plants in sizes from small to specimen; also the new variegated bougainvillea, bulbs, Peerless glazing points, etc.

Storrs & Harrison Co., Painesville, O., a sport of Piersoni fern, with finely divided pinnæ; also field-grown rose plants.

Metairie Ridge Nursery Co., New Orleans, palms and ferns in several sizes, and an especially fine line of Pandanus Veitchii.

Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago, palms, ferns and other plants in variety; also Bermuda and French bulbs.

Julius Roehrs Co., Rutherford, N. J., palms, crotons, pandanuses, ferns, etc., in variety and of all sizes.

Lemuel Ball, Wissinoming, Philadelphia, kentias in many sizes, arecas, livistonas, dracaenas, crotons, etc., including Ficus pandurata.

H. H. Barrows & Son, Whitman, Mass., fine plants of their latest novelty, Nephrolepis Whitmani, in several sizes.

Robert Craig Co., Philadelphia, a large display of palms in variety, also a fine table of crotons and plants of Ficus pandurata in several sizes.

George A. Kuhl, Pekin, Ill., Boston fern and its sports, solanums, palms, cyclamen, begonias, etc.

Hinode Florist Co., Whitestone, N. Y., a variety of Japanese plants and other specialties.

F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown, N. Y., Elegantissima fern in several sizes, also a new type of same with fronds alike on both sides; also table of French bulbs.

Davis Bros., Morrison, Ill., ferns, including Boston, Piersoni and its descendants in various sizes.

Joseph Heacock, Wyncote, Pa., kentias, specimen plants, also smaller sizes.

Lager & Hurrell, Summit, N. J., freshly imported and established orchids in variety.

Chris Winterich, Defiance, O., a large table of especially fine, clean cyclamen plants in several sizes.

A. T. Boddington, New York, Bermuda lily bulbs, French bulbs, small ferns, etc.

Lewis Ullrich, Tiffin, O., fine new scarlet geranium, Tiffin; also Asparagus plumosus.

J. A. Peterson, Cincinnati, Lorraine begonias, Pandanus Veitchii, Boston, Piersoni and Elegantissima ferns and Adiantum Farleyense, small plants and fine specimens.

Livingston Seed Co., Columbus, O., begonias, geraniums, asparagus, etc.

C. D. Ball, Holmesburg, Philadelphia, his usual line of well-grown kentias, arecas, etc., showing various sizes.

Edward Amerpohl, Janesville, Wis., the new Piersoni sport, Nephrolepis Amerpohlii, in several sizes.

Arthur Cowee, Berlin, N. Y., large table of cut spikes of gladioli, embracing all the well-known hybrid strains and a wide variety of forms and colors.

John Lewis Childs, Floral Park, N. Y., a big show of cut gladioli of many strains, conspicuous being America, light pink, grown by Frank Banning, Kinsman, O., but controlled by Mr. Childs; also Phoenix Roebelenii in several sizes.

L. B. Brague, Hinsdale, Mass., hardy cut ferns, etc.

H. J. Smith, Hinsdale, Mass., hardy cut ferns, etc.

M. Rice & Co., Philadelphia, the usual fine line of florists' supplies, including a few samples of staple articles, but largely made up of novelties, among which was a lace bouquet holder which revives the fashion of thirty years ago and takes splendidly with the best trade; also adjustable novelty baskets for all sorts of decorations, broadstrand Porto Rican mats, two-toned crepe paper, bouquet boxes like hat boxes, plaited birch-bark ware, bark sleighs, bamboo hampers in nests, ribbon novelties, etc. Mr. Eschner sold the entire exhibit as it stood within a few hours after putting it on display.

Reed & Keller, New York, a large line of special wire designs, a fine line of glass vases, a patented holder for cycas leaves, a line of new tub baskets and a general line of staple baskets, etc.

H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, probably the finest line this house has ever shown, a conspicuous feature of the display being the new toneware in a wide range of size, shape and coloring, much of it tied with ribbons to match; also hand painted hampers, electroliers in many shapes, a great variety of wreaths, baskets, bells, screens, pot covers and many cases of samples of new and staple supplies. The arrangement of the stock was excellent.

Wertheimer Bros., New York, Conqueror brand ribbons, foliage American Beauty ribbons, lace chiffons, new ideas in violet ties, etc.

S. S. Pennock, Philadelphia, a large line of ribbons, including a new two-toned ribbon for mums, on the foliage type, also Dresden ribbon for violets, all tastefully arranged.

Schloss Bros., New York, a fine showing of ribbons, including a line of satin taffeta ribbons in flower shades, silk net scarfs for various uses, new violet ties, etc.

J. Stern & Co., Philadelphia, baskets, magnolia and artificial wreaths, wheat sheaves, artificial Christmas trees, etc. Two cases of the Stern exhibit were lost in transit, but a good show was made.

L. Baumann & Co., Chicago, a large line of staple supplies, also new birch-bark wreaths, preserved green and bronze magnolia leaves in hampers, metal designs, baskets, chiffon scarfs, etc.

C. S. Ford, Philadelphia, birch-bark ware, Christmas bells, etc.

A. Herrmann, New York, baskets and miscellaneous supplies.

Dayton Paper Novelty Co., Dayton, a display of retailers' paper flower boxes.

Foley Mfg. Co., Chicago, greenhouse materials, with advertising fans for the perspiring, who were numerous.

D. U. Augspurger & Sons, Peoria, Ill., small sizes in miscellaneous plants.

H. R. Carlton, Willoughby, O., the Gov. Herrick violet in pots.

Frank Huntsman, Cincinnati, fine plants of aspidistra.

Paul Blome & Co., Chicago, plant food.

Wm. Sim, Cliftondale, Mass., table of a new forcing tomato, Comet, which made a splendid impression on the gardeners.

H. Thaden, Atlanta, Ga., a brace for strengthening roofs of greenhouses.

John Scott, Flatbush, L. I., a large display of Nephrolepis Scottii, pandanuses and crotons.

D. B. Long, Buffalo, florists' printed matter.

Carl Hagenburger, Mentor, O., poinsettias, small ferns, rubbers, cyclamen and miscellaneous plants.

James Vick's Sons, Rochester, N. Y., cut blooms of many varieties of aster.

W. E. Gravett, Lancaster, O., a vase of a fine white aster.

Conard & Jones Co., West Grove, Pa., cut blooms of new cannas.

E. H. Cushman, Sylvania, O., a large table of cut spikes of gladioli, including many strains and named varieties.

Nathan Smith & Son, Adrian, Mich., a table of phloxes.

C. W. Skinner, Troy, O., a display of the parts of his irrigating apparatus.

On a wall the work of the landscape architects was displayed, covering several hundred square feet. It was a new idea, and an excellent one, but many of the exhibits were "skied"—placed too high to be studied. Those who were represented by plans and sketches, or by photographs of finished work, were: Olmsted Bros., Brookline, Mass.; Gordon H. Taylor, New York; J. E. Freudenberger and C. E. Gerber, Dayton; the National Cash Register Co., Carl Anderson, Paul Schiebe and others.

A couple of dozen other firms were represented by signs on the railing of the second floor, or by banners suspended from the roof.

Outdoor Trade Display.

The outdoor trade display was not extensive, but, supplemented by the plantings of the cash register concern and by surplus stock contributed by the Dayton florists, it added much to the appearance of the grounds, and is a start in a direction in which there is prospect of interesting development. One of the most attractive beds was Canna West Virginia, shown by Gus Obermeyer, Parkersburg, W. Va. H. A. Dreer, Philadelphia, had a display of considerable size, including cannas, petunias, Inimitable ageratum, and a fine pennisetum labeled Macrophyllum atrosanguineum. Nathan Smith & Son, Adrian, Mich., had several varieties of cannas, including their Express and a tall-growing one named Musafolia. They also showed several beds of geraniums and some good salvias. Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago, had some good beds of cannas, King Humbert showing particularly well; also a bed of Baby Rambler rose. Kramer Bros., Dayton, had lawn vases planted with a variety of stock. A line of C. W. Skinner's irrigating system was of interest to the growers, many of whom are putting in facilities for watering stock in the fields.

A large display of cannas from the Southern Floral Nursery Co., Fruitdale, Ala., planted in the Dayton parks, was inspected by many.

American Carnation Society.

After the Wednesday evening adjournment there was a meeting of the American Carnation Society at the Algonquin hotel. President John H. Dunlop presided. Secretary Herr outlined the special needs of the society and made a report on its recent activities. Treasurer F. E. Dorner gave a brief statement of the finances. The principal discussion was as to the approaching Toronto meeting. The premium list was put into shape and shortly will be issued. Subjects for papers were discussed and a program for the convention outlined.

Wednesday Morning.

It still was hot when the hour for opening arrived, but there was an excellent attendance, one of the results of meeting in a town not filled with distractions. There was a keen interest in the work in hand.

F. R. Pierson sent a report on the status of the work of the joint committee of the florists, nurserymen and seedsmen on behalf of reform of postal rates and railroad abuses. Unanimous consent was given J. L. Cowles, secretary of the Postal Progress League, to address the convention. He made a red-hot speech on the shortcomings of the present service, comparing the United States parcels provisions with those of other countries, explaining what is asked in the bill presented to the last Congress. B. Hammond spoke on the same lines and Wm. Scott offered a resolution endorsing the bill in Congress providing for the consolidation of the third and fourth classes of postal matter at the lower rate.

The selection of the place of meeting for 1907 being in order, invitations were read from several commercial and publicity bodies, after which Wm. Scott asked consent for Mayor O. W. Cutler to address the society on behalf of Niagara Falls. He offered a cordial invitation which was seconded by P. J. Foley of Chicago. Robert Craig extended the invitation of the Florists' Club of Philadelphia, to which there were several seconds. H. C. Irish asked consideration for the invitation to Norfolk, Va. President Kasting appointed P. J. Foley, Leo Niessen and H. Papworth as tellers, who received the ballots and announced the result as follows:

Philadelphia, 131.

Niagara Falls, 101.

Nominations of officers being in order, Col. W. W. Castle, of Boston, a quite recent addition to the society's list of silver-tongued orators, named W. J. Stewart for president; E. G. Gillett seconded. There was no other nomination.

For vice-president, E. G. Hill nominated Leo Niessen and Mr. Gude nominated John Westcott, who in turn nominated Samuel Sellers Pennock.

For secretary, Wm. Scott nominated H. M. Altick, of Dayton. W. F. Gude nominated P. J. Hauswirth, of Chicago. There were several seconds.

For treasurer there was only one nomination, H. B. Beatty, of Pittsburg, named by W. W. Coles.

On motion of Wm. Scott, a telegram of sympathy was sent P. O'Mara, whose presence was prevented by the death of his brother.

It was stated that the essays submitted for the Kasting prizes had been lost in the mails, so the floor was given to E. V. Hallock for the report of the committee on school gardening, which proved highly interesting. Wm. Scott, F. E. Palmer, W. F. Gude, Benj. Hammond and others narrated local conditions and work in their home towns, and E. G. Hill spoke urgently of the possibilities of utilizing the gardening spirit, now awakened throughout the land, to the advancement of our trade interests. The committee—Hallock, Wallace and Hammond—was continued and Mr. Palmer and Prof. Cowell added to it.

The constitution and by-laws were amended to define a course of procedure in case, as occurred at Washington last year, no candidate had the required majority of all votes cast on the first ballot.

The adjournment for lunch was not until 2 p. m., so active had been the discussion. It was just in time to escape interruption by the daily rain.

During this session President Kasting proved himself to be one of the best presiding officers the society has ever had. There were many interruptions and several times recourse was had to parliamentary law, but throughout the president was in full control and his clear-cut decisions did much to expedite business. The sentiment was that the president was distinctly all right.

Wednesday Evening Session.

The presentation of the excellent paper by F. E. Palmer on The Ideal Gardener, was followed by the discussion of the president's address, with Robert Craig in the chair. Two hours were devoted to the recommendation as to a committee on tariff. Hallock, Hammond, Hill, Castle, Lenker, Scott, Elliott, Vincent and many others denounced the present duties affecting our trade, especially the one on glass. The matter was referred to the committee on mutual interests with the seedsmen and nurserymen with instructions to seek to secure a reduction on window glass.

The executive committee was instructed to put in operation the recommendation with regard to the conduct of the secretary's office. It was recommended to the executive committee that $200 be placed at the disposal of the secretary for traveling expenses in proselyting for new members, with instructions to report next year as to the results.

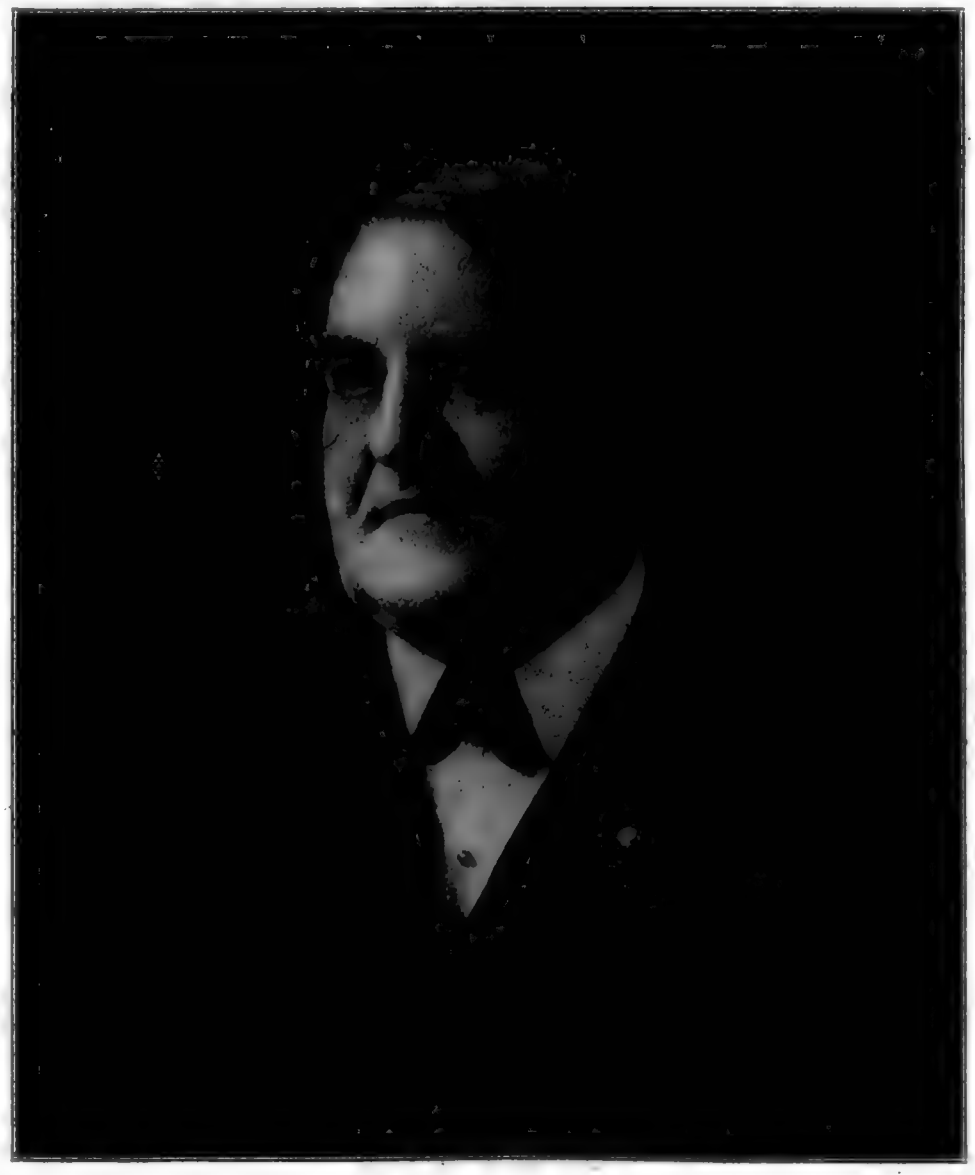
The President's Reception.

The reception, which was to have been held at Far Hills, the private estate of John H. Patterson, was, on account of the rain, held in Welfare hall, at the factory of the National Cash Register Co. The great hall was filled with tables, at which all were comfortably seated at 6 p. m., and an excellent lunch was served to about a thousand members and their friends, while a fine selection of popular music was rendered by a band composed of employees of the company. A cable message was sent to Mr. Patterson, who is in Europe, thanking him for his great entertainment.

After all had been fed President and Mrs. Kasting, Secretary Stewart, Treasurer and Mrs. Beatty, Vice-President and Mrs. Altick and Mr. and Mrs. Hauswirth occupied the stage and received those present, giving each a cordial handshake. The hall was then darkened and the company was treated to a magnificent lot of stereopticon views, illustrating the landscape gardening of the world, as well as the wonderful work that has been done in beautifying the humble homes of hundreds of employees of the N. C. R. Co. This included some remarkable dissolving views in which faces gradually appeared in flowers and one kind of flower would fade into another. All these views showed flowers and foliage in their natural colors. The program concluded with an amusing lot of moving pictures. It was a most enjoyable evening and worth a long journey to participate in.

The Judges' Report.

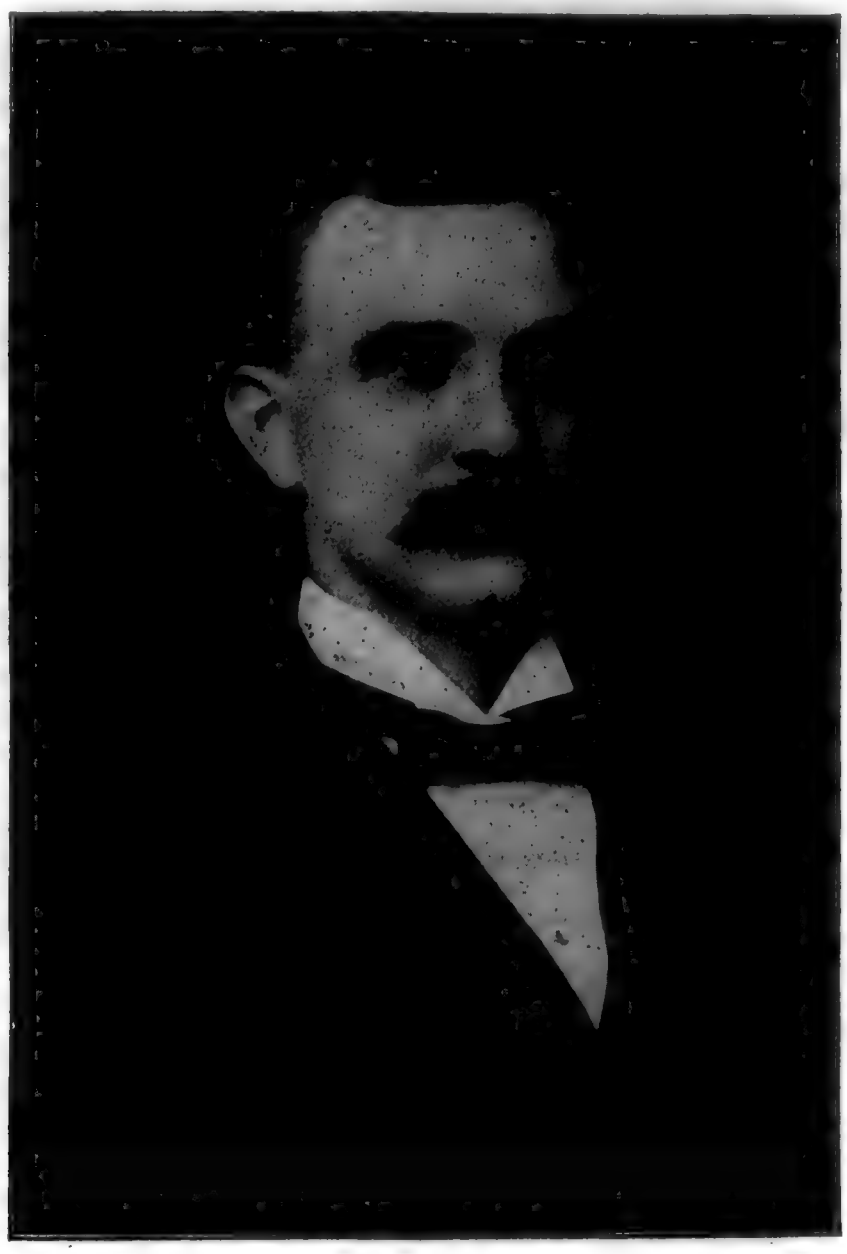
The judges made a partial report Wednesday evening. Certificates of merit were awarded as follows:



To King Construction Co., for ventilator attachment and for trussed construction; Lord & Burnham Co., for dust-proof ventilator gear; Herendeen Mfg. Co., for improved Furman boiler; J. H. Broxey, for carnation support; Edward Amerpohl, for Nephrolepis Amerpohlii, described as most distinct and best novelty in existence; Vaughan's Seed Store, for Gladiolus Francis King; Kroeschell Bros. Co., for shaking grate; Arthur Cowee, for many new gladioli; W. F. Kasting, for cement bench; Henry A. Dreer, for Bougainvillea W. K. Harris; Robert Craig Co., for Ficus pandurata; Morehead Mfg. Co., for steam trap.

The committee highly commended the following:

G. C. Meyers, for hose mender; Reed & Keller, for cycas holder, special wire designs and new baskets; Dayton Paper Novelty Co., for violet boxes; Lord & Burnham Co., for trussed construction; H. Thaden, for equalizing roof support; Schloss Bros., for violet tiers and ribbon novelties.



Honorable mention was given as follows:

James Vick's Sons, for asters of Daybreak shade; Lord & Burnham Co., for improved boiler; Heim Carnation Support Co., for carnation support; Lewis Ullrich, for Geranium Tiffin; Storrs &

H. H. Ritter.

(Chairman of the Finance Committee, Dayton Florists' Club.)

H. M. Altick.
(Chairman Committee on Sports.)

Harrison Co., for Nephrolepis Leedsii; Wm. Sim, for Comet tomato; Livingston Seed Co., for improved Begonia semperflorens.

Mention was also made of Carl Hagenburger's fern; H. R. Carlton's violet, Gov. Herrick; and Frank Huntsman's aspidistras. It was pointed out that some of these awards were for exhibits which had received recognition at previous conventions, and these will be omitted from the official record.

The judges on landscape designs reported that the terms of the competition are too loosely defined to permit of comparative awards; but recommend that the practice be continued at subsequent conventions and stated that on the showing made separate entries entitled Messrs. Schiebe and Taylor to first awards, Schiebe and Freudenberger to second awards, and Olmsted Bros. and Freudenberger to third awards.

On Thursday the judges made the following additions to the exhibits highly commended: Wertheimer Bros., American Beauty ribbons, violet ties and lace chiffon; S. S. Pennock, pearl-headed pins and autumn foliage ribbons; E. A. Beaven, fadeless sheet moss; Dayton Supply Co., sprayers; Stern & Co., natural prepared Christmas trees, prepared magnolia and adiantum foliage; M. Rice & Co., novelty adjustable baskets and novel birch-bark ware; H. Bayersdorfer & Co., imported toneware.

The Election.

Thursday's interest centered in the election, although a large audience, considering the intense heat, listened to the splendid papers by Irving Bertermann and William F. Gude, discussing the retailing of cut flowers. These were presented while J. G. Esler, J. F. Sullivan, Fred Meinhardt and E. G. Gillett were counting the ballots, as follows: For president, W. J. Stewart, 245; J. A. Valentine, 1. For vice-president, S. S. Pennock, 70; Leo Niessen, 42; John Westcott, 129. For secretary, P. J. Hauswirth, 181; H. M. Altick, 62. For treasurer, H. B. Beatty, 246.

A communication from E. Albertson asking membership accessions for the American Association of Nurserymen was referred to the executive committee. President Kasting announced the serious illness of J. V. Laver, of Erie, Pa., at a hotel. The question box brought up the point as to whether or not there is a distinction recognized in exhibition schedules by the terms stove plant and greenhouse plant. A brisk exchange of opinion ensued, with the consensus that the matter is one for careful local definition in premium lists. A question as to the policy of recognizing long lists of new cannas of no special merit brought out a general discussion of the methods of registration of plant names by the society and a characterization of their inadequacy. A motion prevailed instructing the appointment of a canna committee to confer with the executive board and make recommendations for a change in by-laws providing for registration.

A discussion of a change of date of meeting was put over to the evening session, when the National Flower Show was a special order. On motion of F. H. Traendly, W. F. Kasting was named as one of the delegates to the National Council of Horticulture. The president named Robert Craig as the other delegate. Walter S. Powell, of Boston, presented a paper descriptive of the bureau of credit of the Wholesale Seedsmen's League and outlining the terms on which the S. A. F. can be admitted to participation in the benefits. Referred to the executive committee for action.

Detroit's call for help on aster stemrot was referred to the society's pathologist and the department of agriculture.

Thursday afternoon was given over to the exhibitors, the ladies being taken to the theater. The illumination at Far Hills followed the evening session. Friday is to be Dayton day, with trips to the cash register works and the Soldiers' Home.

The Bowling.

The bowling contests were held on alleys far outside the city. The team tournament was held at Fairview park, two miles north of town, and the individual contest was out toward the Soldiers' Home and slimly attended. Seven teams were entered, but few rooters went out to the alleys, and the contest was the quietest in the history of our convention pastimes. Following are the scores:

HAIL ASSOCIATION.

The Florists' Hail Association held its annual meeting at Dayton, O., on Wednesday, August 22. The report of Secretary John G. Esler showed a total insurance in force equal to protection for 25,056,546 square feet of glass. The treasurer's report showed receipts for the year, $18,744.50; expenses, $2,559.65; sixty-eight losses paid, $4,612.51; reserve fund, $16,109.92; emergency fund, $12,440.57. The association has now paid 1,019 losses, amounting to $101,000.

The following directors were elected: Elmer D. Smith, Jos. Heacock, F. E. Dorner. The directors elected officers, as follows: President, E. G. Hill; vice-president, H. H. Ritter; secretary, John G. Esler; treasurer, A. M. Herr. The investment of the reserve fund was left to the officers, as a finance committee. A resolution was adopted imposing a ten per cent advance on risks on which three losses have been paid in five years. If Secretary Esler lives to June 1 he will have served the society for twenty years.

DECATUR, ILL.—The city park commissioners have let the contract for a custodian's residence and new greenhouse, to be built at Fairmount park at a cost of $2,000.

NEW ORLEANS, LA.—The Metairie Ridge Nursery Co. will by the middle of September open a retail store on one of the most prominent streets in the heart of the city. The company is not sparing effort to make this the most up-to-date establishment in the city.

RETAILING CUT FLOWERS.

BY W. F. GUDE, WASHINGTON, D. C.

[Read before the Society of American Florists, at Dayton, O., August 22, 1906.]

Being requested to read a paper and lead a discussion on "Recent Improvements in Retailers' Methods of Offering Flowers for Sale," I do so reluctantly. Personally, I should much prefer the discussion to reading a paper. However, I know no better way to open this subject than to give you my own personal experience of the last twenty years in the retail florist's business at the national capital, where we think we have some up-to-date flower stores.

An Age of Progress.

There is probably no business or profession that has seen a greater change in the last decade than the retail florist's, or has made greater strides. I am sure that no class of men have worked harder or longer hours than the florists.

Right here I want to say we too often hear the cry, "Things are not as they used to be." This expression is too commonly used by a great many people engaged in the retail florist's business. "Things are not as they used to be," is not true in the sense it is given, while I do not doubt it is absolutely a fact in a great many cases, among the men who make that remark, because they have the same old fogy methods and manner of doing business used years ago. The wide-awake florist, with the proper push, has gone ahead and adopted new and modern methods, with the inevitable result that he makes more money with less work. The old-timer has been left with his old-fashioned ideas, little or no progress, long hours and small pay, while the progressive man has reason to thank the powers that be that things are not as they used to be.

Old Methods versus New.

Sending flowers in old shoe boxes and hat boxes, delivering funeral designs in a farm wagon, taking a man in his greenhouse togs to a fashionable home to carry plants and decorate, tying bunches with narrow, cheap ribbon, cut swallow-tailed, sending bridal bouquets wrapped in paper, telling a patron the flowers he wants are out-of-date because they are not in stock—these methods have passed away.

I have been in flower shops when a customer would leave an order for a wedding, birthday, or funeral, and explicitly state the time he wanted the flowers delivered, and in many cases, to my personal knowledge, the flowers were sent after the occasion was over, so that the sentimental effect was entirely lost, the occasion to use the flowers forever gone. The result invariably is that the next time the customer in question wants to buy flowers he tries some place where he has reason to expect that his purchase will be delivered when and where he wants it, and in up-to-date condition.

Again, the old-fashioned way of delivering flowers, wrapped in any old piece of paper and delivered by some ragged, dirty messenger, is not conducive to bringing the retail florist's business up to the plane of the modern, up-to-date requirements which it so justly deserves. The method of tying flowers on toothpicks with wires without any foliage, which was so popular years ago, has been almost entirely eliminated, and a more natural system is now demanded by the average buying community. So much for the old methods.

The present up-to-date method followed by us is to have the flowers received fresh every morning, then properly assorted and arranged in large storage rooms, where mirrors on all sides show them off to the best advantage.

One of the most important items is booking orders. In a great many establishments the old way of taking orders for any kind of flowers for commencements and debutantes' receptions, etc., knowing it is a question wnether they can be secured, then substituting another kind at the last minute, is an expensive one. What a great disappointment to a mother, thinking she has a pleasant surprise for her daughter at the graduating exercises, or some other function, ordering a bunch of pink roses, and then receiving red carnations instead! Her patronage is lost; she has no more confidence in that establishment.

Employees.

We have an up-to-date corps of clerks and employees who are able, capable and willing to wait on customers intelligently, and do not try to sell them a pink rose for a white one, or calla lilies for lilies of the valley. They do not work any more like they used to. They used to get up at 5 o'clock in the morning and work until 10 or 11 o'clock at night for a very small compensation. It is fortunate that things are not as they used to be in this case. Employees in a retail florist's store should come in for full consideration and just treatment, because it is impossible for any one man to wait on every customer that comes to inquire about flowers. There are naturally in the retail florist's trade, as in all other kinds of business, people with all sorts of ideas, in many cases hard to please. All of these should be studied and their peculiar fancies catered to, as much as possible, if they are willing to pay the price, because a satisfied customer is the best possible advertisement that any one can have. Right here, the employee who goes to extra trouble to cater to the whims of this particular class of customers, and does not run or hide when he or she comes in, is entitled to a great deal of consideration which he often does not receive. I have found invariably that by studying the clerks' interests, they are in much better position to study the employer's interests, for it is only too true that florists work longer hours for less money than almost any other class of working men, requiring an equal amount of intelligence. The clerks and employees in a retail florist's store can do much toward increasing or decreasing the sales and profits by strict attention or inattention to details in the business. It has always been our aim to keep the employees satisfied, and where we succeed in doing that, they invariably succeed in satisfying us.

Putting Up Orders.

This, in our estimation, is one of the most important items connected with the retail florist's business. As time cuts quite a figure in this part of the business, if the flowers are put up too early they will be apt to wither, and if too late they cannot be delivered in time; hence, this branch of the business requires constant care and exercise of judgment, in order that the flowers may reach the parties interested in the best possible condition. Another very important item is to send the customers exactly the quality and quantity promised for a given amount of money, and not try to slight them with the thought or idea that they will never know the difference. This might do once in a while, but one is bound to be caught in the act some time, and with a very ugly reflection on the integrity of the house. Here it may be well to state that the politeness and intelligence of the driver or messenger who may happen to deliver the flowers will either reflect credit or discredit upon the establishment.

Window Display.

The old methods of trying to show the public how many plants a florist could put in a window was buried with the paper collar for bouquets. The window bottom of sand, gravel and zinc has given place to tile and mirror effects. A florist's window is the same now as that of the other up-to-date merchant who displays his finest goods to tempt the public to buy. A customer can form a pretty good idea of the florist's ability to create and execute artistic effects by his window display. For instance, when we have a surplus of any particular kind of flower, a window tastefully arranged with vases, baskets, etc., of this same flower has time and again been the means of cleaning up the entire surplus at a good profit.

A window display on January 29, President McKinley's birthday, with a portrait of him, a few American flags and a nice assortment of carnations tastefully arranged, will demonstrate what a window decoration can do. I should advise you to try it January 29 next.

Use of Accessories.

The use of ribbons in the retail florist's business has grown faster than the business itself, because with the present methods ribbons can be used to great advantage on nearly all arrangements of flowers, and when properly used are a great acquisition to any up-to-date floral arrangement.

In our city in particular there is a large demand for bunches of flowers at all seasons of the year, to be sent to the various offices or departments of the local, municipal and United States governments. In these cases it is often necessary to have a suitable vase or jardiniere to offer, to go with the bunch of flowers, that they may be delivered in good presentable condition, and their lasting qualities preserved by the stems being kept in water while in the office of the recipient.

In conclusion, to manage and run an up-to-date flower store:

First, it is necessary to be conservative in buying. When I say buying, I mean not only cut flower stock, but plants, ribbons, jardinieres, florists' supplies of all kinds, and especially boxes and paper to suit all sizes of bunches and qualities of flowers. This is very important.

Second; having the necessary receptacles and supplies to go with the flowers, be sure to have good, fresh stock at all times to show your customers, and give them what you claim to sell.

Third; after the first two points are looked after, be sure to deliver the flowers as promised, on time, when promised, and in good condition.

IDEAL PRIVATE GARDENERS.

BY F. E. PALMER, OF BROOKLINE, MASS.

[Read before the Society of American Florists, in convention at Dayton, O., August 23 (today), 1906.]

The title of this essay, "The Ideal Private Gardener and His Work," was selected by the executive committee of the Society of American Florists and assigned to the Boston Gardeners' and Florists' Club as a fitting subject for its contribution to the literature of this convention. This was perfectly natural, for when questions of a philosophical nature are to be discussed, where else would one turn but to the "Athens of America," the erudite city of the old Bay State? It may be taken for granted, also, that the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston, with its young and virile membership of 325 (this includes ladies), is perfectly able to handle any question that may be presented to it; but when it comes to the individual to whom this essay is assigned, every thoughtful person will agree that, while being greatly honored, he is nevertheless confronted with a duty both difficult and onerous.

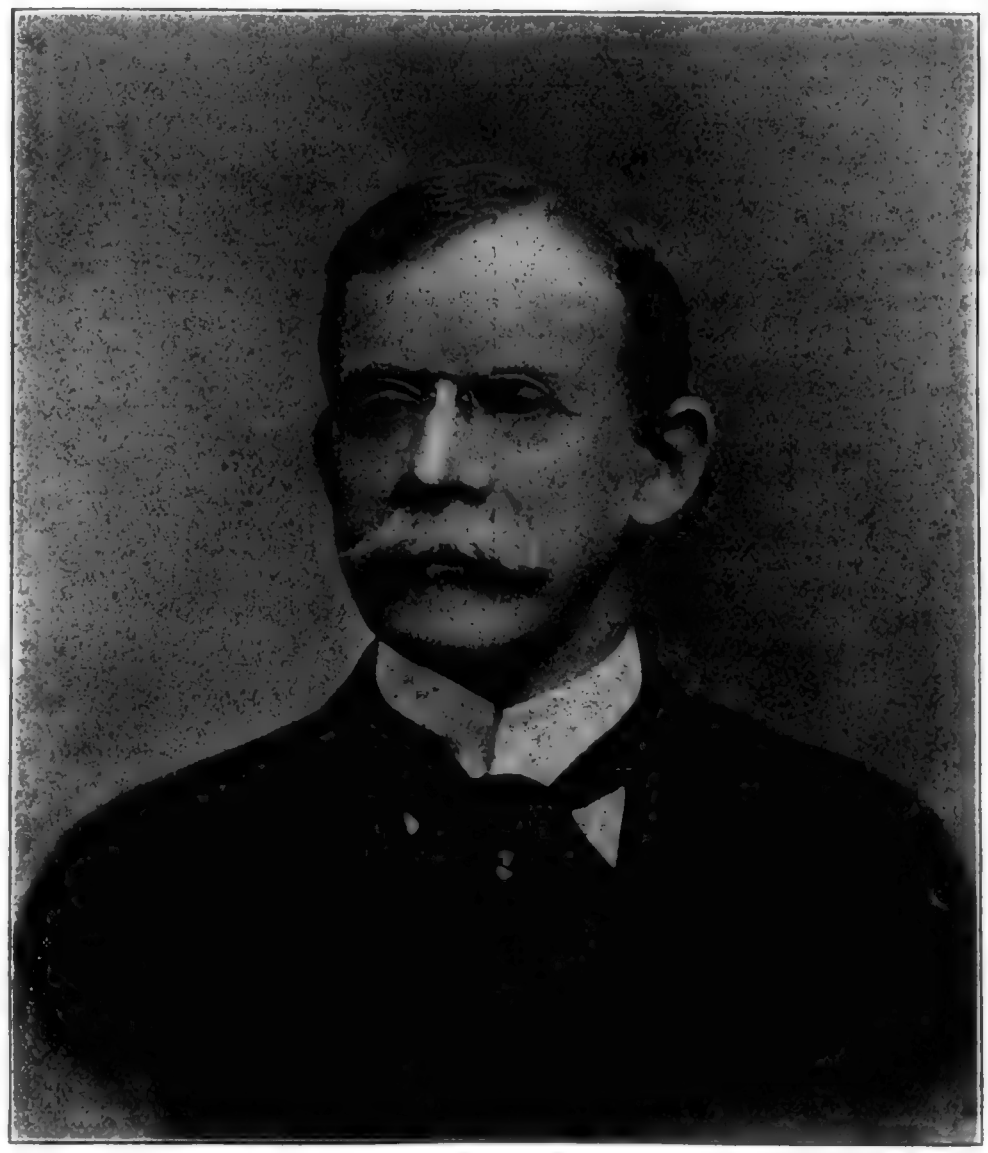
In the first place, an ideal which would be common to a number of men is difficult of conception—in fact, impossible. Ideals are essentially individual, and are more characteristic of the man, even, than his physical features. They change with him from day to day, as he grows in wisdom, always tantalizingly ahead like the desert mirage, yet always incentive to better work and nobler aims. With these thoughts in one's mind it is hard to get down to earth, where even the ideal gardener belongs.

Old-time Gardeners.

Before attempting to draw the picture of a present day ideal private gardener, it will be interesting and perhaps helpful to cast a retrospective glance at types of other days and their environment. They are not so far removed as to be unfamiliar to most of us—indeed, many honored examples are with us yet; and as the procession of bygone forms and faces is conjured up, we bow our heads in reverence. Many of them were splendid exponents of the true gardening spirit, were faithful servants, staunch friends of the young gardeners who were committed to their charge, though sometimes severe withal. They bring down to modern times, perhaps more than any other retainer, the spirit of those feudal days, in which the extensive private garden had its birth and early nourishment.

Chances for Head Gardenerships.

Under old-world conditions to this day the number of private gardens of any size is a fixed quantity; new creations are few and far between, and are largely offset by the decay and abandonment of old establishments; so, consequently, the market for head gardeners has always been a dull one. A satisfactory and satisfied incumbent held his position often for life. Not much was required of him in the way of technical or scientific knowledge—in fact, too much of that sort of thing would have spoiled him. He was essentially a retainer, although by common consent ranking considerably above the domestics, conservative to a degree, which is always characteristic of those who lack ambition because of the absence of opportunity, that baneful blight of the old world, supremely happy if a modest pension awaited him, or fortunate if able to end his days as the proprietor of a small grocery or public house.



One easily can realize that under the above conditions there must have been constantly in existence a small army of rejected ones among the body of journeymen gardeners. Head positions not always being awarded with regard to merit, the under-gardeners had little incentive to acquire an education above the common, the chances being that they would end their days in the ranks with the laborer. These things may explain the anomalous condition that has undoubtedly existed up to the present time and still exists, viz., that of a large number of intelligent men, engaged in a pursuit so near to nature, so lofty as to transcend almost all others, and, if including agriculture, which it naturally does, so important in the world of economics as to comprehend all the necessary things of life within its scope, and yet who are so poorly equipped with technical and scientific education as to render them, as a class, marked in this respect.

It finds its most harmful expression in a conservatism which is positively suicidal in this new day and country. Failing to recognize the opportunity that is now before them of lifting themselves and their craft from the realm of drudgery and servitude into that of science and art, where it properly belongs, cherishing the ideal of "My lord" and "My lady," who never interfered, the long hours of labor with small pay, the willing helpers who kept going fourteen hours per day if ordered to do so, no horse power—horses had to go to rest early—no hose, no anything, in fact, that savored of innovation and that required new study: those were indeed good old days.

Modern Conditions.

Let us turn, however, to the conditions which confront us in this marvelous age and country. The ordinary slow processes of evolution and national growth have been entirely ignored. Development along economic, social and art lines has been so rapid as to defy the average observer and student to trace it. The nation, from a condition of extreme crudity and devouring energy which might aptly be compared to the caterpillar stage, has suddenly emerged into a state of refinement and keen appreciation of beauty and art that is as startling and interesting to contemplate as the bursting forth of the perfect butterfly. Let us hope that this simile may not obtain in its ephemeral sense, however.

During this period of strenuous commercial activity the earth has been made to yield her treasures most bountifully. Nothing in the world's history compares with the development of the natural resources of this country during the last fifty years. The struggle has been terrific, and the confusion even as that of the mighty rapids and whirlpool of Niagara. Out of this maelstrom and into the quiet waters of work well done, victory achieved and fortunes made, have drifted thousands of men who are now seeking rest, recreation and happiness, the end to which all previous effort has been but the means. Back to nature is the word, and to the soil which gave them their material wealth, they again look for those more subtle elements that satisfy the soul. These are the men who have built themselves gardens and who are looking for partners, rather than for hired help, to enable them to accomplish this end. It is perfectly fitting and proper to consider the ideal gardener in the former relationship rather than the latter, and no intelligent proprietor will demur to the spirit of such association.

The Man and His Needed Traits.

What kind of a personality will he have who will fill the measure of this desire for happiness, and at the same time seize the opportunity to exalt the status of his beloved profession and raise himself to the high social, economic and educational plane to which he naturally and properly belongs? Let us consider the last part of this theme first, and discover what duties will be required of him, or, in other words, what is his work, and afterwards try to fit the man to it.

The common idea among young gardeners who are ready and feel qualified to take charge of important places is that the measure of these duties should be included within the following limits: To be able to grow the regular run of greenhouse stock successfully, including orchids, so that when exhibition times come around they may gather in some prizes and nail the cards up in the potting-shed, to the great glory of the house, and to their own emolument. Incidentally, they expect to supply the house with flowers in limited quantities of their own selection, and to grow fruit under glass. They consider the kitchen garden to be part of their sphere, although as a rule they have had very little experience in that department; also the pleasure grounds, with which they have had still less. At first sight it does seem that the list includes about all that should be required of the average gardener, and if he were a master in every branch mentioned he would certainly be pretty well equipped as a workman.

A Wide Range of Duties.

The duties of the ideal gardener, however, cover a much wider range. He has formed a partnership with the proprietor, the object of which is to produce a certain indefinable, intangible thing called happiness; primarily, the happiness of the latter and also that of his own, as a natural corollary. With this in view, he will seek to discover the bent of his employer and, having found it, to guide it into practical channels. His common sense will often come into conflict with whimsical desires, but with plenty of tact and a desire to serve, this will not be a serious source of trouble. He will be required to plan and lay out an entirely new place, erect greenhouses, put in water supply, survey and grade land, build drives, handle large bodies of men intelligently, study up-to-date methods and appliances, such as labor-saving machinery, insecticides and fertilizers; scoffing at nothing because of its strangeness, but testing desirable things intelligently with a view to conducting the place with economy and facility. One of his most delicate duties will be to preserve peace and harmony among his fellow employees, listening to the complaints of his subordinates with a judicial and kindly ear, and pleading their cause with their employer. To the younger gardeners under his charge he owes a peculiar and sacred duty. Having trodden the path before them, he is in a position to know their desires and ambitions, and should use every effort for their upbuilding into ideal men and gardeners. Short hours of labor, liberal wages, libraries, opportunities to attend lectures and exhibitions, encouragement to form or join clubs, and above all, a kindly personal interest in their welfare, easily lie within his power to promote.

His Personality.

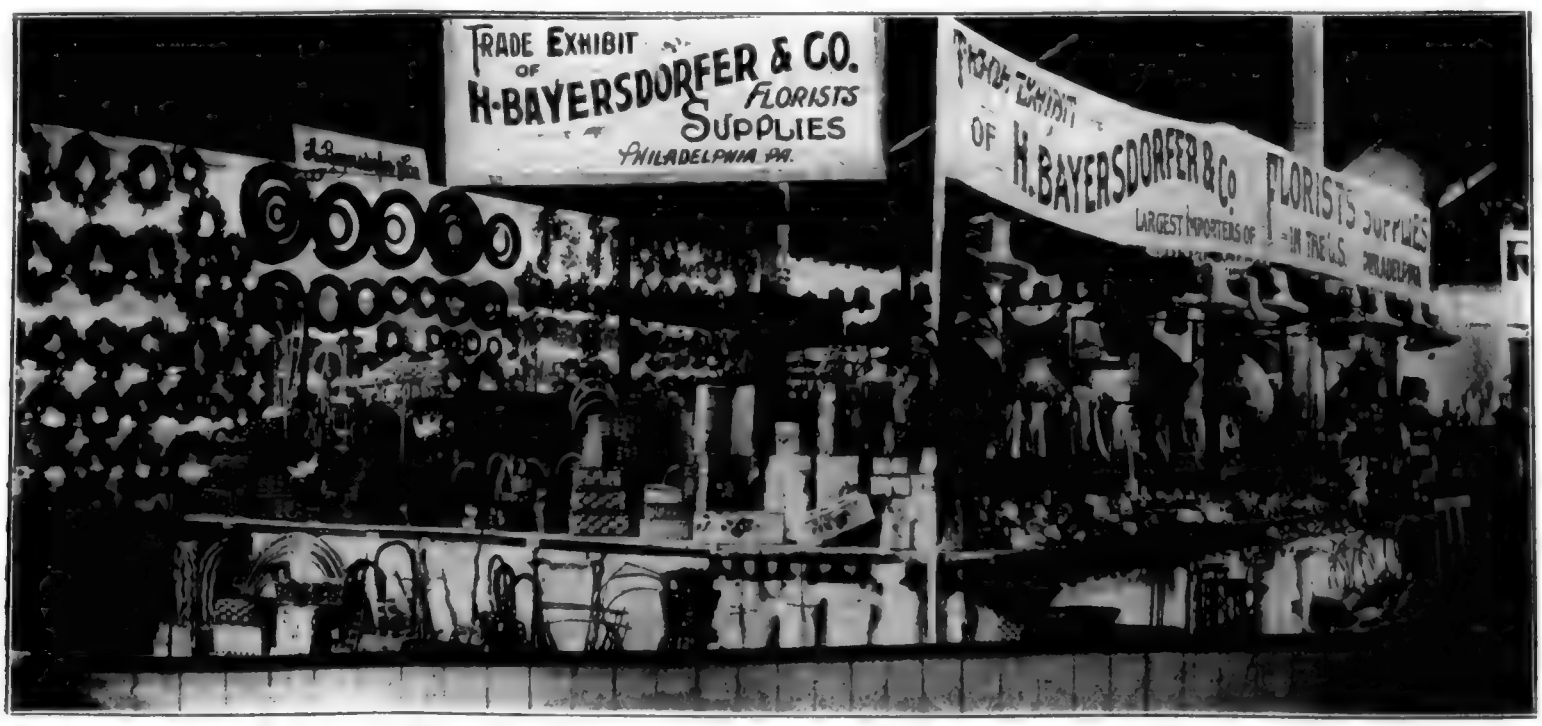
In providing the various garden products, he should study the trend of fashionable taste, and try to forestall the demand in this respect, it being always extremely pleasing to the proprietor to find himself the possessor of the newest things in flowers, fruits and vegetables. On the other hand, it is bad taste on the gardener's part to persistently attempt to force his own particular hobby on an unwilling employer; this is undoubtedly a rock on which many a good man goes to pieces. It is the duty, and should be the pleasure, of the gardener to treat friends of the proprietor with courtesy and respect; this admonition is particularly applicable in cases when married children, or other relatives, locate permanently on the home estate, and whose presence there is often considered by the gardener as an intrusion. Generally this involves merely the production of more garden stuff of every kind, which means more labor, a matter which the ideal gardener can easily adjust by frankly explaining it to his employer.

A thousand other duties might be enumerated which attach to the ideal gardener of today, which in years gone by were supposed to be outside of his province. Far from considering these added burdens, however, he should welcome them as indications of increased opportunities and tributes to his advanced intelligence.

Needs the Best Education.

To meet these requirements successfully, what kind of a man is needed? Certainly one with the most complete education in the knowledge and cultivation of plants that can be conceived. This should have begun in the lowest grades of the grammar school, and continued through every step of school life, not as a theory or dry recital of facts, but out in the garden and field. Happily this important feature in the education of every child, whether destined for the horticultural profession or not, is beginning to be recognized by our public educators. In the case of the ideal gardener, of course, this study should never cease; it should include a knowledge of the lower organisms, both vegetable and animal, which we call diseases, also that of the insect and animal world in general, in so far as it affects plant life for good or ill.

A knowledge of physics, especially that branch pertaining to mechanics; of chemistry to the extent that he may appreciate the relative values of different elements in soil, air and water; to know the effects of various chemicals on insect life, and the poisons that are contained in many plants, with their antidotes—these would be extremely useful. The fundamental laws of art, wherein it is shown that harmony of colors and forms follows as fixed and well-defined rules as those that exist in the phenomena of sound, should be understood. This would naturally include a study of the principles of landscape gardening, of elementary land surveying and the use of the instruments connected therewith.



Success Depends on the Man.

All these and a hundred other things may be enumerated as contributing to the mental equipment of a modern first-rate gardener. It is a pretty formidable curriculum, especially to the man whose lines of perspective have not carried him much beyond the potting bench, whose chief ambition is to drop into an easy job where the boss is away most of the time, and where no embarrassing questions are asked. Let it not be supposed for a moment, however, that the mere acquisition of all this knowledge in itself constitutes an ideal man. These things are simply tools to be used as means to an end, which is wisdom, and this finds its highest expression in the ability and desire to serve. If in the course of all these years of study and application he has not discovered that his own measure of happiness is commensurate with the service which he renders others, then his time and labor have been largely wasted. Unselfish service is the philosopher's stone. He who possesses it scatters happiness wherever he goes—to his employer, his fellow laborers, in fact to all with whom he comes in contact. He possesses a pleasing personality, is interesting in conversation and tactful in manner. Of him his employer makes a friend and companion. He is not only an ideal gardener but an ideal man.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Geraniums.

It seems but a few days since we were filling vases and pots with the unequaled and useful plant, the zonal geranium, and now here we are again within a few days of when the first batch of cuttings should be taken off and rooted. There has been some spicy talk of late in a contemporary on the quantity of geranium plants that could be propagated during winter from a given number of plants. I did not follow the controversy closely, but did notice some of the figures and considered them a gross exaggeration of what is possible with these popular plants. By keeping old stock plants of geraniums in a high temperature during winter you doubtless could produce a good many young plants, but what are they worth? To the man who has to supply his customers in May with vigorous, robust plants, they are largely useless. We have often had occasion to buy a few hundred or thousand geraniums at what appeared a very low price. The only use we could make of them was to cut off the top for a cutting and throw away the original plant. They were in almost all cases such drawn, attenuated specimens that it was impossible to make a decent plant of them.

A geranium wants growing just as much as a palm or dracæna, but many large firms when they grow dracænas, palms or pandanus, look with disdain on the plebeian zonal geranium; and if they grow geraniums at all they are given a back seat along the edge of the paths or are so crowded they soon become diseased and useless. I am not going to claim that the bedding geranium is as profitable as many other less familiar plants, yet we know several firms in the neighborhood who grow first-class 4-inch geraniums and sell them to retailers, peddlers, or at public market at $10.00 per hundred and make a good profit. They do not occupy much space during the winter and when carnations are thrown out after Easter the geraniums are given their last shift, a 4-inch, and by bedding time make fine, robust plants in flower.

Rooting Geraniums.

Before we had much experience in this climate we attempted to root the geraniums in August. It was a sad failure. The cuttings would turn black and quickly rot. The cause of this is that the quantity of water they needed in such tropical heat would overcharge their tissue and the delicate walls of the cellular tissue would burst, and decay would be bound to soon ensue. Particularly in this extraordinary hot and humid August would it be folly to begin propagation until we have a decided change of weather, and it surely will come in September.

The first week in September we have found a good time to take off the first batch of cuttings from the plants in the garden or field. Three or four joints of the leading shoots make the ideal cutting. Never rob a cutting of all its foliage (as I have seen done), which is a great mistake, nor leave on too many leaves. The two youngest leaves are enough, which will leave two joints without leaves, which should be cut off close to the stem and not pulled off. Pot these cuttings in 2-inch or 2½-inch pots according to their size and strength and place on the greenhouse bench. It is better if this bench has the full sun and light, but for the first two weeks a temporary shade would be of benefit.

Firming the Soil.

It is most essential that the soil in these little pots should be firm and solid, not merely thumbed on the surface, but solid around the base of the cutting. This can only be done by getting your thumb and first finger down by the side of the cutting like a wedge. The first watering will take care of the surface. It is remarkable how many young gardeners are oblivious of this important fact. They will revolve the pot and keep up a thumbing on the surface,

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Geraniums.

It seems but a few days since we were filling vases and pots with the unequaled and useful plant, the zonal geranium, and now here we are again within a few days of when the first batch of cuttings should be taken off and rooted. There has been some spicy talk of late in a contemporary on the quantity of geranium plants that could be propagated during winter from a given number of plants. I did not follow the controversy closely, but did notice some of the figures and considered them a gross exaggeration of what is possible with these popular plants. By keeping old stock plants of geraniums in a high temperature during winter you doubtless could produce a good many young plants, but what are they worth? To the man who has to supply his customers in May with vigorous, robust plants, they are largely useless. We have often had occasion to buy a few hundred or thousand geraniums at what appeared a very low price. The only use we could make of them was to cut off the top for a cutting and throw away the original plant. They were in almost all cases such drawn, attenuated specimens that it was impossible to make a decent plant of them.

A geranium wants growing just as much as a palm or dracæna, but many large firms when they grow dracænas, palms or pandanus, look with disdain on the plebeian zonal geranium; and if they grow geraniums at all they are given a back seat along the edge of the paths or are so crowded they soon become diseased and useless. I am not going to claim that the bedding geranium is as profitable as many other less familiar plants, yet we know several firms in the neighborhood who grow first-class 4-inch geraniums and sell them to retailers, peddlers, or at public market at $10.00 per hundred and make a good profit. They do not occupy much space during the winter and when carnations are thrown out after Easter the geraniums are given their last shift, a 4-inch, and by bedding time make fine, robust plants in flower.

Rooting Geraniums.

Before we had much experience in this climate we attempted to root the geraniums in August. It was a sad failure. The cuttings would turn black and quickly rot. The cause of this is that the quantity of water they needed in such tropical heat would overcharge their tissue and the delicate walls of the cellular tissue would burst, and decay would be bound to soon ensue. Particularly in this extraordinary hot and humid August would it be folly to begin propagation until we have a decided change of weather, and it surely will come in September.

The first week in September we have found a good time to take off the first batch of cuttings from the plants in the garden or field. Three or four joints of the leading shoots make the ideal cutting. Never rob a cutting of all its foliage (as I have seen done), which is a great mistake, nor leave on too many leaves. The two youngest leaves are enough, which will leave two joints without leaves, which should be cut off close to the stem and not pulled off. Pot these cuttings in 2-inch or 2½-inch pots according to their size and strength and place on the greenhouse bench. It is better if this bench has the full sun and light, but for the first two weeks a temporary shade would be of benefit.

Firming the Soil.

It is most essential that the soil in these little pots should be firm and solid, not merely thumbed on the surface, but solid around the base of the cutting. This can only be done by getting your thumb and first finger down by the side of the cutting like a wedge. The first watering will take care of the surface. It is remarkable how many young gardeners are oblivious of this important fact. They will revolve the pot and keep up a thumbing on the surface, where it is not needed, and leave the soil beneath loose where it should be in close contact with the active roots.

Trade Exhibition at Dayton.—View from the Balcony.

Watering.

One good solid watering of the newly potted cutting is necessary, but that can be deferred for a few hours to allow the succulent cutting to evaporate some of its sap. After the one good, thorough watering it is not easy to say when water is needed again. It will depend on how much sun they receive and on the weather, but don't water again until they are decidedly dry. In three or four weeks most all of them will have started roots and then can absorb more water, but until the roots are formed water only when quite dry. This may be once a week or twice a week. Use your eyes and brain.

Another reason why it is advisable to take off a lot of cuttings early in September is that the strong growths you cut back will make a lot of lateral growth, which in early October will give you lots of the very best of cuttings, which with cooler weather will root with ease, and if you wish to lift a lot of plants for winter propagation, these cut back plants will be in excellent order to lift and put in pots or plant on a bench.

Some may think this is a long yarn about such a common plant. We were overwhelmed last winter with specimens of foliage and accounts of diseased geraniums. We believe most of the trouble arises from not realizing what a geranium needs and often they are given poor ventilation, too high a temperature, insufficient sunlight and too much water. The opposite of all these conditions is what will grow healthy, robust geraniums and early September is the time to begin right.

Ferns.

I notice with benches of nephrolepis, the old Boston, Scottii and Whitmani, they are growing very fast of late and will soon need more room. It is rather early just now to lift all your plants. Another six or seven weeks' growth in the bed will greatly increase them in size. Lift now if crowding every other row or every other plant in the row. These early lifted plants will become established and make fine plants for early fall sales. Fill up all the holes where you have lifted the plants and over the surface of your beds spread one inch of sifted rotten manure. Decayed spent hops would be an excellent material, or the remains of an old hotbed. The ferns will be sending out numerous runners now, which will find this mulching congenial material to root in. You never will have an overstock of these most useful ferns. Wm. Scott.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

The market was fair last week on most of the items, but little could be done with gladioli, the poorer grades being almost unsalable at any price. Asters became a tremendous overstock as the week progressed, so that prices went down to unquotably low levels. The extra value which had attached to white also was affected by increasing supplies of outdoor carnations.

This week finds the wholesale section quiet. Everybody is away, at convention. Many of the local retailers and a large proportion of the country buyers are also there, so that home activities are at a low ebb. Supplies are above requirements. The new Beauties are more abundant and each day adds a fraction of an inch to the length of stem of the best grade. The cut from young teas also is increasing and improving. Chatenay is particularly plentiful, and doubtless will be for the next few weeks.

Asters still are in large supply; everybody has some good stock, but the low grades are again strongly in evidence. Gladioli still are a great trial; soon it will be dahlias. The sweet peas are about all in. Auratum lilies are passing, but longiflorum is abundant. Garden flowers do not sell with great rapidity. Tuberoses are more plentiful and sell slower. Valley is in fair supply. Greens of all kinds are abundant.

Need More Space.

The A. L. Randall Co. finds the supply department already cramped for space, with several car-loads of stock coming as the result of Miss Tonner's trip to Europe. A portion of the third floor of their building has been secured and shortly the entire floor will be occupied. They say the supplies are helping business in the cut flower department.

Safeguards Accounts.

C. M. Dickinson states that E. H. Hunt is a member of an association which insures rated accounts; that is, in the event of a rated creditor failing to pay, the insurance company makes good. Charles A. Shaeffer, Kansas City, was rated and upon his failure the insurance people promptly paid Hunt some $665, several times the yearly cost of insurance for all rated accounts. Shaeffer's other local creditors received a 15 per cent first dividend last week.

Violets in Request.

Rhinebeck violet growers are shortly to have the opportunity of making the personal acquaintance of several Chicago wholesalers without going off their own front steps, for Rhinebeck violets are wanted for this market for the coming season. A few seasons ago this would have been considered notice to unchain the bulldog, but in view of the recent expansion of the violet industry and the showing Chicago has made in comparison with other markets, the westerners feel assured of a hospitable welcome. W. E. Lynch, of Hunt's, who is now in Massachusetts, was the first Chicago wholesaler to visit Rhinebeck, and G. H. Pieser, of Kennicott's, was there last year. Some of this year's visitors may be lighter physically, but they will be none the less eloquent.

Various Notes.

At Morton Grove the Poehlmann Bros. Co. is installing big cooling rooms and making other preparations for shipping their standing orders direct from the greenhouses. This not only will place the stock in the customers' hands with the least possible handling, but it will relieve the pressure on the city salesroom. When cuts are at their height at the Poehlmann plant the store is badly crowded. The glass area has doubled since it was possible to obtain more room for the selling end.

The George Wittbold Co. is erecting an apartment building on its property at Edgebrook.

Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Kessler, of Topeka, Kan., are in town for a two weeks' vacation, visiting growers and riding on the lake steamers.

The Foley Mfg. Co. is working up a list of trade addresses of its own and offers to send a neat souvenir to any greenhouse owner who sends his name and address, and states the number of feet of glass he owns.

W. G. Matthews, of the Dayton Floral Co., Dayton, and his foreman, Samuel Kurtz, were in town last week, visiting leading growers. Mr. Matthews depends entirely on this market for his roses and carnations.

J. T. Helbok has a good stand at 1419 Wrightwood avenue and does a nice business, especially in funeral flowers.

J. Enzweiler, on Morgan street, says July was a good month, but August has been dead.

The A. Dietsch Co. finds its season's business has been limited by its capacity to turn out work rather than by its ability to get orders, and is planning to put in more machinery and more power for next year. The prospect looks good to them.

Invitations are out to the first gathering of the Coatsworth family in America, to be held at Kingsville, Ont., September 15. L. Coatsworth and family will be there. The Coatsworth family traces its descent back to the year 852, the first Coatsworth having reached New England in 1770.

Albert Haisch, of the Memphis Floral Co., Memphis, Tenn., visited the Benthey-Coatsworth Co. last week.

Autumn is not far away; Amling had cosmos last week.

A cork-lined icebox of large size is a recent improvement of the Deamud Co.

Large shipments of America gladiolus, formerly known as the R. H. Warder, have been received at C. W. McKellar's the last week, from Frank Banning, Kinsman, O. It is a fine thing.

N. B. Stover, Grandville, Mich., has returned home after a visit with his sister, Mrs. Thomas Sparrow, 3318 Archer avenue. He was accompanied by his invalid son, a bright young man of 25 years, whose mentality is in direct contrast to his physical disabilities, which are such that he is unable to walk.

Miss Kate Moulton rose at Peter Reinberg's is looking fine.

John Zech says that his firm has several new growers for this season and expects to double its business.

H. N. Bruns sailed from Hamburg, Germany, August 16 and is expected to arrive home about the end of the month.

S. B. Wertheimer, the New York ribbon man, was in town last week.

N. J. Wietor points with pride to the Kaiserins they have been and are cutting in quantity.

L. H. Winterson will proceed east from the convention, combining pleasure with business.

Fred Sperry is at his desk this week, but expects to go east in a few days.

Reed & Keller's Exhibit at Dayton.

Richmond rose is looking fine with all the growers, and has been planted in great quantity.

There were sixty-four in the party from Chicago to Dayton. The baggage car was well supplied with refreshments, which were artistically dispensed by the indefatigable Ed. Winterson, and all had a pleasant time. The names of those in the party appear in proper order in the general list of those present at the convention, printed elsewhere in this issue.

W. F. Gude and Adolphus Gude, of Washington, D. C., were in the city the first of this week, on their way home from a six weeks' trip in Colorado. They stopped off in Dayton for the convention.

The Chicago Rose Co. has put in a big stock of grass-growing heads, including some larger sizes than have been seen here.

The goose-neck bends at Bassett & Washburn's are in the heating pipes, not in the rose stems. They are the latest invention of the heating experts to take care of expansion.

Sinner Bros. have their place all painted, planted and in the pink of perfection.

Albert Fuchs seems to be trying to cover the whole north side with flat buildings.

Weiland & Risch say it will be six weeks before their crop comes on, which should be a date for good business.

Phil Schupp, at J. A. Budlong's, says their rose crop is due about September 15.

Kruchten & Johnson will get into the shipping trade this winter.

Joe Foerster says that prospects were never so bright at George Reinberg's. The young stock looks right and the store facilities are equal to all needs.

Percy Jones says there will shortly be a number of new growers in the market.

OUR COVER.

The special cover on this week's REVIEW pleases those who had to do with its manufacture and, as all are excellent firms, it is with pleasure that we give each credit for his share. The wreath was the work of John Mangel, the photograph by the Geo. R. Lawrence Co., and the drawing and engraving by the Crescent Engraving Co.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The New York cut flower market has settled down to the usual midsummer dullness which characterizes August of every year. Everybody in the wholesale section is evidently conscious of the near approach of the fall season. The allied trades are every one of them already booming in anticipation of the extraordinary demand. Never were the nurserymen so overwhelmed with orders, the seed and bulb men are working night and day, and the stocks and novelties of the supply men exceed all past accumulations, with advance orders already received for large quantities of goods.

There is an abundance of everything in the cut flower markets, and at most reasonable prices. The quality of everything is improving, the supply of asters and gladioli is unlimited. American Beauty roses are abundant, and the finest of them command 20 to 25 cents. The new Bride and Maid roses are short-stemmed and cheap, often cleaning up at as low as 25 to 50 cents per hundred. There are few good carnations arriving yet, though a slight improvement is noticed in their quality each week, and soon they will resume their place and popularity. Orchids are being called for in excess of the supply, and prices remain firm at the regular quotation. McManus reports out of town inquiries and engagements in excess of other years, and predicts an abundant supply of everything before September 1. His trip to the west seems to be already bearing fruit, and he claims that not a large city within a thousand miles of New York will pass the season without a regular daily shipment from headquarters.

There are plenty of lilies and valley to be had at reasonable prices, and the green goods and water lily men seem to be busier than usual. We look for a return to the rush and activity of the fall season as early as September 1.

Various Notes.

The east is splendidly represented at the convention, both in attendance and exhibits, and the conventionists surely appreciate the splendid displays which the New Yorkers have sent to Dayton.

Almost every employee of the wholesalers has been privileged with a liberal vacation, and the lady bookkeepers are all at their desks again with the glow of health on their faces; in some cases, this promises to be the "home stretch" for a few of them. Dame Rumor announces the marriage of two of the most popular among them early in September, and as an indication of faithful service, the happy benedict in each case is a wholesale florist. Congratulations will be in order shortly.

J. K. Allen came back on Monday from his two weeks' outing in time to join the New York contingent on its way to Dayton. W. H. Elliott, of Boston, and wife honored the New Yorkers with their company.

Benjamin Hammond, of Fishkill, joined the company at Albany.

Miss Behan, of John Young's office force, is spending her holidays in the Catskills.

Alexander McConnell has his beautiful yacht in commission, and is with a party of friends, enjoying a two weeks' sail on the Sound.

A. J. Guttman celebrated his twenty-ninth birthday August 15 with his family at Atlantic City.

A. L. Young & Co. have enlarged their store considerably, and have repainted and repaired it so that it now affords abundant room for their increasing business.

Miss Bessie E. Dornbusch, of Dayton, O.

Author of the poem delivered at the reception given in honor of Pres. Kasting.

Traendly & Schenck are repainting their establishment, and their employees were surprised by a call from a protesting union delegate of the painters' union, who demanded his society's authority before any further decoration was done. The delegate woke up suddenly when he received a "skidoo" order and disappeared.

J. B. Waldis, of Roanoke, Va., who had been visiting in Switzerland, returned last week and left for his southern home on Thursday. Arthur Weise, with Froment, is a son-in-law of Mr. Waldis.

Miss Wollrich, bookkeeper for Seligman & Co., will leave in about two weeks for her summer vacation, which will include a trip to the Falls and a voyage down the St. Lawrence to Montreal.

Mr. Rogers, with Ernest Asmus' Son, is managing an entertainment to be given at Midland beach early in September, in which the wholesalers are all taking a practical interest; a large crowd of them will doubtless attend.

Mr. and Mrs. Lentz, of David Clarke's Sons, left on Saturday for Calicoon Center, in the Catskills. Marshall Clarke and wife, of this firm, are summering in the mountains also.

Mr. Bonnet, of Bonnet & Blake, the wholesale florists of Brooklyn, has gone for a few weeks' cruise with friends in his electric launch, The Lottie. Mr. Blake has returned from his holiday visit to his old home in Rochester, and at Niagara Falls. This firm is handling a splendid stock of asters from the Rochester growers, around which city Mr. Blake says there are acres upon acres of them.

C. W. Ward, of the Cottage Gardens Co., is recuperating at the Maine resorts, and will not attend the sessions of the plant breeding association in London, England, as he anticipated.

The Schloss Bros. have returned from a month's sojourn at Liberty, in the Catskills. Their exhibit at Dayton is an extensive one; Emil Schloss had charge of arranging it. Wertheimer Bros. have some splendid novelties there on exhibition, including their new designs in violet ribbons.

The Johnston Heating Co. has been awarded the contract for installing the hot water heating plant in the two houses, each 55 x 350 feet, of the F. R. Pierson Co., at Scarboro, N. Y. Mr. Pierson finds the tremendous amount of work necessary for the completion of this great enterprise an insurmountable hindrance to his attendance at the convention.

William H. Kuebler, of Brooklyn, with his family, has been summering at New Preston, Conn.

C. Pesenecker, of Jersey City, one of the old-time florists, has just disposed of his property there.

Charles Millang finds time, in addition to his wholesale duties, to demonstrate his ability in booming real estate, and disposed of some lots of his Bay Shore property last week.

Mr. Reed, of Reed & Keller, is at Luzerne, and will leave for home August 23 (today), with all arrangements completed for the largest importation of novelties he has ever brought to this country. He reports a most enjoyable summer of European travel with his wife, and is in the best of health.

George Saltford is visiting the violet growers near his old home at Rhinebeck, N. Y.

Joseph S. Fenrich has been quite ill during the last week, but is now convalescing.

William Starke is getting his greenhouse and store in good shape for the fall shipments of plants, which he says will be double those of 1905.

Michael Ford, of Ford Bros., is back again from a month's vacation as fat and ruddy as a boy, and feeling like a two-year-old.

The sympathy of the entire trade is extended to Patrick O'Mara, and his sister and brother, in their great affliction. Their brother Roderick died suddenly at his residence, 782 Grand street, Jersey City, on August 16, and the funeral took place August 18, from St. Patrick's Cathedral. Mr. O'Mara has been for many years with the firm of Peter Henderson & Co., the seedsmen of Cortlandt street, New York, and was a universal favorite with all who knew him.

William H. Donohoe had charge of the Fanshawe wedding at Shrewsbury, N. J., on August 18. The bridal bouquets were especially beautiful, that of the bride being gardenias, with shower effects. The six bridesmaids carried shower bouquets of lily of the valley, and the maid of honor had American Beauties.

Siebrecht & Son will have their new store completed in time for the early fall trade. Mr. and Mrs. H. Siebrecht will leave soon for a trip through New England.

The will of the late James Weir has been filed for probate. The widow and son are named as executors. The estate is divided among the immediate family.

Sydney B. Wertheimer was in Chicago last week on his usual business trip and reports the best fall trade he ever had.

Abrahams, of Seventh avenue, Brooklyn, sent last week to the opening of the Spooner's theater the largest horseshoe ever seen in the city of churches. It was worth $100. J. Austin Shaw.

STEAMER SAILINGS.

Put a sign in your window, with the steamer sailings of the next few days and the information that you can deliver flowers on board any outgoing steamer. It will get you many profitable orders. You can fill the orders by telegraphing them, if time is short, to a dealer represented on the REVIEW's page of Leading Retail Florists. Here are the principal sailings for the next fortnight:

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Business is now at its lowest ebb, and there is just about enough to keep the craft from going to sleep. The demand is confined entirely to flowers of light colors, which can be used in funeral work, and no one is taking the risk of buying much stock unless it is ordered and the sale is a sure thing. There is practically no transient trade and very little decorative work. Funeral work is the mainstay.

The supply of stock is not heavy, with the exception of gladioli, which are coming strong and are not selling so well. It is hard to move the darker colors at any price. Asters are in good demand and the supply is fairly ample, but many more white ones could be disposed of to advantage. Purple and lavender are none too plentiful. Roses are poor in quality, but at that they sell out completely at fair prices. Carnations are scarce, there being scarcely any to speak of on the market. Lilies are good property and sell well. Tuberoses also do well. The supply of green goods is equal to the demand.

Here is the dollar for another year of

THE WEEKLY FLORISTS' REVIEW

In it we generally very easily find what we are looking for; a fact highly appreciated by every one, we feel sure.

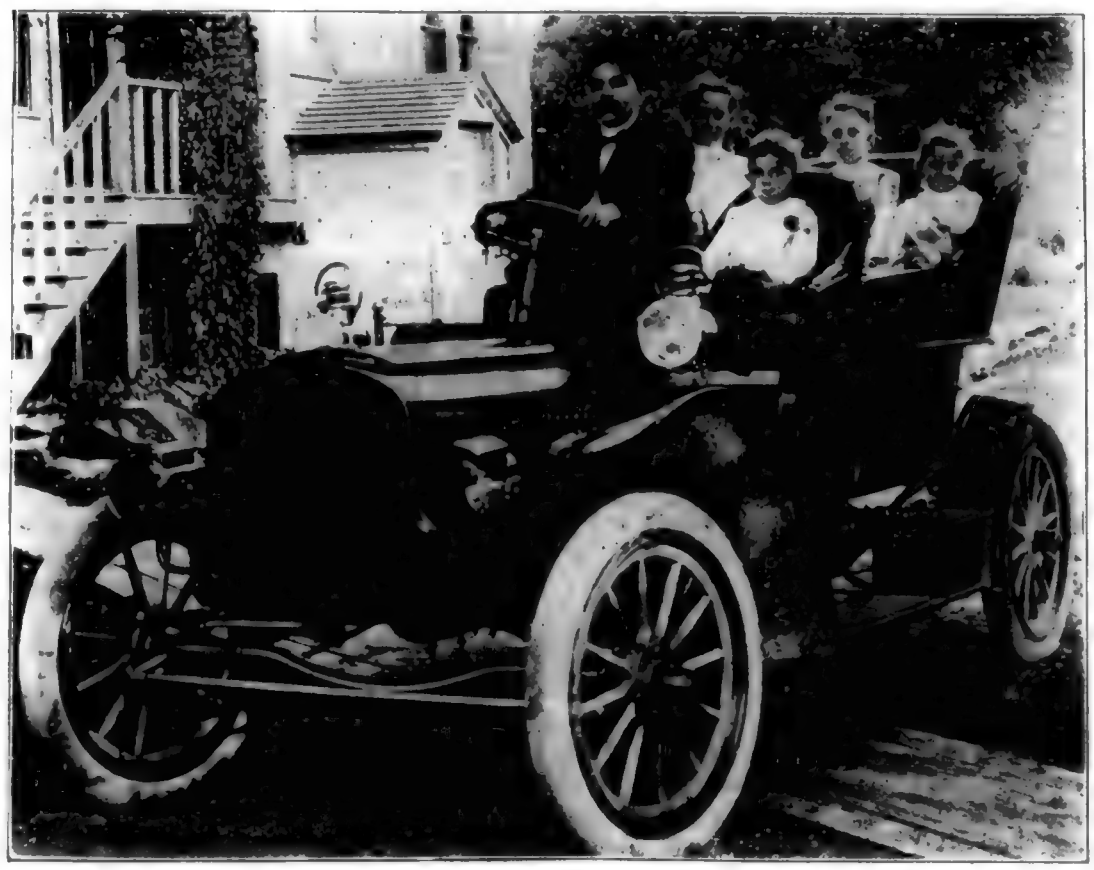
HOFFMEISTER FLORAL CO.
Cincinnati.

Aug. 10, 1906.

Various Notes.

A meeting of the Florists' Society was held in the club-rooms Saturday evening. There was not much business to be disposed of, but the nearness of the convention of the S. A. F. formed an interesting topic for discussion. A committee was appointed to draw up resolutions on the death of James Hartshorne, who was an honorary member of our society. The news of the death of Mr. Hartshorne was received with the greatest regret by the craft of this city. He was a frequent visitor in Cincinnati, and his amiable disposition and good business qualities had made him many friends here.

The annual Hamilton county fair was held at Carthage during the last week. The premiums offered for cut flowers and plants brought out a good exhibition. The awards were as follows: George & Allan, first for best display of roses, best general display of cut flowers, best general display of cut flowers and designs; second for best gladiolus, best asters, best palms, best display of pot plants. J. T. Conger took first prizes for best geraniums, best gladiolus, best asters, best palms, best display pot plants, best general display; second on best display of roses, best general display of cut flowers.



George F. Crabb, of Grand Rapids, arrived in town last Saturday and is visiting the various establishments about this city. Other visitors were Ben Eschner of Philadelphia and S. S. Skidelsky.

C. J. OHMER.

NOVEL COLD STORAGE PLANT.

H. G. Fleming, of Fairmont, W. Va., has the unique advantage of getting his heat and his cold from the same source. A small horizontal coal tunnel leads to his boiler-room, and from this little cars bring him his fuel, then on the return trip they carry his cut flowers back to the mine for cold storage. The little railroad runs through the greenhouses and furnishes transportation facilities.

The temperature of the mine never varies more than three degrees, remaining at 45 to 48 degrees. A dozen carnations put in for the purpose of experiment wilted only one day sooner than the fresh carnations.

ROSES

GENERAL HINTS.

I wish some information in regard to the treatment of roses in a middle solid bench of a house 17x150 feet; Brides, Maids, Gates, Ivory, Chatenay, Richmond and Killarney are the varieties. They were planted early in July in rich, fibrous, heavy loam, sterilized. They have been perfectly healthy and growing continually. I notice by digging in the soil deep enough that little roots reach clear to the middle of the rows on the larger plants.

I have treated them as follows: Sprayed nearly every bright day, and kept soil rather moist, but not very wet. I have ventilated all that was possible, night and day, and worked the soil frequently. Until a short time ago I have cut the buds off rather high up, to produce size and lots of foliage. Lately on the larger plants I have been leaving only the strongest eyes, two to four, according to strength. No buds have been allowed to bloom. A good number of strong shoots have come from the roots and higher up, and also quite a little weaker growth.

How has the treatment been so far? Is it too often to spray the plants once a day, when not wetting the soil to speak of? Would it be wise to run the roses slightly on the dry side for a while now, to produce more root growth, and then increase the water again in about two or three weeks?

In cutting back the shoots, should they be cut while the stem is soft, or not until the bud is well formed and the wood hardened?

Should blind shoots be cut back the same as those with buds? Should the weak, blind wood be removed occasionally from the plants? What suggestions can you give for immediate future treatment, that would tend to produce the strongest possible growth? A. A. G.

The treatment accorded these roses has so far been right, and if the grower continues conscientiously to follow the advice given in these columns in the future, as he has done in the past, he is certain to be satisfied with the results.

At the present stage it would be unwise to cut out the blind wood, as the plants require all the foliage they have to keep root action going. When the plants attain a larger size and become overcrowded with leaves, and the days get shorter, then it may be advisable to do some judicious pruning to give a better circulation of air, and allow the sun's rays to reach the soil.

It would also be against the best cultural rules to withdraw the water supply and run them on the dry side. Keep them growing as long as you can, and decrease the supply of water as the days get shorter and evaporation decreases.

Keep the syringe going on all favorable occasions, and do not allow red spider to get a hold, or you may have to regret lost opportunities.

It is better to allow the bud to develop until it shows color or even to come to the bursting point before taking it off, as the wood by that time will have acquired just about the proper condition of ripeness to develop a good eye.

To encourage a stronger growth, give the benches a sprinkling of florists' bone meal, and ruffle it into the surface, giving the bench a thorough soaking afterward.

By keeping an eye on the rose column of the Review, you will find hints for the treatment of your stock as the season advances. Ribes.

CLUB ROOT ON ROSES.

Will you kindly tell me what to do for club root on roses? Is lime good, and how should it be used and in what quantities? Do you use it fresh or air-slaked? I have two benches, each 5x100 feet, planted with Richmond and Ivory, and they show signs of this trouble.

W. C. D.

If the club root is caused by eel-worm, the case is rather serious, as there is really no remedy known that will destroy this pest without also ruining the plants.

There are, however, other insects which attack the roots of roses and cause club root, and which are amenable to treatment.

Air-slaked lime stirred into the soil will help by keeping the soil sweet. Stirring or cultivating once a week has also a beneficial effect, by imparting vitality to the plant and keeping it in a growing condition, so as to resist such root enemies.

Good treatment, plenty of fresh air and a generous supply of water often does wonders for plants so affected.

Ribes.

THRIPS ON ROSES.

What can I do to get rid of thrips or white fly in my rose house? I have done all I know, and I trust you can tell me the right thing to do. M. E. A.

There is a very marked difference between thrips and the small white fly which has recently become so troublesome in greenhouses, and what proves a destructive agent when employed for the extermination of thrips seems but a delicacy for white fly.

Various remedies have been tried for the extermination of this very destructive pest, the most efficacious of which is a few applications of hydrocyanic acid gas.

This is a very subtle poison, and should be used with great caution. In the Review of July 12, Mr. Scott gave full directions for the use of this gas, which if carefully followed out will certainly kill the "varmints." Ribes.

DETROIT.

The Market.

There has been no noticeable change in either business or stock the last week. Carnations are a little better, but being mostly from outdoor plants, they are of short stem. Gladioli move slowly, with the exception of America, which is bringing good prices.

Various Notes.

When the Detroit delegation for Dayton lined up at the Union Depot, with their large straw hats and "Uncle Pike" dusters, a farmer passing by remarked, "Gosh darn my boot-jack, if them beant a crop of rubes from Spinnageville," but closer scrutiny proved them to be a bunch of Detroit boys off for a good time; and they are certainly having it.

Robert Flowerday and wife have been spending the warm days in a cottage at the St. Clair Flats.

No, Breitmeyer's and Schroeter's have not moved their places of business—the name of the well-known Miami avenue has been changed to Broadway. The exorbitant rent asked on Woodward avenue is having a tendency to drive many firms to side streets, with the odds in favor of Broadway. In time this will make a fine business street, as it is 100 feet wide, and within a stone's throw of Woodward avenue.

Club Meeting.

Although no special feature was booked for the evening, the regular meeting of the Detroit Florists' Club, held August 15, was well attended. The minutes of the last, the annual meeting, as read by Secretary Sullivan, were adopted.

Robert Rahaley was unanimously elected a member of the club. Mr. Rahaley is assistant manager as well as bookkeeper at the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange, and is popular with all in the trade. The name of J. D. Carwright, of Grosse Pointe, was entered as a candidate for membership.

In a previous meeting it was resolved that the secretary draft a petition to the S. A. F. in behalf of the Detroit Florists' Club, asking their aid in fighting the aster disease. This petition was read, and approved by the members present. Quite an interesting discussion followed, the essence of which was that all the growers were experiencing some trouble, but each man's troubles seemed to be of a different nature. Mr. Unger, head gardener at Bell Isle Park, spoke of an insect similar in appearance to the greenfly, but with a long bill or trunk, boring into the roots about one inch below the ground. Some claim the trouble to be common stem-rot. Some attribute it to the soil, to overfeeding, to the tap roots not being trained straight downward, to too much sun, to warm nights, and so on.

Mr. Unger thought it would be advisable to interest the state agricultural society, also Dr. L. O. Howard, the United States entomologist, at Washington, D. C. No matter where the trouble lies, there must be some remedy and it is the purpose of the Detroit club to find it.

W. W. Tracy, formerly with D. M. Ferry, but now in the employ of the United States government, was spoken of as being one of the best posted, keenest, and most thorough men in the agricultural department.

The main feature assigned to the evening of the next meeting, September 5, will be observations of the convention.

with sufficient pitch to allow plenty of head-room. The construction will depend largely upon the amount of money you intend to spend. A steel frame construction is the best, as it lasts longer; but just as good cucumbers can be grown in a sashbar house.

The house should have sufficient piping, with boiler power behind it to keep up a temperature of 70 degrees in the coldest weather. It is not necessary to bench your house, as the plants will grow just as well on the ground floor, providing you have a good soil, liberally enriched. But you must provide a trellis on which to train the plants. In a house twenty feet wide there will be nice room for four rows. Your pipes can be run along the sides of your house, and the plants should be set far enough back to be away from the burning influence of the pipes.

You say you want all the information you can get, but if you would be a little more specific and tell me the points on which you wish to be enlightened I may be able to help you better. Cucumber growing is a large subject; hence the need of knowing just what points you desire information on.

The Market.

So far as could be learned, business the last week was not so good as the week previous. The last of the week the demand was quite good. With an active demand and rather small supply of first-class stock, it was easily moved at fair prices. There is still a big supply of second-class stock which moves slowly. We still have a few weeks left for slow business, as society will hardly open up before the latter part of September, and not until then can much be looked for.

Roses are improving fast. The quality of blooms is showing this. Beauties too are looking better, but not enough of them are coming in to supply the demand. Extra good quality of carnations are not to be had in this market. Fairly good white from the field are short-stemmed. Red and pink are very scarce.

Asters are of good quality. The poorer grades, especially in colored sorts, are a glut. Extra fine quality sell well, with some as high as $5 per hundred. Outdoor stuff, such as hydrangeas, gladioli and tuberoses, is plentiful and hard to sell, as there are too many. The outlook for better stock soon is promising, as our local growers report young stock in roses and carnations in excellent condition. Violet plants are also large and fine.

Convention Matters.

The St. Louis delegation left Monday over the Vandalia railroad at 8:15, and they were due to arrive at Dayton at 8:15 Tuesday morning. By the time this issue is in the hands of our readers we will be enjoying the hospitality of the Dayton florists.

Among the bowlers who attend are included C. A. Kuehn, Theo. Miller, F. C. Weber, William C. Young, F. H. Meinhardt, E. W. Guy and J. J. Beneke. From this list a team was to be selected to bowl in the tournament, and expected to make a good showing.

Various Notes.

A. G. Bentzen is having a big run on poinsettias and other surplus stock.

Henry Baer, of Peoria, Ill., is sending to Kuehn some fine asters of all colors, which sell well.

Charles Ford, representing A. Herrmann, New York, recently called on the trade. Mr. Ford was on his way to Dayton.

Henry Aue, who sailed for Germany some weeks ago, has returned and is

THE beautiful custom of presenting Nature's most lovely gifts appears more manifest today than in the past. Flora is now indispensable on so many occasions.

The wedding festivities are incomplete without the florist's art. The entertainment or reception is not perfect without the adornment of beautiful flowers. From the cradle to the end, in times of joy and sorrow, the gift of flowers is, and always will be, fashionable, sentimental and sympathetic.

An experience of many years, and our improved method of packing flowers for shipment, make it possible to forward fresh flowers successfully for a reasonable distance, even through the warm summer months.

Reliable correspondents in distant cities both in the United States and Canada enable us to transfer orders by telegraph or mail. European orders cabled to the best representatives of floriculture abroad insure our patrons the proper execution of their esteemed favors.

Our removal to the Windsor Arcade, 571 Fifth Avenue, gives us additional facilities for transaction of business, either domestic or foreign.

Apple Growers' Congress.

The American Apple Growers' Congress held its fourth annual meeting at the Planters' hotel August 14 and 15. Nearly 1,000 from all parts of this country and Canada were in attendance.

Wednesday afternoon, August 15, the election of officers was held. They were as follows: H. M. Dunlap, of Savoy, Ill., president; W. R. Wilkinson, St. Louis, vice-president; T. C. Wilson, Hannibal, Mo., secretary; Wesley Green, Des Moines, Ia., treasurer. The next meeting of the congress will be held in St. Louis, August 13 and 14, 1907.

The delegates started Thursday, August 16, on an inspection tour of the Ozark region over the Frisco road, and returned on Saturday.

The Shaw Banquet.

The annual banquet provided for in the will of the late Henry Shaw was given at the Jefferson hotel Tuesday, August 14. Covers were laid for 250 and among those present were the delegates to the Apple Growers' Congress and a goodly number of the St. Louis florists.

Prof. Wm. Trelease acted as toastmaster, and the principal speakers were H. M. Dunlap, G. Gurney, H. C. Irish, Dr. T. J. Burrill and W. Williams.

ELBERON, N. J.

A meeting of the Elberon Horticultural Society was held August 6, with W. D. Robertson in the chair. Three applications for membership were received. A letter was read from the board of education of Ocean township thanking the society for its work in beautifying the public school grounds.

Three prizes were awarded for collections of twenty-five varieties of cut flowers. The winners were A. Bauer, J. Kennedy and A. Greil. W. D. Robertson showed a vase of Gypsophila paniculata, and H. Hall exhibited decorative table plants. A specimen of Stanhopea graveolens was shown from the Lakeside Gardens. F. Dettlinger and B. Wyckoff staged some nice cut flowers.

G. M.

GLEN COVE, N. Y.

The Nassau County Horticultural Society met on Wednesday, August 8, with President Harrison presiding. The attendance was large. One active member was voted in, and one nomination was received.

In the competition, S. F. Nepess scored 92⅓ points, H. Meyer 87, and Felix Mense 81⅓. The silver match-safe was awarded to S. F. Nepess, for the best six varieties of vegetables. Others in the competition were T. Harrison, Peter Ewen and H. Matz. Some good pears were exhibited by James Holloway, cannas and Dendrobium thyrsiflorum by F. Boulon, and Canna King Humbert by Peter Ewen.

The subjects for competition at the next meeting are dahlias, in three classes, with a box of cigars as a prize for each, as follows: Best collection of single dahlias, best six varieties of show dahlias, and best collection of cactus dahlias. All are to be correctly named.

An interesting paper, entitled, "How to Grow American Beauty Roses," was read by C. Bertanzel, Glen Head, for which he received a vote of thanks.

The Market.

The market shows quite a little improvement and has cleaned up better than for several weeks. Climatically the last week was the most perfect of the summer, skies cloudless each day, and not a drop of rain falling, a big change from what we had experienced for many weeks. The clearer conditions seemed to brace even the flower market.

Roses sell all the way from 50 cents to $6 per hundred, for varieties other than Beauties. The latter are not very plentiful and the best hold at $20. The best carnations now arriving are outdoor ones. These fetch $1.50 to $2 per hundred. New indoor crop flowers arriving are small and short-stemmed, while those from the old crop are very puny in size.

Asters sell at 35 cents to $1 per hundred. Sweet peas seem to be practically over. Gladioli are at $3 to $6, the pink and white shades selling well. Hydrangea paniculata and Hydrangea grandiflora at 35 cents per dozen are plentiful. Some Hydrangea Otaksa is seen. Easter lilies hold at $1.50 per dozen. There is still a good lot of Lilium auratum and Lilium speciosum. The outdoor crop of the last named will be ready in a few days. Candytuft, cornflowers, valley and feverfew comprise the bulk of the other flowers seen.

Exhibition.

The exhibition at Horticultural hall on August 18 was fine, entirely filling the main hall. Phloxes again made a grand showing. For thirty vases prizes went to T. C. Thurlow, F. W. Spinney, Blue Hill Nurseries and W. Whitman. J. K. Alexander led for twelve named gladioli, followed by W. Whitman and John Lewis Childs. The last named won for 100 vases gladioli, C. S. Pratt second, J. K. Alexander third. For asters W. Whitman was first and second and O. B. Kenrick third. T. O. Hatfield received honorary mention for Senecio clivorum, fine for edges of ponds or streams. E. F. Dwyer & Son had a new clematis, intermediate between the shrubby and climbing sections.

Dahlias made a great display. Some of the exhibitors of these were J. K. Alexander, Towle's Dahlia Gardens, A. E. Johnson, Mrs. J. B. Lawrence, W. W. Rawson & Co., W. C. Winter and W. G. Winsor. Other displays of flowers came from Blue Hill Nurseries, which also received honorable mention for hybrid rugosa rose, Conrad F. Mayer, W. J. Clemson, Mrs. E. M. Gill, Harvard Botanic Gardens and H. B. Watts.

Various Notes.

W. H. Knapp has returned from a three weeks' visit to Jeffrey, N. H., with his mother.

A baseball game of a pleasant nature was held at Natick on August 18, the opposing teams being from the Park Street Flower Market and Waban Rose Conservatories. Refreshments of ice cream, cake and coffee were served through the kindness of Alex. Montgomery.

James Tulis, of South Sudbury, and S. J. Goddard, of Framingham, are sending in quantities of fine outdoor-grown carnations, which meet a quick sale.

Anderson & Williams are one of the few growers for this market of Bouvardia Humboldtii. They are now marketing some fine bunches of it.

A call last week on F. C. Green, superintendent of Senator N. W. Aldrich's extensive estate at Warwick, R. I., found him still busy making many improvements. The 100 or more acres of lawns never looked more beautiful, while trees and shrubs, thanks to the copious moisture, had all made luxuriant growth.

James Burke, on the J. A. Foster estate at Warwick, has some of the finest Hydrangea Otaksa it was ever our privilege to see. They are planted outdoors and well protected, but never housed. Some planted out in 1900 were marvelous plants, carrying in one case as many as 1,100 heads of bloom. These we will refer to again.

The Boston delegation to the S. A. F. convention left on the 10:45 a. m. express per Boston & Albany Railroad on August 20, and had clear, hot weather with them as a starter. The shade temperature on the preceding day registered 95 degrees, the highest reading of the year.

Mann Bros. have the market pretty much to themselves on Lilium longiflorum this week, with a very steady sale.

Visitors last week were A. Morgan, of Rutherford, N. J.; Charles Sandiford and John Flood, both of Buffalo. Messrs. Sandiford and Flood formerly lived here and are well known to many of the trade. W. N. Craig.

Bettsville, O.—M. W. Walters is adding a lettuce house, 33x80 feet, to his present range.

Holdrege, Neb.—W. E. Davidson & Bros. have just finished the erection of a greenhouse 22 x 100 feet. Emil Fischer of Chicago will have charge of the establishment.

Announcement..

IT will interest the GROWERS and RETAILERS to know that WE, Samuel S. Pennock and Charles E. Meehan, individually, and the Philadelphia Wholesale Flower Market, have spent the best part of the summer forming plans for a CONSOLIDATION. This we have accomplished, the same to take effect about October 1, under the title of the S. S. PENNOCK-MEEHAN CO., their headquarters being located in the

S. S. PENNOCK BUILDING, 1608-10-12-14-16-18 Ludlow Street, PHILADELPHIA.

In making this announcement, the new company desires to call attention to the following solid grounds on which it bases its claims to public patronage:

1. FACILITIES. The largest and most modernly equipped of any wholesale florist establishment in the world. Centrally located, and having at its command an experience of twenty years in knowing how to make the best of these facilities for the benefit of customers.

2. ORGANIZATION. The next most important consideration—developed on practical lines through years of experience—has been brought by selection and elimination as near perfection as possible; and constant vigilance is the watchword in this department, to the end that each employee may by fair but firm treatment show the best that he is capable of, not only for his own sake but for that of his employer and the public—the interests of all being in the long run identical.

3. SERVICE. Great stress is laid on accurate filling and delivery of orders. Telegrams, phones, messages of all kinds, verbal or written, receive the careful attention of competent heads of departments, so that no one need feel any hesitation in forwarding hurry up-orders. The organization and service are so complete that it is almost impossible for any hitch to occur.

4. STOCK. This, of course, governs everything. If the goods are not there, no sales can be made. The Pennock record in this connection—of always having everything and the best of everything—speaks for itself; the Flower Market or Meehan record—which has behind it some of the best growers in this vicinity in addition to careful and shrewd development—also adds its weight.

5. QUALITY. The quality of stock reaching the Philadelphia market is unexcelled, as the awards at the various competitions in New York, Boston, Chicago, and other centers, amply attest. In many lines our growers lead the world.

6. QUANTITY. The enormous shipments of fine flowers that reach Philadelphia every morning render it possible to fill the most exacting order almost any hour of the day or time of the year. If a thing is to be had at all, here is the place to find it.

7. KNOWLEDGE. Last but not least, "knowledge." Knowledge of the customer and his wants, gathered from long experience; also a ready and sympathetic willingness to help him out in emergencies; knowledge of what to send and what not to send; this knowledge is the rarest of all and has been a corner-stone in the building up of the two great businesses under consideration.

8. FINALLY. We feel that by this consolidation we have made a leap of ten years into the future, and in all the important qualifications: in facilities, in equipment, in organization, in stock, in quantity, in quality, in knowledge, and in service, it is at the forefront of twentieth century enterprise, and offers itself confidently to the whole country as the best place, both for the grower to market his products, and the buyer to procure his supply of cut flowers, plants, and florists' supplies of all kinds, and begs to subscribe itself in all sincerity as Greenhouse Heating.

BOILER AND PIPING.

Will you kindly inform me how many lines of 2-inch pipe it will take to heat a greenhouse I am building 16⅔x42 feet, 5½-foot walls, east and west, glass in front wall (south), back boarded up to plate.

I have a steam boiler which is rated 400 horsepower for steam. It has one 2½-inch flow and one 1½-inch return. Would it do to use for hot water heating? A. A. B.

The boiler in question can undoubtedly be used with fair economy and success as a hot water boiler. Hot water heaters usually have the openings for flow and return pipes nearly the same size, and usually considerably larger than for steam. The house in question should be provided with eleven runs of 2-inch pipe arranged as flow and returns.

L. C. C.

PIPE CAPACITY.

I have built two greenhouses 20x160 feet, four feet high under gutter and eleven feet to ridge-pole. They have four flows and five returns each, all 2-inch pipe. Is this enough to heat the houses to 60 degrees with zero outside? B. S.

While it is possible to keep out frost with the piping you have provided, in order that the specified temperature, 60 degrees, may be maintained during zero weather, it will be necessary to add two more runs of pipe to the present equipment. The addition of two more returns in each house is all that will be necessary to be on the safe side; that is, eleven lines of pipe in each house instead of the nine you have already provided.

L. C. C.

PIPES IN LONG HOUSE.

I have built one house 22x100 feet (shed on west end with boiler-room underneath), twelve feet to ridge. I intend to grow lettuce and carnations. The temperature is 38 degrees below zero. What amount of hot water pipe and what size do you recommend? I am going to use a twenty horse-power tubular boiler. What size inlet and outlet ought there to be? I want to use the pipes for steam after I enlarge the plant.

W. M. N.

The house in question can be heated with water under pressure by using a 3½-inch flow pipe carried under the ridge to the distant end of the house, and there divided by three 2-inch branches to supply three coils, each consisting of 1½-inch pipe. Place seven lines of pipe in each coil on the outside walls or under the outside benches, and six lines under the center bench, making twenty returns in all. It will be best to have the openings in the boiler the same size as the flow and returns; if not, make them four inches and bush down. Put the expansion tank up high if you do not use city pressure. L. C. C.

EXPANSION TANK.

In connecting the expansion tank, would it do as well to connect on the bottom of the boiler? I have returns on each side of the boiler, and there is a 1-inch opening at the bottom of the sides. M. W. W.

While it is most desirable to connect the expansion tank to a main return near the point where it enters the boiler, I see no reason why it should not give good satisfaction when connected directly with the boiler, provided the point of contact is below the opening for the returns. L. C. C.

FINDLAY, O.—J. J. Waaland returned August 15 from New York, where he spent two weeks visiting his two brothers, whom he had not seen for several years.

This florists' display room, 10x9 feet, 10 feet high, was designed for the center of a wide salesroom, with three entrance doors, two in front and one to rear section, which enables the florist to reach any part of the interior readily. The octagon front is entirely composed of heavy plate glass, with 2-inch air space between. Large beveled mirrors and white enamel complete the exterior. The interior is divided into two parts by a sliding door of mirrors, both parts and ice chamber being lined with snow-white opal. This ice-box cost when complete $1028.00. The owner will sell this beautiful box packed on board cars at Cleveland, O., for $500.00—one-half cash and balance on approved security. Photographs can be furnished to intending purchasers. Address CHAS. H. WILSON, 606 Jennings Ave., Cleveland, O.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., Henry W. Wood, Richmond, Va.; First Vice-Pres., Charles Burge, Toledo, O.; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland. The 25th annual meeting will be held at New York City, June, 1907.

VISITED CHICAGO: John Hume, of Port Hope, Ont.

THE French crop of Golden Self-Blanching celery seed is reported short as usual.

THE Iowa Seed Co., Des Moines, Ia., was incorporated August 9 with $100,000 capital stock.

REPORTS from the sections where pea threshing is under way indicate that a fairly good crop has been harvested.

BULB ōrders are coming in well, but the trade is badly hampered by the scarcity of 7 x 9 Harrisii and large size freesias.

THE forehanded seedsman now is giving thought to the cuts for his 1907 catalogue. Stock wood cuts no longer serve the purpose for up-to-date books.

THE Wholesale Seedsmen's League purposes to keep up the fight on free seeds. W. W. Smith, who was the seedsmen's Washington representative during the last session of congress, has been retained to conduct the publicity end of the campaign and is doing good work in both country and city papers.

A. C. KENDEL makes a good point in an interview with a Cleveland reporter, when he says of congressional free seeds: "Even more opposed to the practice than the seed dealers are the country storekeepers, with whom the seed trade is an important item of their business, or would be if it were not for the thousands of packets mailed free by congressmen."

BEANS are not yet past the danger line. Good guessers say, however, that full deliveries are likely to be made on some of the varieties.

THE American crop of radish seed is said to be in good shape. This will in a measure make up for the serious shortage reported from England and France.

FRANKLIN ELY, representing the Henry F. Michell Co., Philadelphia, was in Rochester last week looking over the aster situation. Except Snowdrift and Queen of the Market, nothing is in evidence as far as flowers are concerned. All stock was planted late on account of the season, and it will be the middle of next month before asters will be in their glory. At the present time, the outlook is for a sum seed crop of these flowers.

THE H. E. Fiske Seed Co. is a new concern incorporated at Boston, with a capital stock of $30,000. Purbot H. Stratton, Harry E. Fiske and D. W. Henry are named as directors.

THE onion set situation has about adjusted itself. It is generally admitted that the crop is short; that the product, especially at Chicago, is of good quality; that the conditions will warrant an advance of prices, and that they who sold early for future delivery will have hard work making good. Some of the larger growers who were hit hard by unfavorable spring weather, and who had hoped that the favorable conditions that came afterwards would help them out at harvest time, are disappointed. A scarcity of what are termed pickle onions will help to keep up the price of whites.

A PLEASANT OUTING.

James Vick's Sons, of Rochester, N. Y., entertained their employees, one hundred in number, at a picnic Saturday, Aug. 11. A chartered car took the excursionists to Glen Haven, and after a pleasant ride on Irondequoit bay, landed at Newport. The hotel was open for all, and dancing, sports, etc., occupied the time until dinner. This was served up in epicurean style, and was relished by the crowd. More games and sports and launch rides on the clear, bright water of the bay followed. Among the most notable of the guests were Joseph Fuller, called Uncle Joe by those who know him well and admire him most, and Fred Fisher, two of the veteran seedsmen of this part of the country and of America. Both have been with Vick's house since its inception. Mr. Fuller superintends the flower seed department, and what Fred Fisher doesn't know about asters would not take long to tell.

No more ideal spot could have been chosen for an outing. The weather was perfect and the scenery magnificent. Close to the heart of nature, and with all other necessary combinations, the folks had a good time, for which Messrs. Vick, King and Fonda were largely responsible.

SWEET PEAS MIXING.

Watkins & Simpson, the well-known sweet pea specialists of London, England, write as follows:

"We notice a paragraph in the REVIEW of July 26 headed 'Sweet Peas Mixing.' One of your clients is not quite clear as to whether sweet peas of different colors grown altogether get inoculated. We think we might endeavor to explain to him through your columns that sweet pea flowers, as soon as they are fully open, have been already fertilized by their own pollen, and there is no likelihood of the bees or other insects having brought in foreign pollen. As all sweet pea hybridizers know, any bloom they require to fertilize they have to do in the bud state, and open the keel of the bud some time before it is in full bloom, and put the foreign pollen they require to fertilize with on the stigma of the seed-bearing plant."

No crop improvement is reported from the California onion seed growers; anywhere from ten per cent to a full delivery, depending on the variety, is what may be expected.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Prof. L. C. Corbett of the department of agriculture has just returned from a three weeks' trip in Texas.

NEW SWEET PEAS.

Watkins & Simpson, the London seedsmen, who make a specialty of sweet peas, have a set of four new sorts to send out the coming season. All are descended from Gladys Unwin, which has given such universal satisfaction, and are said to be as fixed in character as is that variety. The novelties are named and described as follows:

Nora Unwin takes its place easily in the front rank of whites, far outdistancing Dorothy Eckford, which was hitherto considered the finest white. This variety has the same bold, wavy standard as Gladys Unwin.

Mrs. Alfred Watkins is a superb pink of Gladys Unwin type, the same pale pink color as the old Princess Beatrice, which was thought so much of when it came out many years ago; but the flowers of Mrs. Alfred Watkins are so much larger, and have the beautiful, bold, wavy standard of Gladys Unwin. It will be one of the best market varieties for cut bloom.

Frank Dolby is a lovely pale blue, the same shade as Lady Grisel Hamilton but much larger, and, being also bred from Gladys Unwin, it has the same bold, wavy standard. It is the largest and finest pale blue sweet pea.

E. J. Castle is a magnificent addition to the Gladys Unwin class, with the same large flowers and bold, wavy standard of its parent. It is somewhat lighter than John Ingman, but with rather more salmon shading in the standard, and has a lovely effect.

These varieties each produce 70 to 75 per cent of four blooms to a stalk.

Lafayette, Ind.—B. F. Shilling is planning to erect two new houses, each 20x100, for vegetables.

New Sweet Pea—Burpee's "EARLIEST WHITE."

Comes into full bloom in forty-five days after the seed is planted in the open ground. The dwarf plants, sixteen to twenty inches high, are clad in rich, dark-green foliage, and carry a profusion of the pure white flowers, borne upon strong stems six to eight inches long. Each stem has two or three of the fully expanded, well-formed flowers, of good size and placed close together.

From seed planted on May 18th last Burpee's Earliest White was in full bloom on July 1st, while Mont Blanc, planted the same day, was showing only a few buds. It is also wondrously profuse-blooming.

Burpee's Earliest White is not only as extremely early, but also just as hardy as the famous pink-and-white Burpee's Earliest of All. It has black seed, and is really the only clear white Sweet Pea that has. This insures a better stand, stronger and more thrifty plants.

Burpee's Earliest White will be welcomed by amateurs everywhere, both on account of its hardiness and because pure white Sweet Peas can now be had so quickly from seed sown in the open ground.

Burpee's Earliest White will be welcomed by florists for forcing, because there is no other variety so quick-growing or sure-cropping, excepting only The Reselected Burpee's Earliest of All, described below. Like the latter, the plants under glass begin to bloom freely when only twelve inches high and continue to grow and flower profusely until, when six or eight feet tall, they reach the top of the greenhouse; the plants can then be cut back, if desired, and will make an equally vigorous second growth. ☞All florists know, of course, that the regular varieties of Tall Sweet Peas are of no value whatever for forcing, if early flowers are desired.☜

Burpee's Earliest White is sold only in our original sealed packets, and only direct to planters—none to other seedsmen. The seed is all hand-picked and every seed should grow. Per pkt. (40 seeds), 25c, less one-third; 5 pkts. for 75c net. Half-size packets: Per pkt. (20 seeds), 15c; 2 pkts. for 25c; 10 pkts. for 75c net.

SWEET PEA—BURPEE'S "EARLIEST OF ALL."

Reselected—Extreme Early.

Mr. Gould, the originator of Burpee's Earliest of All, has continued to develop the earliness and dwarf habit, until in this Reselected Extreme Early we have a strain as much earlier than Earliest of All as that variety is ahead of Extra Early Blanche Ferry, which again is earlier than the original Blanche Ferry. The plants of this new strain come into full flower when only twelve inches high and three to four weeks in advance of the first parent variety.

In our Trial Grounds, when the standard varieties of Sweet Peas all came into flower quite early (from spring-sown seed), this Extreme Early was in bloom on June 3, the regular strain of Earliest of All on June 9, and Extra Early Blanche Ferry on June 17. Under less favorable conditions the difference in the period of flowering is even more marked. For winter flowering in the greenhouse it is the VERY BEST of the popular pink-and-white type of flowers. Mr. Thos. Gould has grown this strain exclusively for us, and the originator's seed of this Reselected can be had only under our registered trade-mark seal. The selection is made each season and hence this strain is being constantly improved.

Per oz., 10c; one-fourth lb., 30c; per lb., $1.00.

KANSAS CITY, MO.—Jacob Tobler is adding two 100-foot houses to his plant.

WASHINGTON, IA.—Clyde Young, who started in the business several years ago with E. C. Keck, has bought a greenhouse plant at North Milwaukee, Wis.

I WANT to thank the REVIEW for the many orders it has brought me.—S. J. MCMICHAEL, Findlay, O.

PAXTON, ILL.—Addems, Morgan & Co. are completing two new houses, making five altogether in this firm's range. They will have 6,500 square feet of bench space when the additions are finished.

DO not keep your "I" on firms to see them grow up, or to see if they are full-grown, but just glance around at the Enterprising Florists' Supply House, with everything new for the trade.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., MARCH 22, 1906.

MR. E. V. SIDELL,

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.

Dear Sir:—Having used your "powered charcoal" in the composition of soil for Violets last season, we are very much pleased with the result.

Having used it in place of "wood ash," we consider its fertilizing properties more beneficial in many ways, and the cost much less.

Its chemical action on the soil is marvelous, being lasting on account of stirring up the other fertilizing elements, absorbing their gases, and again giving them off, for the nourishment of plants.

We highly recommend the use of charcoal powder to all interested in growing Violets.

Very truly yours,

THOS. DEVOY & SON.

READING, PA.—Edgar H. Beears and son Claude, of Rosedale, jointly celebrated their birthdays recently. The father is 41 years old and the son 20. A family dinner was given in honor of the event, and the two men received a number of presents.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.—A shipment of 7,000 orchids arrived August 18 on the transport Thomas, consigned to President Roosevelt. They are a present to him from Manuel de Yriarte, a wealthy Filipino planter. When Miss Alice Roosevelt was in the Philippines some time ago she visited this planter's conservatories and mentioned her father's love for orchids. The magnificent collection sent to the president is the result.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

August has treated the trade very well; there has been just enough business to keep them from worrying about the heat, and with the exception of occasional days, about enough flowers to do the work, with prices low enough to suit everybody. The only thing that was short was good white asters, and as carnations were out of commission the shortage was more noticeable. If white was scarce, however, pink was plentiful. Good, bad, and rotten was about the way you would classify them, and the wonder is how some growers have the nerve to send some of the stock into the wholesale houses; however, it usually reaches the place where it belongs, as no one will buy it.

Kaiserins, Richmonds, Beauties, valley, lilies, gladioli and asters are the stock in trade, with plenty of all to go around; it might be in place to say that there are enough gladioli and asters to go around several times, and then some. Carnation plants do not seem so plentiful. As usual, the Pittsburg Cut Flower Co. reports its growers already sold out; the same report comes from the east, that many who are usually sellers are buying this season.

Various Notes.

Harry Barnard, who was a visitor at the Pittsburg Rose & Carnation Co., says they have the finest lot of Killarney roses he ever has seen.

L. I. Neff has been cutting a fine lot of lilies, about as good as the stock at Easter.

Julius Ludwig and family are at Atlantic City. He will be missed from the Pittsburg delegation to the convention.

Fred Burki offers his apology for missing the convention. A real estate deal will monopolize him during the convention week.

John Dengler, one of Frank Faulk's assistants, is camping with the Lotus Club at Cochranton, Pa. Last week they sent him a communication fifteen feet long, signed by almost every one who knew him. Every name had an appropriate line, such as "I hope you never come back"—John Smith.

Miss E. B. Maxwell, of Wilkinsburg, with a party of friends, has just completed an automobile trip to Conneaut and return.

M. F. Stafford, of the south side, has just returned from two weeks at Atlantic City.

Randolph & McClements have purchased about seven acres of ground in one of the best locations in the east end, and will proceed to erect a block of houses at once, principally for palms, ferns, and decorative stock; this was made necessary by their lease expiring on the Schenley Park greenhouses.

Hoo-Hoo.

Owensboro, Ky.—The Nanz Floral Co. has been formed to take over the wholesale and retail business of C. G. Nanz, at 1007 Walnut street.

Garrettsville, O.—S. C. Templin will erect a large addition to his range of houses this fall. The new buildings will be used for growing lettuce, for which Mr. Templin has a large trade.

The Market.

We have had a week of extremely warm weather, and consequently there has been a heavy cut of everything in the flower line, with the possible exception of roses. Asters, which are usually the most popular flowers at this time, are overplentiful. I have never seen them offered in such large quantities at such low prices. In quality they are up to the mark. The only problem involved is that there are too many grown for the demand.

There is a temporary falling off in carnations. Many of our growers are changing their houses at this time, and there has not been an oversupply, a fact, especially noticeable in the better sorts. A slight rise in price might also be noted. The growers have advanced their rates, to the stores about 5 cents per dozen, on the greater part of the stock.

Lilies of all kinds are of slow sale. Amaryllises can be bought at any price, and Lilium album and L. rubrum are being offered to the stores by the Japanese growers at ruinous prices. Several large batches of valley are in now, and they meet with a fair demand. Sweet peas are of short stem and also short demand. They are getting poor since we have had such warm weather.

Other kinds of hardy stock are well out of bloom. Gladioli, dahlias and coreopsis are practically over for the season. Cosmos has made its appearance, and is being used quite extensively in the decoration of shop windows. Business is quiet, but all signs point to a revival in the near future.

Various Notes.

D. Raymond, of San Jose, is in town for a few days. He reports business well up to the mark.

Thorsted & Co., of Fruitvale, have finished changing their carnation houses. Their stock has made a heavy growth and gives splendid prospects for a good cut in the near future.

The Society Hortensia, of Alameda county, has had several meetings at the floral establishment of H. Gresens, Alameda.

R. D. Hammond has gone on a month's trip to Portland, Ore.

A visit through the violet beds in the neighborhood of Ocean View shows most of the patches in healthy, growing condition. There is very little red spider in this locality, and the finest flowers are usually produced here.

Rolleri & Co. are busy planting Brides and Maids in the new nursery on San Bruno road, recently leased from L. Bonneau.

Prof. Hugo de Vries, the famous botanist from the University of Amsterdam, has much to say in defense of Luther Burbank, who was recently attacked by an English botanist. Dr. de Vries spent much of his time while he was on this coast during the summer in visiting and conferring with Burbank, and had a fine opportunity of watching his work at Santa Rosa. G.

LANDSCAPE GARDENING.

Sidewalk Trees.

It is plain, from the inquiries being made by people having large frontages on public highways, as well as from various improvement clubs in the neighborhoods of our large cities, that there is much interest being developed in the way of beautifying our public sidewalks, and considerable planting will undoubtedly be done this coming season. Up to this time there has been but little co-operation between the owners of large tracts of land, and much confusion has resulted in the absence of fixed ideas regarding the various suitable trees, as well as the care required after planting.

Ignorance Causes Waste of Money.

The majority of the people who plant are woefully ignorant regarding the care required to get a tree started so that it will in a measure take care of itself after a certain time. Much money has been wasted in promiscuous planting and making no preparations for caring for the planted stock. In this section of California it is absolutely necessary that a tree should be taken care of for the first season at least, or until it gets well established in the ground. Commercialism is usually the dominant factor in the entire proceeding. The owner orders so many trees of such a size as he wants and gives the order to the lowest bidder. He probably has them planted by the person who will do the work the cheapest—just as he would order a fence built. The trees are covered up and no attention is paid to them and as the result of a shortness of moisture in the summer usually about fifty per cent succumb. The following season he probably will order trees for the ones that died, which are usually replaced by a much smaller size, making a miserable collection of freak specimens. This applies probably more to civic societies and improvement clubs than it does to private planters, but the percentage in all cases is greatly in the majority, and this accounts for the great number of poorly planted sidewalks which are often the point of ridicule from our eastern visitors.

Better Choice of Trees Needed.

Californians are proverbially short-sighted. In their ornamental plantings the idea of making arrangements for the proper caring for sidewalk trees for at least a season after they are planted seems never to enter their heads. We are young in that line of work, and nature has been so prodigal with her gifts in the floral line that due regard for lasting effects is rarely taken into consideration.

When a proposition for street planting is entertained, either by a society organized for the purpose or by a number of property owners, there should always be a landscape gardener within call, for of all the queer ideas ever broached by the dear public, the enthusiastic lot owners who honestly wish to improve their localities certainly take the cake.

At a meeting of a city improvement

NOW READY

Narcissus Paper White Grandiflora and White Roman Hyacinths

We offer the finest bulbs for immediate delivery, as follows:

Narcissus Paper White Grandiflora, finest quality bulbs, 13 cen. and up, 1250 bulbs to the case, $11.25 per case; less quantities at $1.00 per 100. Paper White Grandiflora Narcissus is always a money-maker. Plant at once for earliest crop, which is the most profitable.

White Roman Hyacinths, finest quality bulbs, 12 to 15 cen., about 1800 bulbs to the case, $2.50 per 100; $23.00 per 1000.

Freesia Refracta Alba, finest Bermuda-grown bulbs, ½-inch up, $7.50 per 1000.

Bermuda Buttercup Oxalis, $1.00 per 100; $7.50 per 1000.

Lilium Harrisii, 6 to 7-inch bulbs, 335 to the case, $13.50 per case; less quantities, $5.00 per 100. Larger size bulbs all sold out.

club attended by the writer a few months ago, in which great enthusiasm was shown by the members, there were suggested for the planting of several miles of sidewalks the following trees: Ash, Monterey cypress, weeping willow, Acacia mollissima, Brahea filamentosa, Phœnix Canariensis and several varieties of gum trees. Surely there is a virgin field here for a landscape architect, and although we have many good men in that line in California, the public has up to this time not felt the necessity of calling on them for advice in many cases, and much valuable time and money have been wasted by the promiscuous planting of such assortments of trees as I have just mentioned. PORTLAND, ORE.

Further Wanderings.

The cordial reception which greeted our visits everywhere inspired us to explore still further, and not until this month were we aware of the large number of greenhouse establishments inside the city limits. We are not showing partiality or passing up any one, and where the street-car and automobile do not traverse we go afoot.

Being too closely confined to everyday duties during the busy season we were prevented at an earlier date from calling on Mr. Sibson at Sellwood, one of the latest additions to the growers' ranks. It is not quite two years since Mr. Sibson started to build, and he now has three 200-foot houses, four 100-foot houses, besides the propagating house, conceded by all to be the finest built range of glass in Portland, and we are going to watch it grow. We asked for the foreman and were introduced to Alfred Woodington, who came here from Chicago in May to take charge of the place, and he volunteered all the information sought. Roses are a strong feature, and Mr. Woodington has all the houses planted with the most popular varieties, best suited to our trade and climate. Richmond and Kate Moulton, new here and occupying two of the largest houses, will be put to a thorough test. All the accessories required by a model establishment are seen here, such as a miniature Windsor Castle for the owner and a new cottage for the foreman, spacious packing houses and, in fact, a suitable place for everything. The extent of the grounds is twenty-five acres, all planted to hardy stock, with roses predominating, hence the fit title, the Sibson Rose Nurseries.

Only a block away is Peter Johnson, who moved here a year ago, and who has more room to expand than he formerly had in Albina. Peter sees more money in carnations, and grows for the wholesale trade.

After leaving here, we indulged in a little physical culture; slid down the embankment of the Willamette river, swam across and climbed up Carson heights to say "how do you do" to Walch Bros. Here is a well-kept place of 12,000 feet of glass. While located between two cemeteries, this firm does not cater to that class of trade, but grows the choicest only in plants and flowers, disposing of its stock to the retail stores.

On our way home we made the acquaintance of R. Riegelman, who owns 10,000 feet of glass on the Macadam road. He was celebrating his seventy-first birthday building a new greenhouse. He thought he needed a tonic and asked us to join him. Miscellaneous stuff is grown here, and is disposed of through various channels by the two faithful sons. Several neatly kept flower beds give the place a most inviting appearance. H. J. M.

DENVER.

The Market.

The last week has been a satisfactory one for midsummer; in fact, all seem to agree that almost every week there is an advance over the corresponding week a year ago. July showed the best business for some years, and trade has been fully as good as can be expected all summer. The second crop of American Beauties has commenced to come in from a few of the growers. While there are few long-stemmed ones, the short and medium are good. Brides and Maids are not yet up to the standard, and first-class stock finds ready sale. Chatenays are good, as well as Liberty and Richmond. Carnations have seen better days, and the stock received seems to be growing smaller every day.

Asters are in large supply, and take the place of carnations, the purple and white being particularly good, while pink is small and short-stemmed. The prices are from 60 cents to $1 per hundred. Gladioli are fine, and sweet peas are plentiful, bringing but 5 cents per bunch retail.

Various Notes.

James F. Crossen died at La Junta, Colo., August 17. He formerly worked for H. W. Wipperman, of Brooklyn, and later worked for Herman Kuhn, of New York city. Coming west, he was with the Park Floral Co. until about six months ago, when he went into business for himself at La Junta, Colo., at which place he died.

B. E. Gillis, of the Park Floral Co., and W. W. Wilmore, of the dahlia farm, are at Colorado Springs this week acting as judges for the El Paso County Horticultural Society, the former as judge for sweet peas, the latter for dahlias.

The Park Floral Co. had a nice lot of valley which has cleaned up well. Dahlias are now seen at their best in all colors, bringing $1 per hundred and retailing for 35 cents per dozen.

W. C. Walters is cutting some fine asters, having perhaps the largest supply in town.

A. Gude and W. F. Gude, of Washington, D. C., were visitors last week, on their way to the southern part of the state, where they have extensive mining interests. They were driven about the city and out to the dahlia farm of W. W. Wilmore by J. A. Valentine. They were much impressed by the immense number of dahlias grown, as well as the varieties and excellent quality. They expect to return by way of Dayton, and to attend the convention.

A. H. Bush has been off on a fishing trip, and since his return was around town showing results that indicate considerable skill and some luck. E. S. K.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Pres., Orlando Harrison, Berlin, Md.; Vice-Pres., J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Ia.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester; Treas. C. L. Yates, Rochester. The 33d annual convention will be held at Detroit, Mich., June, 1907.

THE Dansville, N. Y., nurseries report a good growing season.

SOUTHERN nurserymen are finding a heavy demand for citrus fruit trees in Cuba.

THE nursery that has no frost proof storage and packing shed is not up to the times.

THE Southern Nurserymen's Association, in session at Lookout Mountain last week, adopted a resolution condemning the free distribution of seeds by the government.

JACKSON & PERKINS Co., Newark, N. Y., has been incorporated with $.00,000 capital stock. The incorporators named are Charles H. Perkins, George C. Perkins and E. A. Miller.

T. C. Thurlow & Co., West Newbury, Mass., say that they now have on trial over 600 varieties of peonies, and in the same breath add, "which is altogether too many."

GRIFFING BROS. Co., Jacksonville, Fla., use Crimson Rambler as a stock for hybrid perpetual and tea roses, not the least of its advantages being the ease with which it strikes from cuttings.

THE Georgia Experiment Station has issued a bulletin entitled "The Peachtree Borer," by Hugh N. Starnes, dealing exhaustively with a subject of much importance to the orchardists of the state.

GEO. E. KESSLER, the landscape gardener who designed the Kansas City park system and the St. Louis world's fair grounds, has been engaged to plan the changes in the park system at Cincinnati.

HERR SPATH, of Berlin, fifth head of the firm in direct line, owns the largest nurseries in Europe, 800 acres in extent, with a staff of 500 hands. The establishment is decentralized and managed on the basis of individual responsibility and with that thoroughness so characteristic of the German nation.

SOUTHERN NURSERYMEN MEET.

The eighth annual meeting of the Southern Nurserymen's Association was held August 15 and 16 at Lookout Inn, Chattanooga, Tenn., and was attended by about 100 nurserymen and their wives. The election of officers took place on the morning of the second day, and those put in nomination by the committee were unanimously elected. John A. Young, of Greensboro, N. C., was made president; he was last year's vice-president. C. N. Griffin, of Jacksonville, Fla., is the new vice-president, and C. T. Smith was re-elected secretary-treasurer. The convention voted to meet in Richmond, Va., in August of next year.

The first session of the Chattanooga meeting was taken up with President Orlando Harrison's opening address, papers by J. A. Young and others, and discussions of questions brought up. President Harrison urged co-operation among nurserymen, and said that a uniform system of grading was what the trade needed worst. Mr. Young spoke on "The Retail Nurserymen's Success or Failure." He touched on the question of free seed distribution by the government, and expressed his hope that the practice can be abolished if it is agitated enough.

The committee appointed to deal with the free seed question drew up resolutions condemning the practice. A committee on legislation was appointed, to co-operate with similar committees of other associations in the matter.

The question of whether the Alabama immigration law should be adopted in other states was covered by Herbert Chase, of Huntsville, Ala., and a discussion of the matter followed. Taking negro laborers from one state to another under contract was condemned. Prof. R. I. Smith, of Atlanta, told of the work being done by other societies toward the adoption of a uniform tag, and discussed the question of state nurserymen's licenses.

J. C. Miller, of the auditing committee, reported $254.43 on hand, and Treasurer Smith said that collections would bring the sum up to $300.

HOLLYHOCKS.

Seeds for bloom next year should be sown by the middle of July, and when transplanted to the blooming bed the seedlings should be given, for best effect, a space of not less than eighteen inches each way. Hollyhocks are perennial and fairly hardy, but the finest blooms are borne on young plants, so it is better to start a new lot each season. They thrive in any good garden soil, but appreciate reasonable fertilization with fine rotted manure and clean cultivation throughout the growing season. The finest strain has been developed by Chater, the English nurseryman, and his varieties are everywhere offered by seedsmen. They come in colors, from snow white to all conceivable shades of red and yellow, and include ashy grays and maroon blacks. Varieties differ in vigor and stature, but the average height is about four feet.

These highly developed hollyhocks are quite subject to a destructive imported fungus disease known as hollyhock rust, which often attacks the plants just before blooming, causing the leaves to brown and wither, and hinders the development of the flowers. Bordeaux mixture, freely applied before infection, has proved quite efficient in staying the trouble, but is highly objectionable, as it disfigures the foliage and blooms. Hollyhock rust has, however, either diminished in virulence or additional vigor has been bred in the good varieties, as there appears to be less uncertainty in their culture now than ten years ago.

Several years ago Peter Henderson & Co. introduced a strain of early and continuous blooming varieties. W. Van Fleet says that on the trial grounds of the Rural New-Yorker he has repeatedly grown this race and regards it as of the highest value to those who do not care to risk the uncertainties of a year's growth before blooming. While perennial under good protection, they flower so promptly from spring-sown seed, showing blooms by July or August and continuing until frost, that they may very properly be treated as annuals. There is a great range of color, and the blooms vary in different plants from single to fully double, both with and without the usual flat outer guard petals. In rich soil the plants are of surprisingly thrifty growth, the main spike rising over eight feet high, remaining a long time in bloom, and is succeeded by many branches from the base, thus furnishing a succession of flowers until growth ceases. While very fine for cutting and garden decoration the flowers have scarcely the finish of the choicer perennial varieties. As they furnish such a great quantity of bloom in a comparatively short growing period they need a plentiful supply of nourishment and should be freely watered in dry weather.

BLOOMINGTON, ILL.—The Phœnix Nursery Co. is having three large iron frame houses built.

MACON, GA.—The State Horticultural Society is hard at work endeavoring to get a bill passed establishing a state immigration bureau.

NEW ORLEANS.

On the instruction of Vice-President C. W. Eichling, of the Society of Southern Florists, J. Steckler, treasurer, called a meeting of the local members for Thursday, August 16. The most important point was to come to an understanding about the time which would be the most proper to call the first convention. After a close discussion on the subject it was decided to have it on November 15, provided special reduced rates on the railroads could be obtained. A committee of three, H. Papworth, J. Steckler and J. H. Menard, was appointed to confer with the railroads.

Charles Eble made a motion, which was seconded by many members, to issue a general invitation to florists, without any distinction between north or south, to be present at our first convention, this invitation to be distributed among the florists by some of our local members when at the convention in Dayton.

Business is dull. There will be no monthly meeting of our society before October. The chrysanthemum crop seems to be promising, from different reports so far. The quantity planted is large.

M. M. L.

INDIANAPOLIS.

There is not much to report this week, business being very dull. All who can are taking their vacations and getting ready for another season, which will be on hand before we realize it.

The Tomlinson Hall market shows the effect of the summer season, so many of the stands being unoccupied. In a few weeks all this will change, and the market will be as busy as ever.

The aster disease from all reports is worse than it has been; several florists have lost nearly all they planted.

The next stop is Dayton. "I don't know where I'm going, but I'm on my way" Daytonwards, where I hope to meet many friends and make new ones. This should be the largest convention the S. A. F. ever has held. Here's luck to it.

MABELLE

New Pink Carnation for 1907

COLOR—A peculiar shade of lovely pink, with a faint yellowish cast; several shades lighter than the Lawson. Unlike most pinks, the brightest sun does not injure the color.

SIZE—3 to 4 inches in diameter when established.

ODOR—Pleasing, but not strong.

STEMS—Invariably strong, but always graceful, ranging from 12 to 30 inches during the season.

HABIT, ETC.—A very quick, act ve grower, making specimen plants in a short time, even from late cuttings On account of its rapid growth, requires supporting very soon after benching. Gets away rapidly, blooms early and gives long stems right from the start.

PRODUCTIVENESS—Prodigious is the best word we know of to use here. It is the most incessant bloomer, early and late, we have ever grown.

Stock limited. Delivery January 5 to 10 and later. Price, $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

TROUBLE WITH ASTERS.

Will you please tell me what the trouble is with these aster plants I send? They have burnt tips on the petals and leaves, and rusty stems, and keep dying off all the time. I think it is from the scorching hot weather we had two weeks ago. They also have been bothered badly with the black aster beetle. There has been no end to hand-picking them off. I used Paris green, one teaspoonful to ten quarts of water. Can that be the trouble? The REVIEW states one teaspoonful to two gallons is safe to use. Would you advise me, for I always like to save seed from my own flowers?

J. V.

According to our experience, you are correct in believing that your trouble is due to dry weather. We have a block of late asters on a sandy, elevated piece of ground, that are affected in a similar way. Asters must have plenty of moisture if good results are expected. We believe most of the diseases they are affected with are due to lack of it.

We have had no experience with the black aster beetle, but should advise spraying with Paris green in the proportions mentioned, once a week from the time the plants are established in June, for there seems no doubt but what they breed among the plants. We should not advise saving seed from these weakened plants, but when the stock is clean, as that is a good beginning in growing fine asters.

WARNING—It has come to my positive knowledge that certain irresponsible parties have sold ordinary Freesia bulbs for Fischer's Grand Freesia Purity. For the benefit of those who have bought Purity not direct from me, I will give the names of the dealers who are selling Purity this season. They are: Arthur T. Boddington, of New York; Peter Henderson & Co., of New York; Stumpp & Walter Co., of New York; Vaughan's Seed Store, of New York and Chicago; W. W. Rawson & Co., of Boston; Henry F. Michell Co., of Philadelphia, and Hosea Waterer, of Philadelphia. Anybody who bought Freesia Purity bulbs from any other source did not get what they paid for.

NORTHERN TEXAS.

This week does not bring a very favorable report from some parts of this section; continued rains have damaged crops greatly. Cotton, the staple crop, is suffering from repeated rains, until some predict almost a total loss. In a trip through Oklahoma, I saw the rivers out of their banks and almost completely covering both corn and cotton, and the fear is that the crops will rot before the water subsides.

In our line, stock is looking well. Carnations are in first-class shape on high ground, where the water can drain; but in the low-lands they are not looking so well, as the hot sun coming after a rain almost cooks them. Roses in the field are doing well, and will commence soon to increase their blooming. Vincas, snapdragons, and that class of plants are in full bloom and are getting better every day. Funeral work is nearly all that is doing just now. All the places I have visited show marked improvement in cleaning up, and the progressive man has everything in readiness for the planting season.

The Texas Nursery Co. has almost completed its new range, and it adds quite a bit to the appearance of the place.

H. O. Hannah and wife, of Sherman, who have been on their vacation at Sulphur, Okla., have returned to their home looking in fine health for the season's work.

NARCISSUS.

SPRINGFIELD, OHIO.

As a forerunner of the Dayton convention, numerous delegations from distant eastern and southern points have arrived in Springfield a day in advance (Monday) and are visiting the extensive greenhouses of the Good & Reese Co., the McGregor Bros. Co. and other plant-growing establishments. This affords to members of the S. A. F. an opportunity of seeing the sources of supply from which they have drawn for many years past and more fully realizing the importance of this market in the shipment of plants.

The Leedle Floral Co. is erecting two new houses 20x152 feet and a lean-to 10x105 feet. The space gained will be devoted to the housing of rose plants.

GE DALE.

EL PASO, ILL.—The El Paso Carnation Co. has just completed a new house 30x100, and has most of it planted. The range is steam heated, from two forty horse-power boilers. The transportation facilities are excellent at this firm's place; two railroads unload supplies at its doors. C. L. W. Snyder, the manager, says they expect to build two more houses next year, for lettuce and other vegetables. Onion culture will be a specialty.

NO SCIENCE, BUT LOTS OF PRACTICAL COMMON SENSE

THE FIRST EDITION WAS SOLD OUT SO QUICKLY THAT

Several Hundred Orders Could not be Filled

"I have several times been consulted by those who would make a beginning in the Florists' business. In each case I have said that the first step is to subscribe for a Trade Paper, and the next to procure a copy of The Florists' Manual."—J. A. VALENTINE, Pres. Park Floral Co., Denver, Colo.

No dry-as-dust botanical classifications, but tells you just how to produce marketable plants and cut flowers in the best and cheapest way.

TELLS you just what you want to know about every plant that there is any money in for a Commercial Florist.

Treats of over 200 subjects and is freely illustrated with fine half-tone engravings.

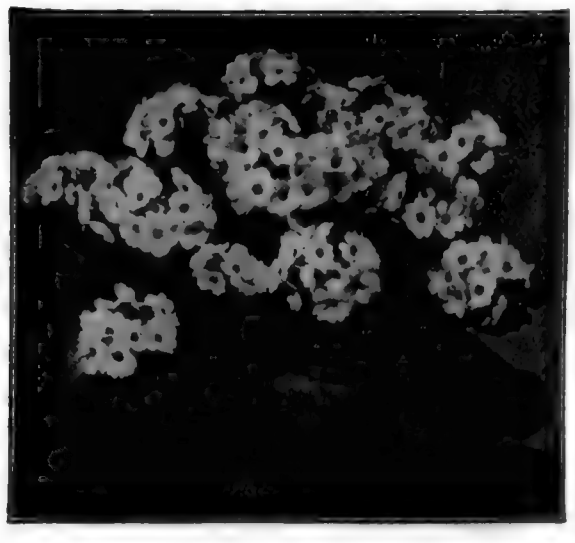
The Market.

Business here is practically at a standstill. Asters, gladioli, roses and dahlias are coming in large quantities. So far prices have run fairly well, with the exception of roses. These can be bought at one's own price.

Carnations are being housed now, and the popular varieties in this section are the new pink Enchantress, Lawson and Lady Bountiful. Enchantress has proved the best paying proposition in this locality and is being planted more extensively than ever. Sweet peas are still coming in, but on account of poor climatic conditions are of poor quality; sales are nothing to brag of.

Various Notes.

Keller Bros. are going into herbaceous stock on a great scale. They find, like other concerns, that there is a large and ever increasing demand for this class of goods and have got up a stock of all the most popular sorts. Mike Keller is enjoying himself in Canada on a well earned vacation.



Fred Vick, of Vick & Hill, and Charles Vick, of James Vick's Sons, are attending the Dayton convention.

George Hart, our only cut flower commission man, has become the possessor of a new heir, and a male one at that, so that there are chances for the cut flower man to dispose of his goods after George has joined the ethereal crowd. Mother and baby are both doing well.

Omaha, Neb.—The annual picnic of the Omaha Florists' Club was held Thursday, August 16, at Krug's park. Lunch was served at 6 p. m. The afternoon and evening were pleasantly spent by the florists who attended and their families.

Muncie, Ind.—Prizes have just been awarded in a novel contest instituted last spring by the Muncie Floral Co. for the most beautiful porch-box. Cash prizes of $10 and $5 had been offered by the company. The city was divided into four districts, and the best two in each district got the prizes. William Bradley, of Elwood, and John Leach, of Hartford City, acted as judges.

When You Go to Philadelphia

AND DREER'S PLACE AT RIVERTON, DON'T FAIL TO SEE THE

SKINNER IRRIGATION SYSTEM

in operation, and ask their opinion of it. The first and best system for either inside or outside work.

MR. C. W. SKINNER, Troy, O. Dear Sir—The enclosed cut shows the Skinner Mechanical Watering System at work under a pressure of 60 pounds or over. It shows a very fine spray like a mist. The perforated pipe working on a brass union can be turned in any direction and thus everything is watered evenly. It never bakes the ground and waters much more evenly than would be possible in hand watering. In fact, I don't see how it could be improved on. We are watering some three acres outside and will fit up a range of glass for inside watering. Will report later. Some of the market gardens around here are watering 5 acres and are well pleased. Very truly, T. C. JOY, Nashville, Tenn., Aug. 20, 1906.

MR. C. W. SKINNER, Troy, O. Dear Sir—Your system of irrigation installed on our gardens three years ago has given us entire satisfaction, bringing us $300.00 a year more than previous years, which alone would more than pay for the entire system. For the last two years we have been putting out cabbage three weeks earlier than usual and both years have been caught in several freezes with temperature of 20 degrees, but with the aid of the Skinner System, using warm water, pumping it all night, we saved our crop from total loss while our neighboring gardens lost entire crops valued from $200.00 to $500.00, while we gained the profit through the Skinner system. Also tomatoes, beans, squash, were all protected. We don't believe we could grow a crop of lettuce indoors without the Skinner System. In short we would not do without it for four times the cost. We will gladly show any one interested your System at our gardens. Yours truly, ARNOLD SCHMID & SON, Nashville, Tenn., Aug. 20, 1906.

WESTERN LEADERS

GRUBS IN SOIL.

In an experience of forty years at the nursery business I had never been troubled by the white grub-worm until last year. Can some of you nurserymen or florists tell me how to rid the soil of them? They destroyed hundreds of aster plants for me last season, and are doing the same thing this year. They eat the roots, and also the bark, from the stems of the plants beneath the soil. They not only destroy young plants, but plants which are full-grown and in bloom.

A year ago this spring the ground was heavily manured with barnyard manure, but not this spring, except with a surface coating of cow manure between the rows, the manure being fresh and not supposed to be infested with grubs or their larvæ.

I have lost by them a few chrysanthemums this season; other kinds of plants are not much affected. Must I resort to commercial fertilizers, or can the barnyard manure be treated in a way to destroy or prevent them? J. C. H.

We regret very much that we can give no information that would help in fighting the grubs. In reply to the question about the use of commercial fertilizers, we can answer only in this way: We are obliged to depend almost entirely on commercial fertilizers on asters, and are not troubled with grubs; but we do not offer that as a remedy, or even as a preventive.

We think this must be the grub that often attacks strawberry plants. Bulletin 189, of Cornell University Agricultural Experiment Station, Ithaca, N. Y., might give you some information.

Watch Us Grow

ARAUCARIAS, the best decorative plants Nature produces, our specialty.

Every man in business and life, to be successful, must adopt one thing as his specialty and that specialty, of whatever nature it may be, he must guard, study and push to such an extent that it not only benefits himself but he must continue it so every one who seeks his aid, services or his article, which he advertises or practices, will share a slice of his activity and prosperity. I made the importation and cultivation of araucarias a special study in my life. The figures below will show my success in business from the first year; by commencing with an importation of 250 and now, the eleventh year, my importation has grown up to 6,000 (come and see it), the reason being that the araucaria grows yearly more in favor with the plant consuming people all over the country, as a most admired decorative plant for the parlor, bed-room, dining and sitting-rooms, stores and hotels, lawns and porches. The outlook will be of an importation of at least 8,000 to 10,000 in spring of 1907. To secure this vast amount for 1907, I am now on the ocean, per Steamer New Amsterdam, having left Hoboken Aug. 15, striking for Belgium, to make contracts for next year. I shall also bring over with me at the same time, a large lot of choice Azalea Indica and Palms, etc., for Christmas and Easter forcing. No money will be spared to secure for my customers the cream of the Belgium greenhouses only.

Please note lowest prices now August and September.

Araucaria Excelsa, 12 to 14 inches high, 5½-in. pots, 3 to 4 tiers, 2 yrs. old, 50c. 14 to 16 inches high, 5½-in. pots, 3 to 4 tiers, 2 yrs. old, 60c. 16 to 18 inches high, 5½ to 6-in. pots, 4 to 5 tiers, 3 yrs. old, 75c. 18 to 20 inches high, 6-in. pots, 5 to 6 tiers, 4 yrs. old, $1.00. 20 to 24 inches high, 6-in. pots, 5 to 6 tiers, 4 yrs. old, $1.25. 36 to 50 inches high, specimens, 7-in. pots, 6 yrs. old, $2.50 to $3.00.

Araucaria Compacta Robusta, have 1000 of them. Never were they as nice as this year. Plants are as broad as long, from 12 to 20 inches in height, 3 to 4 perfect tiers, 20 to 30 inches across from tip of one tier to the other, 3, 4 and 5 yrs. old. 6 to 7-in. pots, $1.25, $1.50, $1.75 to $2.00, up to $3.00 each.

Araucaria Excelsa Glauca, perfect jewels in shape and size, their beautiful greenish blue tiers give them such a striking appearance, that anyone seeing them must fall in love with them on sight. Plants, 6 to 7-in. pots, 3, 4, 5 perfect tiers, 15 to 25 inches in height, from 15 to 30 inches across, $1.25, $1.50, $1.75, $2.00 to $2.50 each. Please bear in mind tnat the above mentioned varieties are the cream of Belgium's productions. We have thousands of them and can meet all demands.

GRUBS IN SOIL.

In an experience of forty years at the nursery business I had never been troubled by the white grub-worm until last year. Can some of you nurserymen or florists tell me how to rid the soil of them? They destroyed hundreds of aster plants for me last season, and are doing the same thing this year. They eat the roots, and also the bark, from the stems of the plants beneath the soil. They not only destroy young plants, but plants which are full-grown and in bloom.

A year ago this spring the ground was heavily manured with barnyard manure, but not this spring, except with a surface coating of cow manure between the rows, the manure being fresh and not supposed to be infested with grubs or their larvæ.

I have lost by them a few chrysanthemums this season; other kinds of plants are not much affected. Must I resort to commercial fertilizers, or can the barnyard manure be treated in a way to destroy or prevent them? J. C. H.

We regret very much that we can give no information that would help in fighting the grubs. In reply to the question about the use of commercial fertilizers, we can answer only in this way: We are obliged to depend almost entirely on commercial fertilizers on asters, and are not troubled with grubs; but we do not offer that as a remedy, or even as a preventive.

We think this must be the grub that often attacks strawberry plants. Bulletin 189, of Cornell University Agricultural Experiment Station, Ithaca, N. Y., might give you some information.

Watch Us Grow

ARAUCARIAS, the best decorative plants Nature produces, our specialty.

Every man in business and life, to be successful, must adopt one thing as his specialty and that specialty, of whatever nature it may be, he must guard, study and push to such an extent that it not only benefits himself but he must continue it so every one who seeks his aid, services or his article, which he advertises or practices, will share a slice of his activity and prosperity. I made the importation and cultivation of araucarias a special study in my life. The figures below will show my success in business from the first year; by commencing with an importation of 250 and now, the eleventh year, my importation has grown up to 6,000 (come and see it), the reason being that the araucaria grows yearly more in favor with the plant consuming people all over the country, as a most admired decorative plant for the parlor, bed-room, dining and sitting-rooms, stores and hotels, lawns and porches. Dear Sir:-

As per your request we give our experience with To-Bak-Ine Liquid as a spray for Thrip. We used two tabelspoonful of the liquid to a gallon of water, and found fourteen gallons sufficient for a house of Brides 25x300 ft. We applied this about two or three days apart, and found it cleaned the Thrip completely out of the house. Since then we have used it in other houses as a spray, and find this method very much better than fumigating, and think we will depend entirely on spraying with To-Bak-Ine Liquid in the future, as it does the work so much better than smoking.

Yours very respectfully,
Bassett & Washburn

Spray! Spray! With To-Bak-Ine Liquid

A positive destroyer of Thrips, Greenfly and Red Spider. DIRECTIONS—Based on a house 25x100—4 teaspoonfuls to a gallon of water, used three times the first week and twice each week thereafter, will absolutely keep your houses clean from insects. Use a good air or compressed sprayer with a misting nozzle. We recommend Our Simplex Automatic Misting Sprayer as the best. (This is the sprayer used by Messrs. Bassett & Washburn.)

Can you afford to let your plants get infected before at least trying To-Bak-Ine Liquid? It is the only 45% solution on the market and has other valuable features found in no other nicotine solution. Send for our booklet, "Flowers and Profit," giving full particulars and directions, cost, the best method of spraying and the best sprayer.

Sample and "Words of Wisdom," by leading growers, FREE.

EXIT THE BELLOWS.

The bellows is no more. Our dear, departed friend did good service so long as there was no better way of applying powders to plants, but with the advent of the Peerless blower, an invention by S. J. McMichaels, a well-known Chicago grower, the old bellows quickly passed to innocuous desuetude. The blower handles sulphur, tobacco dust, Paris green or any powder, and is handled by practically every seedsman, the manufacturers, E. E. McMorran & Co., Chicago, reporting that they have supplied electrotypes to nearly every house that issues a catalogue including insecticides.

SHEEP MANURE.

Edward A. Lake, general counsel for the Pulverized Manure Co., Chicago, states that his company takes direct issue with the assertion in a contemporary to the effect that sheep at the Chicago Stock Yards are fed wheat screenings, with the result that the manure is of poor fertilizing quality. Mr. Lake asserts that no wheat screenings ever are fed any live stock at the Yards and sheep there are fed hay and sometimes corn and oats.

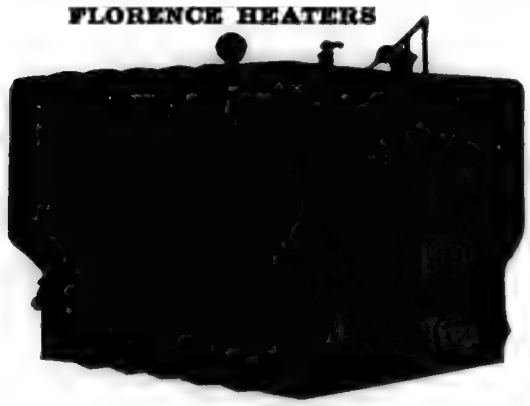
WITTBOLD WATERING SYSTEM

Awarded The S. A. F. Medal For Merit

Florists Passing Through Chicago will do well to see it in operation at the greenhouses of the Geo. Wittbold Co., 1657 Buckingham Place.



TO GIVE SYSTEM A TRIAL

Send for a Swivel Wheel, $2.00, with galvanized connections; or $2.50, with brass connections; and six half-inch nozzles at 50c each. And see for yourself. The investment of $5.00 will be sufficient for 100 feet of pipe and will afford a fair trial. The ½-inch 50c nozzles can be spaced 10 to 20 feet apart on pipe, according to water pressure, and screwed into tee connections. No tapping of pipe is necessary. Where closer spacing is desired we recommend ⅜-inch nozzles, to be tapped into pipe; price, 15c each.

ROMNEYA COULTERI.

This plant is not generally regarded as one of the easiest of cultivation, but when success is attained the result is specially gratifying. At the time of writing Romneya Coulteri is the most charming subject in my garden, says a writer in the Gardeners' Chronicle. Nearly 200 flowers are open at once, and of the buds there are as many again to open. Some idea may be obtained of the effect and fragrance by any one acquainted with the Californian poppy. Little difficulty has been experienced in cultivating the plants. It is always necessary, however, to make a good start and in a suitable site. The position chosen here is under a terrace wall having a southwest aspect. At the foot of the wall a trench of two and one-half feet was taken out, and a drainage of broken bricks and lime rubble to a depth of one foot was returned, on the top of which a very porous compost, consisting of turfy loam and road grit in equal proportions, together with plenty of finely broken brick and lime rubble, well incorporated, was placed. These conditions allow of the application of copious supplies of diluted farmyard soakage during the season of growth, but insure a dry bottom during the resting period, which is most essential. Six plants planted four years ago have each season become stronger, and this season growths eight feet and nine feet in length, strong and healthy looking, have been made.

Grow Good Flowers

BY USING

The Morehead Trap

THE MOREHEAD is an automatic tilting return steam trap especially designed for use of florists and greenhouse owners. Installed in connection with the greenhouse steam heating plant it will keep the pipes entirely free from water of condensed steam. The quick and prompt removal of condensation insures drier and more effective heating surfaces—an even heat in all parts of the system is the result. The return of condensation to the boilers is effected regardless of the position of the returns, whether above or below the water line in the boilers. :: :: :: :: :: ::

NOT LUCK OR "HAPPEN SO"

HAS BEEN responsible for the remarkable growth of our business and given us so large a number of satisfied customers. It is not the result of getting promiscuous orders here, there, anywhere, anyhow—all profit or no profit at all—it is clearly due to the high quality of our material and the "square deal." Please bear in mind that of the forty years we have been in this business every one has seen an increase of orders. The manufacture of greenhouse material is our whole business—not a side line. We print this in the hope that you will inquire further. Our catalogue will be sent if you are interested.

PECKY CYPRESS.

John Schillo, president of the Adam Schillo Lumber Co., Chicago, says the demand for pecky cypress has become something beyond all anticipation. It was only a few years ago that his firm brought from the south the first of this lumber for greenhouse bench material. The growers were slow to take it up because of its ill appearance, but its enduring qualities have been fairly demonstrated, and now about all the big growers are using it and many of the smaller ones are building bench bottoms of it. This spring quite a number of buyers were disappointed because they had not realized the necessity of placing advance orders for pecky cypress. One of these was the E. G. Hill Co., which had planned to build of this material all the benches in its big new range. Sixty days being required to get the cypress, cement was resorted to.

Mr. Schillo says that growers who know that they will require more or less bench material in the early spring should place their orders now to be sure of getting what they want on time. There is no other use for pecky cypress and no lumber dealer buys any considerable quantity beyond that necessary to take care of the orders in sight. Then, too, he must place his orders months in advance at the mills. Pecky cypress, like any other cypress, is open-air-dried in the south. The mills do not ship until the weight of the cypress is reduced to three pounds to the foot, board measure. Not only is this of importance as affecting the quality of the lumber, but it cuts a big figure in freight. The tariff from Louisiana to Chicago is 26 cents per hundred pounds, and under this rule every thousand feet weighs 3,000 pounds, and the freight is $7.80 per thousand feet, which looks like at least the railroad's full share in the market price.

BOUVARDIA.

I want to raise a bench of bouvardia for cut flowers this winter. Please give me the following information: What temperature do I need? What kind of soil? Do they do best planted on bench or in pots? What varieties do best and pay best? J. A. K.

These are not easy to transplant; therefore I hope you have them growing in your own garden. The bouvardia is a tropical plant. You can get one crop at a temperature of 50 degrees at night, but if you expect them to go on flowering and growing after Christmas you must give them at least 60 degrees at night. Their feeding roots are hair-like fibres; therefore, the soil should be a sandy loam, enriched with sifted animal manure. By all means grow them on a bench in five inches of soil. You will get but a meager lot of flowers in pots.

Bouvardias should be benched in the first week of September, when if frequently sprayed they will soon start roots, but if left until the end of the month, when cool nights are expected, they are slow to take hold of the new soil. If they continue to wilt for two weeks after being benched pinch two or three joints off the strongest growths.

As fast as old grate bars are burned out many growers are putting in the Martin rocking grate. The call for this grate is largely increased by the fact that the growers who have used it for one or more seasons are almost without exception equipping other boilers with it. of the size of our factory so you will never make the mistake of thinking that we are sort of "sash and blind makers," way off here in the east, with greenhouses as a side line. All that plant with its immense wood-working mill, foundry (just doubled in size) set-up shop, iron frame shop, galvanizing sheds, storage sheds, and so on, covering acres of ground and ending with those millions of feet of cypress as a background—all go to show that we have sort of grown up—reached a point where we are "wearing long pants" and manufacturing about everything the florist wants or needs—but what we wanted to say particularly was, just a reminder of our Burnham Boilers—now is the time. We absolutely know that from ease of care to economy of fuel there's not a boiler that can match it for greenhouse work.

It's a case of—no long bolts—no headers—no gaskets—no large clean-out doors to warp—no inaccessible places—no clinker jamming grates—no regulating of damper from the back.

Everything compact, handy, sensible, practical, right where you can put your hands on all working parts without taking a step. But don't put off ordering.

CONVENTION AFTERMATH

National Flower Show.

On Thursday evening the discussion of the national flower show was a special order of business. Robert Craig reported on the inception of the idea and its development at Washington last year. He told of the favor with which the idea had been received and of the prompt response, up to a certain point, to the call for subscriptions to the guarantee fund of $10,000 which it was proposed to raise. He stated that what is most needed is a man to lead the enterprise, and said that the committee which has done the work thus far recommends that a capable man be hired to give his time to it. He said that a schedule had been prepared for a March show, but that the idea had reluctantly to be abandoned. The committee now recommends a November show, discontinuing the August convention and holding the society's business session at the later date. After considering the possibilities at New York, Philadelphia, Boston and other cities it was decided to recommend that the first national show be held in Chicago. It was recommended that $3,000 to $4,000 be offered in premiums of sufficient value to bring all the novelties from Europe. It was proposed that a general premium list be issued at once for a show in 1908.

E. G. Hill followed Mr. Craig. He said he looks for the proposed move to double the society's membership and that it should have 1,000 life members. He said the people in their demands for floriculture and horticulture are ahead of the profession. He told his phenomenon story as illustrating the success the show will be in bringing all departments of the trade in step with the march of progress.

Others spoke along the same lines and E. V. Hallock argued for calling it an international show. The following resolution was then adopted:

Resolved, that if the proposed exhibition be held, it shall be in the month of November, 1908, in the city of Chicago; that the date of the annual meeting be changed from August to November, so that the exhibition and meeting be held at the same place and date; that the executive committee be empowered to put this resolution into effect.

There was some further discussion as to whether or not the society might treat so off-handedly as weighty a subject, the date of the annual meeting being provided for in the by-laws, which are only amendable by due process. But it was a hot night, November sounded good and the whole matter was passed up to the executive committee to take such action as it may deem best.

Closing Sessions.

Thursday evening George Asmus, who had managed the bowling tournament most successfully, reported for the committee on sports. Secretary Stewart read the report of the superintendent of the trade exhibition. It simply enumerated the exhibitors and their exhibits.

An invitation from the Society of Southern Florists was read, as follows:

The Society of Southern Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists was organized at Chattanooga, Tenn., May 22, 1906. The objects are similar to those of the Society of American Florists and intended to advance trade in the south and a better acquaintance between all engaged, directly or indirectly, in the business.

The society will hold its first convention in the city of New Orleans, November 15 to 17, 1906. In connection with this convention a trade exhibit will be held to which a cordial invitation is extended to every member of the S. A. F., and a hope is expressed that they will take part in the exhibit and show the southern florists what they have to offer. The southern florists will not merely make this visit interesting, but will take advantage of the occasion to show what the south can produce.

This had the signatures of President R. C. Berckmans and the following New Orleans members: C. W. Eichling, Jos. Steckler, Harry Papworth, Otto Abele, J. A. Newsham, and Harry Elwell. It was referred to the executive committee.

P. J. Hauswirth, for the committee on life members' badges, presented an acceptable sketch and quotation of prices. After some discussion of the desirability of having a special badge for life members, the matter was referred to the executive committee with power to act.

The new officers were introduced, save the vice-president, with whom the notification committee had failed to connect. Each was presented with more or less of the flowers of oratory and each pledged himself to do as did Cheyenne Charlie, above whom, when his course was run, there was inscribed by steadfast friends: "He done his damnedest; angels couldn't have did no more."

On Friday morning a brief session was held in the shade of a tree while most of the members were touring the cash register factory. There was inquiry as to who is now charged with responsibility for pushing the national flower show, and no thoroughly satisfactory answer, as the executive board and committee on guarantee fund seem to share the burden.

Edwin Lonsdale, Peter Bisset and William Miller reported on the outdoor displays, enumerating the exhibits as mentioned in last week's REVIEW, and one there omitted—a bed of Canna Mrs. W. F. Kasting, exhibited by W. F. Kasting. It was recommended that a certificate of merit be awarded Nathan Smith & Son for Canna Director Holtz and a silver medal to John Freudenberg, for the arrangement and care of the grounds. It was stated that five exhibitors' occupied 2,800 square feet of beds and from two to four men from the N. C. R. staff of gardeners had been employed on the grounds all summer. It was recommended that the feature be continued at future conventions to ascertain its possibilities as a business proposition.

E. V. Hallock, P. J. Hauswirth and Peter Bisset presented final resolutions expressive of the appreciation of the society for the good work of the Dayton Florists' Club and the hospitality of the people. Especial thanks were tendered the National Cash Register Co. for its entertainment and a separate set of resolutions was ordered engrossed for presentation to John M. Patterson, expressive of the society's appreciation, not only of his courtesies to the S. A. F. but recognizing his great work for the extension of the love of floriculture and the welfare of the community. It was a recognition well deserved.

Presentations.

At the session Thursday evening a pleasant feature was the presentation of a chest of silver to President Kasting. It was where J. D. Carmody blooms perennially. He said, being a foundryman, he is somewhat in the casting business, and it must not be thought he was casting about for any other job because he now took so much pleasure in presenting silver castings to President Kasting, for the equal enjoyment of Mrs. Kasting and the little Kastings.

When the recipient had replied, Robert Craig took the floor and presented to the retiring secretary, William J. Stewart, a purse of gold as an evidence of the many friendships he had formed during his twenty years in office.

Friday afternoon the exhibitors presented to Horace J. Frank a lily bulb. Col. Castle gave him a little talk about Harrisii being scarce this year and told him it was about the finest bulb of the crop, and it was, for between the scales were nice, crisp greenbacks to the amount of $65. The exhibitors were all well pleased with Mr. Frank's management and took this way of showing it.

Trade Exhibits.

Trade exhibits continued to come in right up to the closing day. In addition to the long list reported last week, there were the following:

E. A. Beaven, Evergreen, Ala., fadeless moss and Southern decorative greens.

A. C. Oelschig & Son, Savannah, Ga., rubber plants.

F. W. Griffin, Cleveland, O., the Sabin adjustable plant stand.

Lockland Lumber Co., Lockland, O., model greenhouse.

Crowl Fern Co., Millington, Mass., ferns and cut evergreens.

S. S. Pennock, Philadelphia, table of Asplenium Nidus-Avis, the bird's nest fern.

Weed Supply Co., Dayton, pipe cutters, threaders, etc.

Entertainments.

Many of those who went to Dayton expected little in the way of entertainment, having in mind that the resources of the comparatively few florists there were much smaller than in any city previously visited. But the Daytonians were not one jot behind those who have entertained the society in former years in the cordiality and generosity of their hospitality. Aided by the cash register people, who have an especial fondness for florists, the entertainment committee had really more than could be done justice to. There was something on every minute the convention was not in session.

Had it not been for the rain on Tuesday night the president's reception would have been a triumph. As it was the supper, reception and lecture at Welfare hall was a splendid alternative. The illumination at Far Hills occurred Thursday evening and was missed by many who would have seen and appreciated it had it taken place as scheduled. It was a display not in the least described by the word applied to it, illumination, for the effect was not only one of great beauty but the novelty of the idea was most striking. The trees on the splendid estate bore for the occasion a crop of electric fruit in the form and coloring of grapes, apples, peaches, pears, etc.

On Wednesday the bowling contests took place at two amusement parks. Lunch was provided and the ladies were not only taken out in special cars but were given free admission to everything in the parks while the men were bowling. Wednesday evening there was a dance at the fair-grounds and on other evenings music. Thursday the gunners were entertained and the ladies were taken to the matinee.

W. H. Horlacher.

(A popular and progressive Daytonian.)

Friday morning was spent at the cash register plant, where the cleanliness and order must have inspired in many the desire for better things in their own bailiwick. In the afternoon several special cars took the visitors for a ride over the city lines, including a visit to Dayton's other show place, the Soldier's home, where Governor Thomas held a reception. At Memorial hall President Kasting thanked all concerned in the generous hospitalities of the week. He was followed by J. B. Heiss, president of the Dayton Florists' Club, and Charles Lutzenberger, chairman of the entertainment committee, who said simply that it had been a pleasure for Dayton to have the convention and to do what could be done to add to the enjoyment of the visitors. Inspection was then made of the 600 acres of most beautiful grounds, evidently the creation of a thorough landscape gardener. This was followed by a concert by the Home's splendid band. It is a wonderful place, but the visit was saddened by the thought, which came to many, of the 6,000 old boys in blue waiting here in the twilight of life for the only call yet to come to them, to join the regiments gone before to the already great camp of the dead, just over the hill.

Shooting Contest.

The gunners were not particularly expert, but they had a great deal of fun Thursday afternoon. In the shoot for teams of five men the Daytonians won by a wide margin, the announced score of 190 to 173 being viewed with suspicion. The individual scores were as follows:

Brown, Richmond, Va.	17
Seybold, Baltimore	14
Rodgers, Cincinnati	13
Hibbard, Youngstown	12
Altick, Dayton	12
Scott, Buffalo	11
Young, St. Louis	10
Reimels, New York	9
Herendeen, Geneva	7
Rasmussen, New Albany	6

Brown won a fine rifle, Seybold a camera, Rodgers a fishing rod, Hibbard a shooting jacket, Altick a sweater, Scott a hunting coat, Young a hunting knife, Reimels an axe, Herendeen a cleaning rod and Rasmussen a wallet.

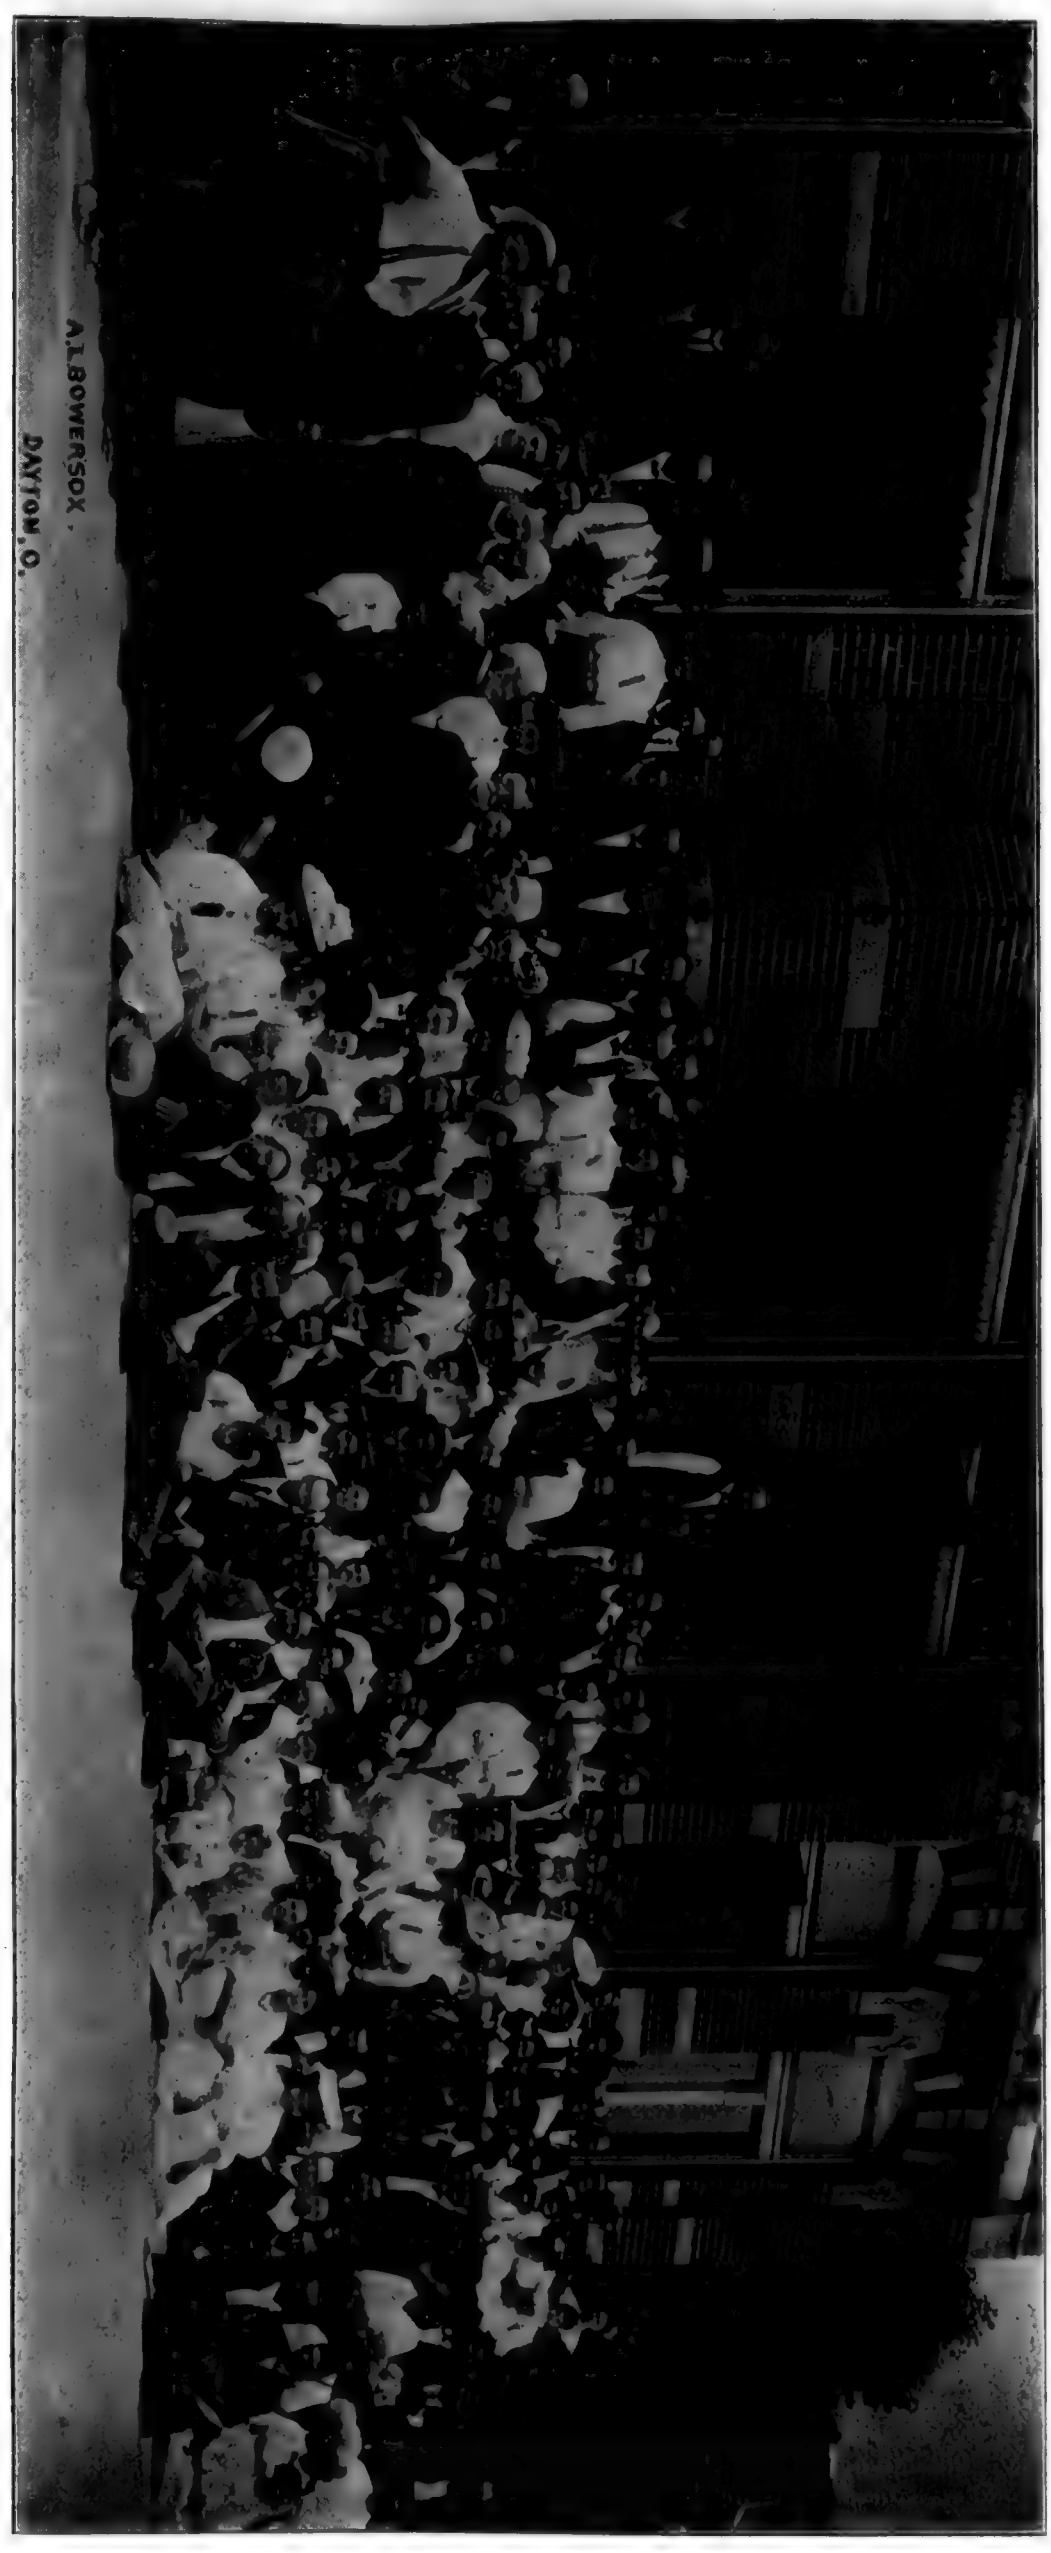
Final Individual Contest.

The high score men in the teams and in the preliminary individual contest had a warm contest Wednesday evening for the diamond-studded championship medal. It was won by W. H. Ernest, of Washington. Two games were rolled, total pins to count. The scores follow:

W. H. Ernest	363
C. L. Siebold	347
George Asmus	344
D. T. Connor	328
C. Graham	320
W. Mansfield	317
J. J. Beneke	298
C. C. Pollworth	295
A. Rasmussen	271
E. Donaldson	262

Cuttings and Seedlings.

Hot! Hot!! Hot!!! Hot!!!!



This week it is comfortably cool in Dayton.

Foley's fans finely fitted feverish florists' fancies.

The cash register people were entitled to some advertising out of it. It is reported that they spent in the interests of the convention as much money as the total cost of certain recent and successful conventions. Besides there are those who say that John H. Patterson has performed more real service in the extension of floriculture than has the S. A. F. itself.

How true it is that all the real work of the society is accomplished at the meetings of the executive committee will be seen from a perusal of the proceedings of the Dayton convention. Practically every matter was disposed of by: "Move it be referred to the executive committee." "Second the motion." "All in favor." "Carried."

The badge book was distinctly all right. It was a great convenience and should be continued, though no official action was taken to that end. In a few years it will become a great help in the collection of dues, for all intending to attend a convention will wish to pay soon enough to get their names and numbers into the badge book. This year over 150 badges were issued to new members whose names were not in the book.

During Col. Castle's eulogy of the all but unanimous choice for president, a non-member at the rear of the hall withdrew in high dudgeon. He said he wanted Roosevelt to run again.

Lion & Co., the New York ribbon men, had a display at the Algonquin hotel but would have done more business had it been at the fair-grounds.

Nearly every exhibitor who was present at Washington says his Dayton sales footed up a better total, and some went so far as to say that more actual business was done than at any previous S. A. F. convention.

But one and all they protest at the admission of the general public, as was done by thousands on Wednesday and Thursday evenings. Not only was the hall so packed as to preclude doing business, but exhibitors were compelled to protect their displays to prevent everything being carried off by souvenir hunters. When we consider that Pennock had on a small stand probably $2,500 worth of ribbons the force of the last objection readily may be seen.

John Westcott was master of ceremonies at a little blow-out given by H. B. Beatty at the Algonquin hotel Thursday evening. The silver cups won by the Philadelphia bowlers were filled with champagne and a fine lunch was spread. During the evening the need of the family of the late James Hartshorne was brought up and the hat passed. Mr. Beatty put in a 100-dollar bill and the sum realized was $265.

F. A. Herendeen came all the way from Geneva, N. Y., in his automobile and kept the machine busy giving his friends a spin.

George Asmus lost a diamond stud that cost $225. It is supposed to have been in a shirt sent to the laundry.

The Wittbold watering device was noted with interest by the many visitors at the plant of the Miami Floral Co.

The call for a meeting to organize a canna society was not productive of results.

L. H. Kyrk, of Cincinnati, bought the entire exhibit of Rice & Co.

By Wednesday the visitors began to scatter, many making one-day trips to near-by cities. Cincinnati was visited by many and scores went to Richmond to see the Hill places.

Kroeschell's big boiler did not reach Dayton at all, but a model served to enable Fred Lautenschlager to take two orders. A Kroeschell No. 11 will be installed in the White House conservatories at Washington.

John Laver, of Erie, the sickest of the many who felt the ill effects of the heat and the peculiar water, was taken to the Miami Valley hospital on Wednesday and got along nicely despite alarming rumors.

H. M. Altick's 4-year-old son fell Friday and broke his left arm.

SOME RECOLLECTIONS.

The Dayton Sessions.

Although by no means recovered from the four days' Turkish bath at Dayton, I want to comment on the many delightful features of the twenty-second convention of the S. A. F., now only a pleasant memory.

The president's address was brief, but full of practical suggestions, and I do not remember an address that inspired such lively discussion. The essays were not long-winded, but were gems on their respective subjects. The one on "The Private Gardener and His Work," by Mr. Palmer, of Brookline, Mass., was finely composed and ably delivered. If it were possible for every private gardener to conduct himself according to Mr. Palmer's principles, the private gardener in all large establishments would soon rank alongside other members of learned professions, to which he really belongs. The earnest talk of Mr. Hallock on "Horticultural Education in Our Public Schools" was most interesting. No man in our society is better capable of carrying along the good work. It is a great and important subject. It may be of slow growth, like many solid improvements, but it is bound to come, and when horticultural knowledge in candidates for school teachers is recognized and they are given credit over those devoid of it, a great advance will be made.

The debate on lowering the tariff on glass caused many a laugh. As was said by some speakers, the tariff is a local issue and a selfish one. It was up before the society years ago, without any result, and no resolution passed by our society would do any good. Let the committee now in existence hear the opinions of the florists of the land. It then will know where the majority stands.

Place of Meeting.

Good, old Philadelphia has the convention for 1907. This great city has been more loyal to the society than any community in the land. When the eloquent Robert Craig and the jolly John Westcott both raised their voices for hearing his fine address of invitation to that world-famous resort, sympathize with his defeat. His personality is charming. To secure a convention of florists you must have the cordial endorsement of the craft in that city, for on them depends the success of the convention.

The Election.

As usual, the nomination and the election of officers was of the greatest interest. The members thought it would be a graceful thing to tender the presidency to W. J. Stewart, who has been the able and faithful secretary for nineteen years. It is fine that there exists in our society an unwritten law that the president should occupy his seat but one year. There are hundreds of able men in the society too modest to declare themselves candidates, but all worthy of the honor.

With the secretary it is different. It is the important office of the society, and we don't envy the man who succeeds Mr. Stewart. It demands hard and faithful work. Mr. Altick would have made a fine secretary, yet that popular Phil, of Chicago, possesses a quiet, retiring, fascinating personality that charms all of us, and to butt against it for any position is futile.

Of course, the popular John, of Philadelphia, was elected vice-president and he will work, don't you forget it, and Mr. Beatty honors the society by accepting the office of treasurer. We hope the defeated candidates and their backers will have only the most loyal support for those receiving the honors.

The Social Side.

It has been proved that a small city, or one of moderate size, is suitable for their home city it was irresistible. We had the good fortune to meet Mr. and Mrs. Westcott shortly before our farewell to Dayton, and John again recited the attractions of "lovers' lane." Mrs. Westcott pleasantly volunteered the remark, "John talks a lot of lovers' lane, but never goes in there himself." There will be inquiries for it next August.

All who had the pleasure of meeting Mayor Cutler, of Niagara Falls, and our convention. Attractions are not so numerous that a great number stray away from the business sessions, and the few local attractions can be visited by us in a body. That banquet in Welfare hall, with its music and stereopticon views, was simply charming. That dissolving view from a brilliant American Beauty rose to Mr. Deamud's face was clever, and brought out shouts of applause. The same can be said of the mysterious change of a snowdrop to the figure of John Esler, of New Jersey. There is beauty in both, if you can only see it.

The illumination of President Patterson's grounds was the grand feature of the week. From the street, where the trolley car landed us, up the long gravel walk to the mansion was an ordeal we shall not soon forget. We had been shooting that afternoon and were tired, and the ascent was made by a rope connected to our waist and that of Harry Papworth and a local shooter who dragged us up. When we reached the summit all fatigue was well repaid. It was more fairyland than earth. Lanterns represented in poem of color every kind of fruit and flower. Our weary trudge up the ascent was enlivened by the sight of huge pumpkins among the creeping vines by the roadside. Apples clustered on the linden trees, bunches of grapes hung from lofty vine-clad elms, apples from the oaks and grand American Beauty roses from flowerless shrubs. But none of this seemed artificial, because it was so artistically arranged.

A band concert on the summit of this Far Hills park was enjoyed by thousands.

Friday morning all who desired were escorted through the wonderful cash register works by polite young men, who stopped at interesting points and gave us brief lectures. The writer made a lot of mental memoranda thinking he could relate the wonders of this truly model factory, but they have evaporated. To those not present it may convey a slight idea of the magnitude of this wonderful factory to state that half an acre of floor space is devoted to a laundry, entirely employed on the sleevelets, collars and aprons of the women employees. I observed no such institution for the men, which is a sad reflection on the fair sex, showing how much more they need washing. But best of all, Mr. Patterson is a friend of horticulture, and if a house-holder does not fix up his yard neatly Mr. Patterson will do it for him, so he has made Dayton beautiful.

Another unique feature of Dayton is the far-famed Soldiers' home. What country in the world's history ever has taken care of the old soldiers as has this United States? Not one. Some may think it has overdone it, to the injustice of the coming generations. We think not. If you saw the bent or crippled veterans sitting around the shady places of these beautiful grounds, your heart would go out toward them. The grounds are as beautiful and well kept as any of our parks, and in the magnificent trees and floriculture, superior to most. The writer, through the kindness of H. M. Altick, was given a three-hour automobile ride through this great institution and greatly enjoyed it. No part of it created a thrill more than the burial ground of the veterans. I was informed there is an army of 17,000 silent soldiers buried there. The average of deaths in this old army is eight every day.

Flash Lights.

No convention now will be complete without the ample presence of Phil Foley, the most polite man on earth, who gave up his seat in a street-car to three ladies. Few can do that.

It may not look well or proper for a Buffalo man, but we want to say that few presidents of the S. A. F. have filled the chair so ably, so originally, and so acceptably as W. F. Kasting. We always knew he was a bright boy, but think now he will soon be mayor of the great city of Buffalo.

On the Lawn at the Dayton Fair-Grounds August 24.

H. M. Altick had a grand lot of prizes for the shooters and a most picturesque place to hold the shoot, but the absence of the Philadelphia competitors made it tame. We were obliged to win a hunting coat, and partook of the hospitality of a lot of good fellows of the local club.

The local club was most hospitable. Everybody in the town worked hard. Dayton is a busy little city. Its street-car service is difficult to understand, but its climate is easily appreciated.

The eloquence of Robert Craig never wanes.

The fatherly and friendly appearance of Mr. Hallock is comforting at all times.

The little adjournments and impromptu meetings of the society, as usual, were the enjoyable features of the convention. One held by Mr. Matthews, of the local club, was particularly sparkling.

A meeting was held to fill up the Beatty cup won by the Philadelphia club. The writer was not present, but we learn that some great good was done. An absent friend was thought of, and the widow and orphans of a much respected florist were substantially remembered.

In conclusion, the convention was a great success except the atmosphere. Never in our brief abode on this sphere have we experienced anything like it. From Tuesday until Friday night it was a Turkish bath, continuous without intermission, and may the Lord have mercy on those who have to live there all the time. It has made us more addle-headed than we were before.

HORTICULTURE IN SCHOOLS.

[The report by E. V. Hallock, Queens, N. Y., for the Committee on Teaching Horticulture in the Public Schools, appointed at Washington last year.]

After careful research and study of reports and methods now in vogue, we wish particularly to call your attention to two matters—first, the absence of text-books in all the present methods of teaching horticulture, and second, the lack of concerted action among the different associations conducting that work, be they civic, philanthropic or educational.

This state of affairs we consider fortunate. The first because it does not require any great preparation and makes possible the starting of an S. A. F. method sooner than it could otherwise be started, since no elaborate system of text-books is essential. The second, inasmuch as individual persons and organizations have accomplished so much and demonstrated so thoroughly that the interest of the people is already all that could be desired, that we feel confident if this work can be placed upon a methodical, systematic, concerted plan—in other words, if the entire school system of horticulture can be standardized suitably for each grade of school, suggested by the S. A. F. and adopted by the different boards of education—we see no reason why this teaching of horticulture should not cover the entire land in a few years.

Text-books.

In all the methods of teaching by the different organizations at present, we find no text-books are given to the pupils. Leaflets are compiled and issued to the teachers and also to pupils, in some cases by the boards of education, for the guidance and help of each.

These leaflets of instruction for the use of teachers should emanate from a committee of the S. A. F. They should be placed in the hands of the state boards of education, which will attend to distributing the different grades of leaflets to the different grades of schools; namely, the rural common schools, the union and high schools, and the primary and grammar grades, compiled with special reference to the conditions prevailing in each grade.

We also suggest, for schools that have become somewhat advanced in garden work, and for pupils that have shown interest, that leaflets and small, simple pamphlets be prepared, containing plain illustrations of flowers, giving the botanical parts, also botanical names of the common trees, plants and flowers, and others giving simple explanations of what is meant by annuals, biennial, hardy, perennial, and other matters that are met with in everyday life. Even these simple leaflets and pamphlets are not to be given out to the pupils until they show sufficient interest in their work. This plan can be elaborated as conditions seem to require.

Need of Standardizing.

On careful perusal of all documents and reports that we could obtain we find no two schools or organizations conducting their garden work on the same lines, but each pursuing their work according to their own ideas and as seems best to them. Great good has undoubtedly come from these disunited efforts, but greater good will undoubtedly come from concerted action, emanating from some central authority, thoroughly standardizing their work.

We have suggested dividing the schools into three classes, so that we can better meet the conditions and environment known to exist in schools of each class. In this case we should issue three series of leaflets of instructions, diagrams and routine work. The latter could be taken largely from the methods now in force in the various school gardens.

Instructions to Teachers.

Besides placing the leaflets and pamphlets in the hands of the different teachers we suggest that one of the trustees should familiarize himself with the proposed methods, using some of the fuller reports of some of the specially conducted schools of this nature, to get a general idea of how the plots are laid out and cared for near the schools, or plots loaned by people at a little distance from the school and the home garden.

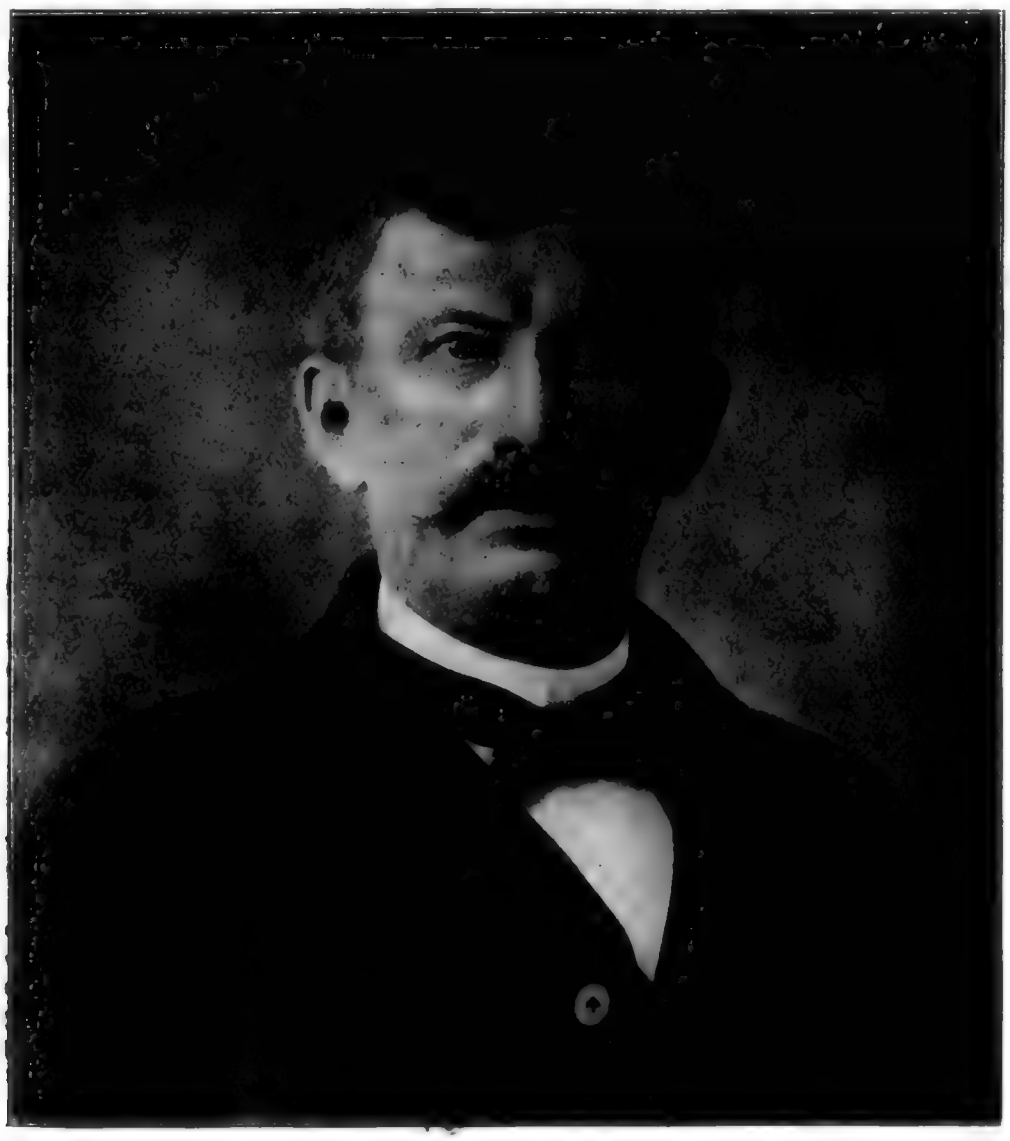
If no trustee feels equal to this simple task he could easily call to his assistance a florist, a market gardener, or even a good farmer in the community, to help start the work. If the teachers lack in knowledge of any particular subject they should be given to understand that they could call upon the trustee, who would find a person competent to explain.

A committee of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society comments very favorably on the system of children's home gardens, stating that the society first offered three prizes, then ten, and were much surprised when they received over two hundred entries for the ten awards. The committee visited the home gardens as far as possible and found it was very encouraging to the children to do so. They state: "We still feel the children's home garden movement is a very important one." This committee also gives prizes in connection with the home garden system for best reports of work for the year.



Your committee, in view of the reports on these methods, suggests as an intermediate plan, where conditions seem to favor the method, a demonstration plot in the school grounds, where the teacher can fully demonstrate with each pupil the preparation of the soil, the application of fertilizers and the planting of each kind of seed, both of vegetable and flowers. By this means the depth and distance of planting seed of the standard kinds can be easily learned by the pupils.

The demonstration plot could be used throughout the season for simple talks, during the growth of the plants, even to the method of killing potato bugs. The object of this demonstration plot is that it may be used in connection with the children's home garden system. All instruction and knowledge, as it were, which the children carry home to use in their gardens will come from this plot.

State Teachers.

The state might employ a few experienced garden directors or teachers to visit as many schools during the year as practicable. Schools should be able to call for this special aid where the subject is not sufficiently understood. The committee on school gardens of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, after investigation, says: "The great lesson learned was that children's gardens are successfully carried on when under the leadership of an experienced director or teacher. No matter how enthusiastically the work is undertaken, without a proper understanding of gardening it is usually a failure." The same committee says: "There is a crying need for an institution in this state similar to that at Hartford, Conn., where school garden work can be taught."

In the course of time this study could be added to the curriculum of all normal schools, as it already belongs to that of several, these schools to furnish teachers with sufficient knowledge of the subject to follow the methods laid down.

Lectures.

In educational matter of the present day, be it ever so low or so high, much instruction is imparted to the pupils by lectures and talks. In the rural schools it is not absolutely necessary that the talks or lectures should be given at specified periods. They could be worked in at times best suited to the convenience of the teacher.

At most of these lectures, the teacher should have one or two potted plants or some flowers, and some varieties of the common seeds; and it would not take any great length of time, not more than a year or two, perhaps, to make most of the pupils familiar with the treatment of the common and most useful plants.

Appropriation for Carrying on the Work.

In the matter of appropriations, all the different kinds of school garden work derive their financial aid from different sources, which is of necessity a varying and somewhat uncertain amount. For carrying on this work we want a certain appropriation for each grade of school. By way of illustration, but not a suggestion we should say five dollars each for the rural schools, ten for the primary and grammar schools and twenty for the union and high schools. We confidently believe that even an amount as small as this would be felt in a community, but we feel that by correlating garden work with other studies the different boards of education would appropriate a larger sum.

But what must be made plain is that the appropriation should be a fixed factor in the expense of conducting the schools.

Public Meetings—Children's Garden Conferences.

At least once a year there should be a public meeting in the form of a conference, where all persons interested should be invited to come and make suggestions, and lend their aid to this movement. The children should have a chance to talk a little on their ideas and work.

At a children's garden conference, December 2, 1905, under auspices of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, seven ten-minute addresses were called for to give opportunity for discussion. A unique feature of this meeting was a model garden bed, illustrated by a practical exercise by a boy gardener and teacher. This conference brought together many people interested and proved a great success in more ways than one.

At meetings of this kind questions of civic improvement and general betterment of surroundings could be discussed.

Relation of School Gardens to Experiment Stations and Agricultural Colleges.

To some it may appear that the experiment stations and agricultural colleges conflict or compete with our movement. This is not the case. We should be content to call ourselves the common soldiers of this common cause, and we should also be content to be officered by experts from those institutions. They commence at the top and work down. We are commencing at the bottom and will work up. We wish to call on those institutions for lecturers, demonstrators and instructors. We can work hand in hand with them and we probably could not succeed without them.

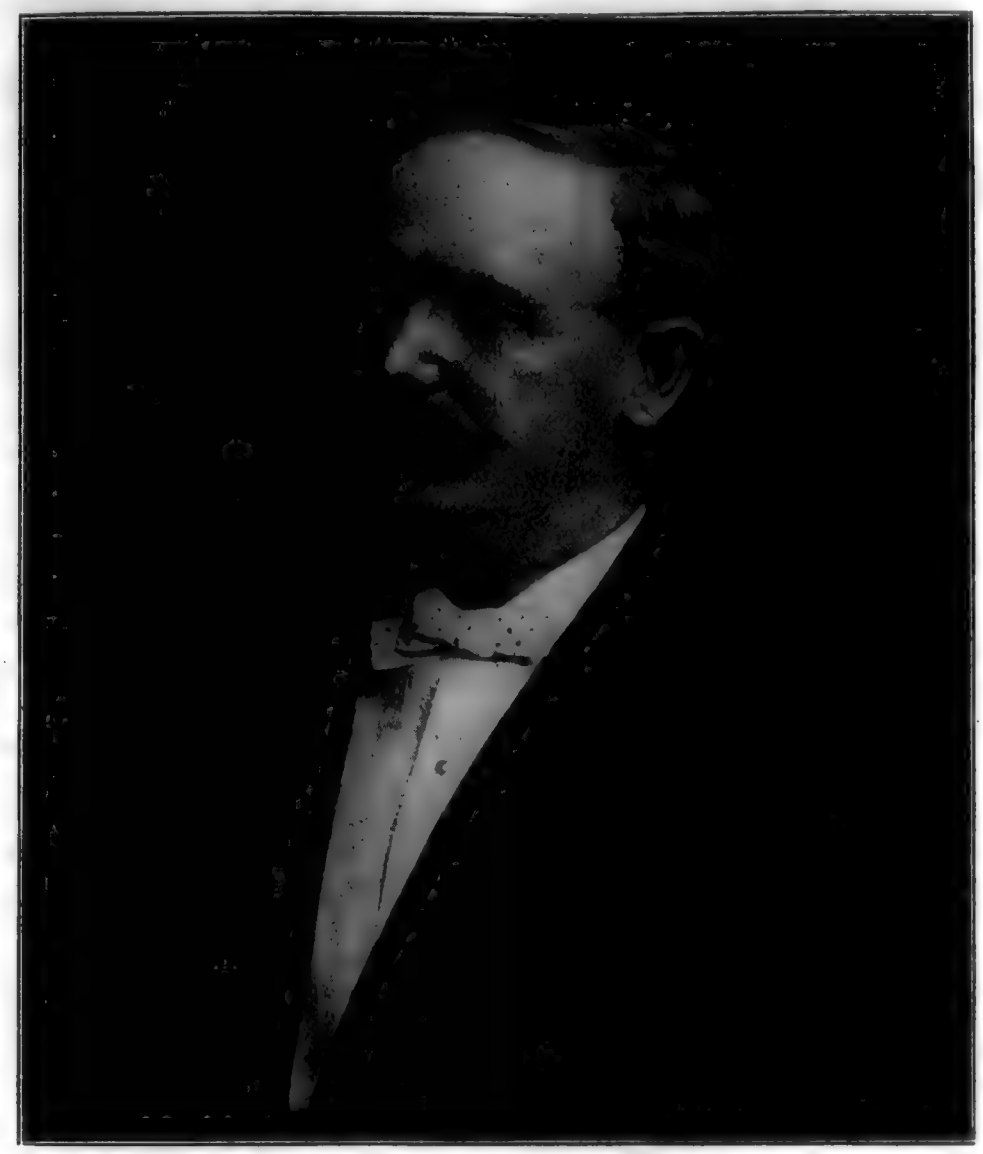
Summary and Recommendations.

Your committee now believes the work can be taken up with the end plainly in view. Whether it is on the exact lines laid down in this report, or better ideas from the succeeding committee, is of little consequence.

We have available so many detailed reports of the workings of the various associations taking up the matter of school gardens, so much data and so many working plans, a committee should be able to proceed with their duties understandingly.

But we must be doubly sure of the ground we take. We cannot afford to make many mistakes at the outset or on fundamental lines. Our work must be humanitarian, logical and in a manner to interest. Our progress must be slow and sure.



Our motives are altruistic and must remain so, or our efforts will fail. Neither this association nor any other association has any selfish motive concealed. No person or persons will have any advantages over any other person or persons. We shall work in an open field. In the advancement of horticulture we are sure to prosper, and added wealth and comfort will accrue to the individual, the community, the state and the nation.

When the time comes and we ask of the state a recognition in the matter of school appropriations, let us do so with the consciousness of a righteous cause and a knowledge that not one penny will be diverted from its proper use. We believe it possible that some of the money now appropriated by the agricultural department for distributing the commonest of all common seeds can be diverted to the boards of education of the different states for the purpose of school gardens.

Recommendations.

Finally, your committee recommends that a new committee of five be appointed by the executive committee, the president and the vice-president of this society, to carry on the work as laid down in the report of your first committee, or on any other lines they deem best. And that they be authorized to spend a sum not to exceed $100 for preparing leaflets, diagrams, routine instructions, etc., during the coming year.

[The committee distributed its report in pamphlet form, in which was included a large amount of matter which had come to the committee's attention in considering the subject during the last year.]

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

RETAILERS' METHODS.

BY IRVIN BEBTERMANN, OF INDIANAPOLIS.

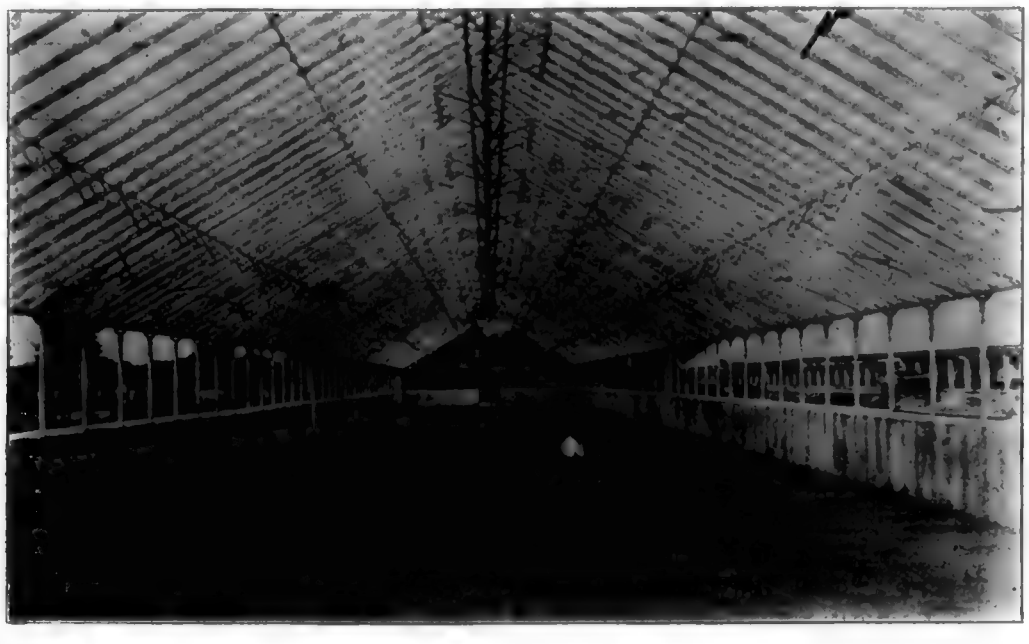
[Read before the Society of American Florists, at Dayton, O., August 22, 1906.]

In the time of the great Roman, Nero, the methods of arranging and presenting flowers were in keeping with that wonderful period. The Romans understood how to combine flowers with statuary, make wreaths and designs for classic pieces, to furnish sparkling fountains with plants, to use artistic vases, to blend colors and to decorate in a manner the leading florists of this great country are earnestly striving after. To be sure, they did not watch or have the details of the present time: paper boxes of various hues; green, pink and white wax paper; pins to match the various flowers; cords, tassels and gauze; mattings and many other accessories were unknown to them; but the beauty and detail of their flower arrangements are a standard which all of us may look to.

Refrigerator and Windows.

A compartment the size of a small room refrigerated by the establishment's plant, with glass shelving on each side and backed by mirrors, is the proper caper these days for the preservation of flowers. This also enables the store man to take his customers into the box, without disturbing the flowers or causing them to suffer from different temperatures.

The florist's window is now also an all-important point. It has long been recognized as his most efficient advertising medium, but it has only been of late years that expert trimmers were employed and the minutest details carefully observed. The flowers in the window must be so arranged that the colors blend, or separate parts of the arrangement must contain a massing of one variety. The florist's window must attract the eyes of those passing, and surpass in beauty and artistic value all the windows in the city, for in arrangement and neatness it must be equal to them, and the beauty of the contents naturally surpasses all others.



Too Much Commercialism.

The subject of the paper does not permit of a sermon, but this is a most opportune time to impress upon my listeners that there is so much that is sacrificed for commercialism in the present day. Everything is made and arranged according to the ledger account. In this we find our German and French brothers far superior. Not only is the commercial side of the florist's business taken into consideration in Europe, but the idealistic side is also well attended to. It is not only necessary to arrange a wreath or basket hurriedly, but it is also necessary to arrange it in an idealistic and artistic manner. I would refer every American retailer to the Bindekunst, a German trade paper. The illustrations therein will easily convince the reader that we are far behind in detail and symbolical work. The Berlin and Parisian florists not only put forth work which earns the dollar, but arrange pieces which signify much more than is found in our ordinary run of baskets, wreaths, pillows, etc.

Store Arrangement.

Great improvement has been noticed in late years in the arrangement of the flower stores. It is essential that the arrangement of the up-to-date flower store be such that it is just a trifle beyond the finest customer who enters, if it is to elicit, particularly from the feminine flower expert, admiration, respect and, last but not least, patronage. Hampers and baskets, also vases and boxes of flowers, are at all times in plain view, and present suggestions and ideas to any one entering. Oftentimes many of these arrangements go to waste, but they give prestige to the retailer who has energy enough to gain ideas and present them to his customers in a practical manner. An apology is no longer a necessity in the flower business as it was years ago. Suitable stock can be had at all times, though of course this varies with the season. The store man, who takes it for granted that a customer should know without being shown how to use flowers, is lost. It takes constant arrangement and a lot of new ideas to please the better class of trade. It was but a few years back that all customers looked alike to the clerk as they entered the store room. It is now necessary to grasp the idea of catering to different classes of people. The rich, the poor, the artistic, those of poor taste, those who want a lot for their money, those who want only the best, arranged in the most artistic manner, those who want certain color combinations, these qualities must all be grasped at a glance by the clerk, or he will lose many a customer who would have been well satisfied had the former been a judge of human nature. The clerk no longer presents his wares in the timid way of years gone by; he knows the value of his stock and is not to be bluffed by any customer, but stands firmly with any position he may take.

Advantage is now taken of the possibilities of each plant; a ribbon bow or cord placed in the proper manner and to the advantage of the plant, a pot cover in perfect harmony, a bit of moss or a little foliage, enhances the value from ten to fifty per cent. It is the neat and natty plant or flower that attracts and sells quicker and at a better figure than a more expensive plant carelessly arranged.

Better Transportation Facilities.

One of the most recent improvements the retailer has is the great network of interurban systems which is being built throughout the country. This is particularly true of my own state, Indiana. The close proximity of the greenhouse and the store, due to the electric lines, makes it possible for the retailer to have fresh stock at all times. There is no longer room for old stock, as this is many times due to carelessness in ordering. It only takes a telephone call, and fresh flowers will be on hand in a few hours, whereas in years gone by large amounts had to be ordered at one time.

New Views Taken by the Public.

As we all know, the day of the stereotyped flower piece is a thing of the past. The florist now confines his funeral work almost entirely to baskets, bunches, wreaths and blankets. The view is now taken by those who are accustomed to buying flowers that offerings are sent to lighten the suffering of the bereaved, not to make it look more funereal. As many colors are used as is consistent with good taste.

The general public now appreciates the various flower seasons. They understand that chrysanthemums are not to be had in March or Alpine violets in July. They look for the store man to have select, seasonable stock on hand at all times. It is possible for him to keep things moving briskly almost the entire year. The dull summer season is not nearly what it used to be, and the energetic tradesman can make much of it by handling and arranging the choicest obtainable stock. Seasonable novelties are now always sought for in the flower shops. Small turkeys, ducks, and various novelties must be on hand at Thanksgiving. Chimes, bells, wreaths, sleighs, etc., must be on hand for Christmas, and so on for every festive period. The public has learned to know that the flower shop is the proper place to obtain novelties which are not to be had elsewhere.

Flowers are no longer offered in receptacles which were formerly supposed to heighten the beauty of the contents by contrast with their shabbiness. The grower now affords good glass vases and his swell brother, the retailer, finer articles, not excluding cut glass, or precious metals.

Better System Used.

The growth of the retailer has been such that the modus operandi is patterned after the larger department stores, and matters are systemized so that, for instance, an employee who supposedly does nothing but wait on customers does not hide the broom or emerge from the cellar looking as if he had been in an encounter with the coal pile or moss bin.

The use of the telephone, long distance and local, in offering flowers is increasing with the enlightenment of the public in regard to them. A fair estimate of the amount sold in this manner is forty per cent of the gross sales, so the importance of having the phone answered in a proper manner is readily seen. The brainiest, shrewdest, best informed and most resourceful man in the establishment is now employed to answer the telephone. The fisherman at the phone must offer the most tempting bait, play with the game, hook the fish, reel it in and place it securely in the net before his work is accomplished. In many instances two or three telephones are placed in one store so the impatient customer may not turn to a competitor.

The art, and it is one, of arranging boxes of select, long-stemmed flowers, skilfully finished with violets, mignonette, pansies, and valleys, has now reached the point where to the uninitiated "Excelsior" need no longer be proclaimed. It is here where proof of skill, discernment of color and deftness in arrangement are most apparent. Oftentimes choice boxes are lined with silk and the exterior ornamented with bows of ribbon or bunches of violets, valleys and roses, softened with sprays of maidenhair and Farleyense ferns. This perfection in the make-up of cut flower boxes is one we may justly feel proud of. For the custom of sending fine boxes of beautiful flowers, like the American Beauty, gained prominence with us—the Americans.

A COLES HOUSE.

The accompanying illustration shows the interior of one of the new houses built by W. W. Coles, Kokomo, Ind. The house is 31x300 and was photographed before the glass was in the walls and before the benches were built. It is the King trussed construction, with cement walls three feet high, and four feet of glass, the plate supports being iron. The house is tied together by cross wires which remove the side pressure on the posts and the trussed purlin does away with the need for purlin posts.

CARNATIONS

CARNATION NOTES.—EAST.

Spraying vs. Syringing.

The present spell of bright days and cool nights is producing ideal weather for the establishment of recently benched plants. Of course the temperature during midday runs higher than is desirable, but it is just here where the observant grower can best employ both his time and personal attention to good advantage.

You will notice in the early morning (I take it you get around between 5 and 6 a. m.), how the plants have braced up during the night after a previous warm day. This is a good indication, but do not wait until flagging commences before applying a light spray.

Now, there is a vast difference between spraying and syringing as understood in greenhouse operations. By syringing is meant to apply directly, with force sufficient to dislodge some object, while we should define spraying as the act of scattering in minute particles.

With a medium force of water, aim the hose at an angle of about forty-five degrees over the bench, using the thumb or forefinger, direct the spray as high as possible over the plants without hitting the glass. Endeavor at all times to break up the water as fine as possible, thus forming a mist to descend lightly over the foliage.

It is not the amount of water used which benefits the plants, in fact the less applied at one time the better; but several times during the day, according to the weather, this spraying operation must be gone through until the plants show signs of taking hold, when spraying may be less frequent and in time may be discontinued.

During this critical time avoid draughts over the plants, but in no case keep the houses closed, producing stagnant atmosphere. That invites that dread disease, stem-rot, to pay a visit. Also arrange to spray so that the foliage will be dry over night.

I am every year more convinced that the improper use of bone meal, or the inferior quality of some grades, has much to do with stem-rot, but of that matter we will treat later.

CARNATION NOTES.—WEST.

Removing Old Foliage.

When you have reduced your syringing to once each day, so that the plants are dry overhead most of the day, and before you put in place the supports that are to hold the plants upright, it is a good time to look over the plants and take off all dead and diseased foliage. This should be done when the plants are quite dry, as the blades will snap off readily next to the stem, whereas if they are wet, they are likely to strip off the bark from the stems. You can get around the plants much handier before the supports are in place, and it is a good time to give the whole lot a good cleaning off.

What a difference there is in varieties. Some will transplant without losing a blade, while others will lose half the foliage in spite of anything you might be able to do, and oftentimes just the ones you would expect to have the least trouble with. To leave this dead foliage on the plants would be inviting disease later on, and it looks so unsightly.

Summer Pests.

A pest that usually gives us more or less trouble about a month after planting is the sow-bug or wood-louse. This bug is naturally a scavenger, but it also loves live carnation leaves, and if left undisturbed will chew up your plants considerably. It likes sugar better than carnations, and by mixing Paris green into the sugar and dropping a little here and there on the edge-boards, you can destroy it. Don't expect to get all of them with one dose, but repeat it several times, a week apart.

If your plants are affected with any of the fungous diseases, such as fairy-ring, or the common carnation spot, it will pay you to give them a dose of Bordeaux mixture or formalin. Use the formalin about 500 to one. This amounts to about one and one-sixth drachms to each gallon of water. Figuring a pint at a pound, there are 576 drachms in each gallon. The formalin is clear and will not color up the plants like the Bordeaux mixture. It is much less trouble to prepare and apply. Both are good for all such diseases. By washing it off with the nose you can apply the formalin every few days, but the Bordeaux mixture had better be left on several days before being washed off.

Spraying.

Don't wait until your place is overrun with greenfly before you fumigate or spray. As soon as the plants are well established, you should begin spraying them regularly once each week. Set a certain day of the week when you are best able to do it, and make it a fast rule to spray on that morning. You don't have to wait for a cool evening, or on anything else, when you employ this method of fighting aphis. You can spray any morning, rain or shine, whether you have to pick blooms or not. It makes no difference. After diluting the nicotine liquid in water, it is so nearly clear that it does not spot even the whitest bloom. It is more lasting in effect than fumigating with tobacco smoke, and I can assure you that unless you start out with a bad case of thrips, one application each week will keep your place clean.

On one plant, however, I want to warn you against using any of these liquid preparations, and that is the violet. They can't stand even the mildest applications. Why it is I cannot say, but numerous experiments have proven this conclusively.

When taking into account the effectiveness, the cleanliness, and the ease with which liquid nicotine can be used, I can not understand why any grower will stick to the old method of burning tobacco stems. A. F. J. BAUR.

SUPPLEMENTING CARNATIONS.

I am the owner of four houses 25x150 feet, and one lean-to 16x75 feet. In the four main houses I grow carnations; in the lean-to, which consists of three benches, I grow smilax, swainsona and some potted ferns, asparagus, and carnation cuttings.

Now I feel that I don't get enough out of the four main houses. What I want to get is a list of crops that I can use to follow up the carnations with in the early spring. As soon as a bench of carnations gets exhausted, and are not paying for bench room, I want to get rid of them at once, stir up my soil and plant something else right away. In the lean-to I use all of my empty space for freesias, narcissi and Harrisii, but as I have been in the business only a short time, I am not well enough acquainted with it to know just how to get the most out of it.

What varieties of summer carnations would you suggest? C. B. S.

If you grow carnations as they should be grown, they will occupy your benches the entire year, except the time required for refilling and repairing. If you can sell your carnation blooms at a fair figure up to the time for throwing them out, which is early in July, then you ought to get as much out of them as you could out of any other combination of crops. There are few early summer cut flower crops that could be planted after Easter, and be done with when you should begin to get your houses ready for replanting; so there is great danger of damaging the next season's carnation crop, by throwing it late, more than what you gain on the extra crop.

The retail grower can work in many odds and ends in the way of spring bedding plants that will take up lots of room, in fact all he cares to give up to them. If you are situated so that you can dispose of considerable quantities of geranium plants in the spring, you will find them a profitable crop to work in. You can carry them along in 2½-inch pots until March 1, at which time repotting into 4-inch should commence. You can throw out enough carnations at that time to hold them when set on the bench close together. Later on, in April, when you can spare more room, you can spread them out as they need it. These will all be gone by the middle of June, and your benches will be empty for next season's preparations.

Not all growers are situated so they can work this plan advantageously. We happen to be so situated, and we dispose of many thousand geraniums and other bedding plants; we think it pays us well, though we have never been able to grow eighty good 4-inch pot geraniums from one stock plant in one season. You can use up a limited amount of space for Memorial day flowers, such as candytuft, feverfew and ten weeks' stocks, etc., providing you can find sale for them. Some growers plant gladioli between the carnation rows. These should be planted about the middle of February. Red spider is their worst enemy.

Another crop that pays well is sweet peas. These must be sown before January 1. Plant half a dozen seeds about every six feet on the north edge of the bench. When they need support, put in a stout bamboo eight feet long, and tie to a wire near the top. If sown early in October, these will bloom by April, and will continue for two months if you keep them picked and watered. You can plant the winter-flowering varieties the same way, only plant by September 1. The first named will not harm your carnation plants any until late February or March, at which time they will start into a strong, rampant growth; they will keep you busy tying them up, for you must keep them growing upright if you want the best results.

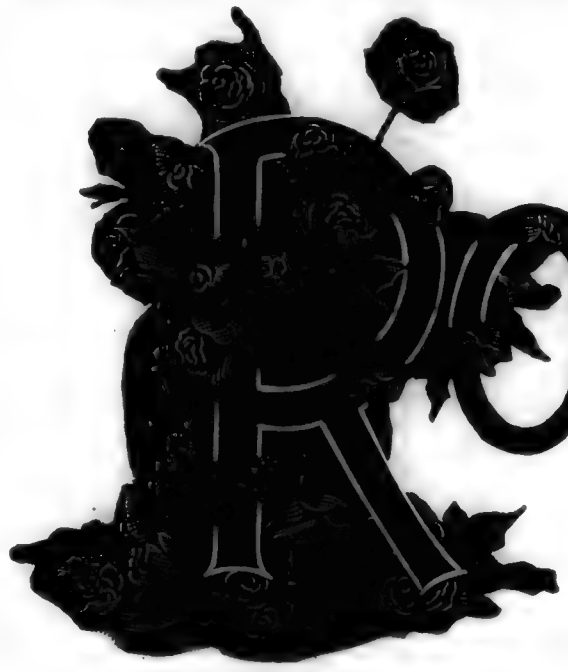
Planting Boston ferns or asters on the benches is a big mistake. They are never out of the way early enough not to interfere with replanting carnations.

Now, I want to add a word as to whether you are getting as much as you ought out of your houses. You say that you are new in the business, and in that case you are hardly competent to judge. If your carnations give you good crops of high grade blooms, covering the whole season, then you are getting all you can reasonably expect from your grower. After years of experience and application, you will learn to work in an extra crop here and there, and thereby add to your profits. Those are the fine points of the business which you must learn through daily experience.

Regarding summer carnations, I should say that we have found very little in them from a wholesale point of view. The time that fair indoor carnations cannot be obtained is so short that it does not pay to grow a separate lot to bloom during that period. If it were possible to get them into full crop just at that time, so that you could cut six or more blooms per plant during July and August, then it would pay fairly well, but you will find usually two or three blooms per plant during those two months, and a large crop in September and October, when you are cutting inside again. Some growers let their plants come into bloom in the field and depend on selling the plants late in the season. This is a bad practice. Others, again, after selecting their stock for benching, allow the balance to bloom until frost. This is all right and does no one any harm. We think a short season without carnation blooms does no harm, but rather stimulates the demand for them when they do come again. When the asters are in full crop and other outdoor flowers are to be had in plenty, the carnations would have to be sold cheap to be sold at all, which would tend to hold down the price all through the fall season. I should advise you, instead of trying for carnations in summer, to take up asters, summer lilies, gladioli and other flowers which naturally bloom in the summer. You will be surprised, if you have a good supply of these, how well you will get along for this short time without the carnations, and how welcome the first carnations will be when they do come in again.

A. F. J. Baur.



BUDS MALFORMED.

What is the trouble with my Mrs. Joost carnations? The flower buds all hold fast between the leaves, and find it a hard matter to unfold. The buds are, of course, in this way malformed. Otherwise the plants look good.

G. T. S.

Your complaint is a common one with this variety, though I don't think it serious. With a little careful handling during the next few weeks they will come around in good shape. You will find more or less of this trouble with Mrs. Joost after every severe check, and especially after transplanting plants that are strong and thrifty.

By starting them off slowly you can ward it off to some extent, and that is the plan for you to follow. Water them moderately and do all you can to encourage root action, by stirring the soil frequently, etc. Don't mulch or feed in any way as long as this malformation shows. Give all the air you can at all times. Sometimes thrips will cause the same trouble, and if it were some other variety I might think it was that, but we always noticed more or less of this same thing every year a few weeks after housing the plants, when we grew this variety, and after studying the matter carefully we concluded that it was caused by resuming growth too suddenly. The stronger the plants were the worse it seemed to be. A very rich soil made it worse. A. F. J. B.

CARE WITH TEMPERATURE.

Danger of Mildew.

As the season advances we may expect cooler nights, accompanied by more or less dampness from rains, fogs, etc., which will have the effect if not carefully watched of creating the conditions favorable to mildew.

Where the place is large enough to warrant the keeping of a night watchman, this need give little trouble. He can by keeping an eye on the outside temperature so regulate the ventilation that no sudden change of temperature occurs. But in the large number of places where the extent of glass may not reach 30,000 feet, and where even the half of that may not be devoted to roses, keeping a night watchman during the summer months appears in most cases too big a drain on the prospective profits to be safely indulged in. The ingenuity and skill required to overcome these unfavorable conditions at small cost will be the cause of many anxious hours.

It is good policy to run no risks at this season, and whenever the thermometer outside indicates an approach to 56 degrees it is safe to apply a little firing. Especially is this the case if the fall in temperature is accompanied by rain.

If this pest is not suppressed in its initial stage, it spreads rapidly and works sad havoc among the growths and foliage, tender at this time.

If firing has to be resorted to this early in the season, care will be needed not to get the foliage too soft, a condition which is easily acquired, but from which it is difficult to escape before the winter begins. This can be obviated by careful watering and ample but judicious ventilation.

When necessary to fire up every advantage should be taken of the opportunity to paint the pipes with the sulphur mixture to hold the pest in check.

Ribes.

ROSES IN POTS.

The rose always has been a popular subject, whether grown for cut blooms or in pots as a flowering plant. The latter are now splendidly grown, and put on the market from early spring. At one time it was only hybrid perpetuals that were utilized for the purpose, but with the advent of the rambler class other sections came in vogue, and we now see nearly all represented except the weaker-growing teas.

Many stalls are gay in Covent Garden in the spring with Crimson Rambler carrying wreaths of roses six and eight feet long. They are curled around the stakes, so that the decorator can easily unfasten them and place them in any position required. The pink rambler, Dorothy Perkins, has also come to stay, for it makes a good show and is just as easily grown as the crimson variety. The more recent variety, Lady Gay, will no doubt appear on the market next season. The polyantha roses, White Pet and Red Pet, have long been popular as market plants, and when grown well make dense little bushes about fifteen inches high, which renders them valuable for decorative work. Madame N. Levavasseur has also "taken on" and is now grown in large quantities.

The best of the hybrid perpetuals and hybrid teas that one sees most plentifully are Mrs. J. Laing, General Jacqueminot, La France, Ulrich Brunner, Captain Hayward, Frau Karl Druschki, John Hopper, Mrs. R. Sharman Crawford, Duke of Edinburgh, Baroness Rothschild, Merveille de Lyon and Caroline Testout. Most of these are sent to market in 5-inch pots.

The plants are grown by two methods, to meet the requirements of the different classes of trade. The first is that where the plants are grown right through in pots; they make fine plants and can be forced into bloom quite early. These are grown for the better class of trade, and they are decidedly superior. The other method allows the grower to sell more cheaply, which suits the general trade. The bushes are brought in during the early autumn months and potted at once in 5-inch pots. Some growers plunge them in ashes, while others stand them closely on a bed of ashes. They become well rooted before Christmas, and can then be forced or plants are pruned hard so as to obtain good dwarf plants. Successional crops are obtained by placing the plants in heat in batches. After this they do not require more cultural skill than the majority of market plants. When in active growth a little feeding is resorted to. As soon as the blooms show color they are put on the market, and, generally speaking, prove to be a paying crop. Greenfly and mildew are treated in the usual way.

No doubt our market roses will be added to largely in the near future, for the best growers are always on the lookout for new varieties that are suitable, so as to place them on the market first. —Gardeners' Magazine.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS.

Feeding.

Stock that was benched in May, and also plants that are being grown continuously in pots, will now be greatly benefited by feeding lightly to keep them on the move, and nothing is better to start with than a light mulch of well rotted manure. This mulch keeps the soil uniformly moist and cool, and before it is applied the beds should have a coat of either fine bone or Scotch soot spread over them. Make this coat very thin, and remember that it is better to apply it at three or four different times than to give one strong dose and kill the young, delicate fiber of the roots.

Do not use fresh manure for the mulch. If I could get nothing but fresh manure I should use nothing at all, because it will do more harm than good. I have before now seen the foliage killed half-way up the stem by the ammonia rising from fresh cow manure, and when it burns the top growth in such a manner, the disastrous effect on the roots may easily be imagined.

It is a safe rule never to feed a plant unless it is well established. Feeding a newly potted plant is altogether wrong. In the first place, the plant does not need it, since the new soil gives ample food for present needs, and until the roots have reached the sides of the pot again any liquid applied will only sour the soil and retard root action, instead of encouraging it. In the second place, it is only a waste of time and good material.

Chemical fertilizers are invaluable aids to the up-to-date cultivator, and while there are several others that are used more or less, I pin my faith to sulphate of ammonia and nitrate of potash. The quickest and safest way I know of to use either of these is to put two 4-inch potfuls of the chemicals into a 50-gallon kerosene can, and use through the Kinney pump. This makes a safe proportion, and will harm nothing. If chemicals are used one week and liquid made from natural manures another week, the plants will be greatly benefited by it.

The chrysanthemum will stand almost anything in the way of feeding after it has been gradually introduced to it, but always begin weak and gradually make the liquid stronger. Keep on the safe side, anyway, till we get the cooler weather. It is not wise to be dosing a plant to the limit with the temperature in the nineties. September is the month when feeding tells the most. Then the bud is swelling and the food is not being diverted to making growth, and as the plant is preparing for its final effort in flowering it is in a more receptive mood.

Every year we see or hear of some one who has overfed his plants and lost a good part of the crop. This makes it seem to a beginner as though it is playing with fire to use chemicals on mums, and yet the fact remains that all our best cultivators use them. Once a man has gained sufficient experience in their use to know when to feed and when not to feed, he is on the highroad to success.

Disbudding.

Disbudding now occupies a large part of the time, and it is safe to take most any kind of a bud from now on. This work should be done in the early morning, because then the shoots are brittle and will easily snap out, reducing the chances of injuring the bud to a minimum. After a hot day the tips of the plants are in a more or less wilted condition and the buds cannot be handled nearly so quickly.

Insects.

After the bud begins to swell there is frequently some fly to be seen around the covering. Before the bud shows color, this fly can be cleaned out by dusting with tobacco dust. Don't be afraid of putting on too much. If the dust is good it will injure nothing but the fly, and will save you some heartburning later on. There is nothing much worse than a dirty chrysanthemum flower, and the present time is none too soon to begin to keep it clean. The most common insect next to the fly is the grasshopper, which some seasons will do much damage by eating through the tender shoot just below the bud, making the plant a total loss, or eating half the bud away and causing the plant to produce a malformed flower. Either way the grasshopper is a nuisance and must be reckoned with. This year I have not seen many in this section up to date, owing doubtless to the quantity of rain that we have had, but other places report about the usual crop. When they are particularly numerous and hand-picking is of no avail, Paris green mixed with water and sprayed on will be found effective; only don't get the mixture strong. Just enough to see the color in the water is all that is necessary; a stronger dose will burn the foliage.

This dose will also clean off caterpillars quicker than anything else, though this year I have seen fewer caterpillars on the plants than for a long time past. For this relief we are thankful.

Cleaning Out Suckers.

As the plants get disbudded, the suckers and side shoots will appear in increasing numbers, and these must be taken in hand, both literally and figuratively, early in the game. In cleaning out the suckers don't let the help use a knife around the plants. Suckers should be pulled out and not cut, as the careless use of the knife will result in cutting many roots, and may cause a serious check.

Getting in Plants from Outside.

The first week in September is about the best time to dig up the plants that have been growing outside, and transfer them to pots and boxes. Take up the plants carefully, and don't attempt to squeeze them into a pot that is too small, as they will make considerable growth yet, both in root and top. If you chop around the plants with a spade a few days before they are lifted, the check will not be nearly so severe, as new fibers will be in course of formation and will take hold quicker in the new soil.

Shade the plants after they are potted, and spray over several times a day to keep them from wilting. Handled in this manner, they hardly lose a leaf.

Charles H. Totty.

RUST ON CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

Will you please tell me a remedy, if there is one, for rust on chrysanthemums? It is not bad, only a leaf or two now and then that look like rust.

C. L. T.

The best thing for rust, in my opinion, is sulphide of potassium, commonly called liver of sulphur. This can be procured at a drug store, and should be used in the proportion of one ounce to two gallons of water. Use a sprayer that will throw a fine spray, and be sure that the under side of the leaves is saturated with the liquid. This will dry up the spores and prevent the rust from spreading.

C. L. T. says he has just a leaf now and then that looks like rust. He need be under no misapprehension as to whether or not it is rust, if he ever saw it on carnations. The chrysanthemum rust looks practically the same as the carnation rust. If the trouble is not rust, but merely a leaf spot, the potassium sulphide is about the best thing to use, and it is also a good thing to use for mildew. C. H. T.

NOTES FROM ENGLAND.

Lilium candidum on the English market, either forced or cut from outside, has almost entirely disappeared, hardly a bunch having been seen throughout the whole season. This no doubt is the result of the continual failures experienced with imported bulbs. Almost the entire importations from France, Italy and the south of Germany for some years have been full of disease, and otherwise unfit for forcing. Some lots grown in Holland and in the north of Germany have been good, but their culture does not appear to be taken up very extensively in these northern districts. After years of experience it appears pretty certain that to force successfully, L. candidum bulbs must be grown in a cold climate.

In England large clumps of Lilium candidum may frequently be found in cottage gardens in the very pink of health and vigor. On digging up these clumps it is often found that they contain half a dozen or so immense bulbs, the largest sometimes fourteen inches in circumference, with fat, healthy scales. These bulbs usually have been standing undisturbed for from four to ten years, and the soil they grow in is usually very rich in fertile matter. The growths often reach as much as five feet high. If these bulbs are forced, they are always a perfect success. Even for the earliest forcing there never appears the slightest sign of the dreaded mildew or rust, which practically ruins all imported bulbs. Success with these bulbs indicates that if a grower for profit gave his bulbs rich land and let them stand without being disturbed for at least five years, some fine forcing stuff would be produced. One man grows these bulbs successfully; they are lifted every five years and when being planted the bulbs are thickly covered with sulphur. During winter the growths get a heavy dressing of soot; and after the stems have died down a mulching of rotten manure is given.

All movings must be done in August, as in no other month of the year will candidums stand replanting. A good method where the room can be spared is to pot up bulbs intended for forcing a year before in 8-inch pots, and plunge the pots outside, allowing them to bloom one year in this form. Bring them under glass the second year, and liberally feed them during the whole time of growth when under glass. This gives them time to get established before being forced.

Some of our leading flower shows have adopted an effective and satisfactory method for cooling the show tents during the recent hot weather. They keep a continual fine spray of water playing on the roofs. This process makes the inside of the tents delightfully cool.

Palms of all sizes and all sorts still continue to advance in price all over England, and most of the big palm houses around London are getting pretty well cleaned out. Belgium is still buying from English growers, where there is an opportunity to procure small stock plants, causing prices here to advance still further. B. J.

HARRISII LILIES.

When should Harrisii lilies, just potted, be brought into the house for forcing for Christmas? That is, how much time should be given them to root before being brought into the heat? What temperature should be given the Japan longiflorum bulbs for forcing for next Easter? How many weeks should be given them to root? E. S. B.

There is no arbitrary time when these lilies should be brought into the greenhouse after potting. It depends on when you want them to flower, and still more on their condition of earliness. When they have made a leaf and stem growth of two to three inches above the soil in pots they will be well rooted and can be given the heat of the greenhouse. If the bulbs have been dug in Bermuda before they were thoroughly ripe, they don't force well.

There is a large firm not far from us that is uniformly successful in forcing these lilies, being able to cut thousands by Thanksgiving. To accomplish this the plants are allowed to get well rooted outside, then are brought in and given about 70 degrees at night for the first month. After that, if it is seen to be necessary, they are given a heat of 90 degrees.

The Japan longiflorum bulbs usually arrive in September. They are potted and left in a frame outside until the first of December, or even two or three weeks later. The date of Easter will have much to do with the forcing. Begin at 55 to 60 degrees when first brought in. It may be necessary to raise the temperature to 70 degrees by flowering time. There is one feature connected with this class of lilies that is easy to observe. If subject to a night temperature of 60 degrees, don't drop them to 50 degrees. They don't like it. This lowering of temperature near their flowering time is unnatural. They just stand still. It stunts them. After the flower buds turn white, and are ready to expand, they can be removed to a cool house and will open their flowers all right, but up to that time keep them going without any lowering of temperature. Vegetable Forcing.

CHRISTMAS VEGETABLES.

I should like to know the proper time to sow lettuce and radish seeds to have them ready for market about Christmas. What varieties are best for this purpose, and what temperature should they be grown in? N. H. G.

To have lettuce for Christmas you will need to sow your seed not later than the last week in September. It takes about three months from the time of sowing, as it is a crop that won't stand pushing. A night temperature of from 40 to 45 degrees is the most suitable, with a rise of from 10 to 20 degrees by day, according to the brightness or cloudiness of the weather.

The easiest variety to handle is Grand Rapids, but this is not a head lettuce, and some object to it on that account. When it is necessary to grow a head lettuce, I should recommend Deacon, although it is slower in growth than some other varieties, such as Tennis Ball and Boston Market. I find it less subject to fungous diseases.

Radishes can be grown in the same temperature as lettuce, but will stand about 5 degrees higher if desired. In a temperature of from 45 to 50 degrees it takes about three weeks for them to mature from the time the seed is sown, but in the cooler temperature four weeks had better be allowed. The best variety we have yet tried is Rapid Forcing. This is of fine quality, quick to mature, and, having a very dwarf top, can be sown closer than most other varieties.

W. S. Croydon.

FORCING CUCUMBERS.

Under the stimulus of forcing work, two distinct types of cucumbers have been developed, says L. C. Corbett in a recent bulletin of the department of agriculture. These are recognized in the trade as the English type and the American type. The English type is purely a product of forcing-house conditions, as the climate of England is not congenial to the growth and development of the cucumber in the open. The American type of cucumber is primarily a product of field conditions, and the few varieties which have been developed to meet the requirements of the forcing house are simply modifications of the existing field or outdoor forms.

The English type of cucumber is a long, cylindrical, uniformly green fruit, with few seeds and a very fleshy seed cavity; in fact, the normal seed cavity of the forced cucumber is almost entirely wanting. The triangular shape characteristic of the normal outdoor cucumber has been lost, and the cylindrical outline almost perfected. There is considerable difference in the size and length of the various English varieties of cucumbers, but they all conform in general to the description above given.

The American type of cucumber is primarily grown in the field, the product to be used either for pickling or for slicing. Forcing cucumbers in America is confined to those varieties which produce large fruits suitable for slicing. Only three or four of the better and larger field varieties are adapted to this purpose. Notable among these is the White Spine, the Arlington White Spine being the variety which has been especially developed for forcing. The Long Green, or a modification of it, is also sometimes used, but aside from these two varieties there are few that ever find their way into the forcing house. Such varieties as the Boston Pickling, Chicago Pickling, and the cluster varieties in general are not adapted to forcing purposes.

The American ideal for a forcing cucumber is based, of course, upon the outdoor-grown fruit, and in general shape and size the fruits must conform to the best of such fruits. The ideal forcing cucumber for the American market has a slender form, good length, is cylindrical rather than triangular in shape, and of a uniform green color throughout. At the present time there is no variety upon the market which possesses all of these characteristics. The White Spine is objectionable because of the white markings of the greater percentage of these fruits, and now and then an albino appears, which is of course exceedingly objectionable for forcing purposes. The chief objection to white markings upon cucumbers is that as soon as the fruits are removed from the plant these markings have a tendency to turn yellow, indicating age and deterioration. Fruits which are uniformly green in coloring do not show these changes so quickly, and if they are well preserved in cold storage, so as to maintain their crispness of texture, they can be held upon the market much longer than those showing the white markings. From the standpoint of the buyer this characteristic of the white markings is an advantage, in that the purchaser can determine whether or not the cucumbers have been upon the market any length of time by the amount of yellow coloring shown upon the white areas.

SOWING LETTUCE.

When is the time to sow Boston Market lettuce to have a crop in by November or December? G. T. S.

If you want to have Boston Market lettuce ready in November, you don't want to lose any time in getting your seed sown. For our November crop we sow the seed about the middle of August, and transplant into coldframes as soon as it is large enough. We use coldframes for our supply up to the middle of December, as we find the plants do better and are easier handled in frames than in the greenhouse up to that date. We make three sowings for frame work, at intervals of two weeks apart, the last sowing being made about the middle of September.

The first sowing for greenhouse work is made about the end of September. This crop we depend on coming in for Christmas. It is a pretty safe rule to count on three months from the time of sowing to the time of maturity. The time may vary a little, according to weather conditions, but this can be taken safely as a rule. W. S. Croydon.

BOSTON.

The Market.

While there is no great amount of business, conditions show some improvement. Carnations, except from outdoors, are rather scarce and bring $1.50 to $2 per hundred. There are plenty of roses at the previous week's prices. Sweet peas have reappeared with the clear, warm weather we are now having and sell at from 20 cents to 25 cents per hundred. Gladioli continue of good quality. Some from a distance, however, are rather poor. Asters continue plentiful. Lilium auratum and Harrisii are seen, and outdoor-grown L. speciosum appeared this week. Green stuff remains about the same.

Various Notes.

S. J. Goddard has returned from a vacation in Maine, where he enjoyed excellent sport with the finny tribe.

The annual show of plants and flowers occurs at Horticultural hall September 5 and 6. Dahlias will be the star feature among the cut flowers.

Thomas Pegler, who has taken houses at Wollaston to grow double violets, will in the future sell only his own flowers and carnations, etc., from S. J. Goddard at the Park street market.

August is giving us clearer skies than July. In fifteen days we had but one shower and with some shade temperatures over 90 degrees a little more moisture would now not come amiss.

Peirce Bros.' delivery team broke down on August 23 on the way to Faneuil hall market. One hundred bushels of tomatoes which were aboard were mostly spoiled.

E. Allen Peirce has gone on a two weeks' auto trip to Portland, Me., with friends.

Bert Mehegan, of Cambridge, better known as "Wadey," is spending a vacation in Maine.

The auction sale of stalls at the Music hall market will occur September 1. A good sale is expected.

E. Ragan, who has been salesman at Park street for Mrs. David Fisher's estate, has resigned to accept a similar position for H. N. Eaton, of South Sudbury.

Abe Goldberg, a well-known street flower salesman, is dangerously ill.

The police are on the lookout for the treasurer of one of our retail florists, who has absconded with a large sum of money.

The auction sale of stalls at the Park street flower market will occur on September 8. A record-breaking sale is expected.

J. J. McCormick, of Malden, is away on a trip to New York, Philadelphia and Baltimore, and expects to be able to give his confreres some experiences on his return. He has just completed arrangements for a greenhouse 25x75.

Applications are already coming in for the next meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club on September 18. An addition of forty members is expected that night.

W. W. Rawson & Co. are now getting nicely settled in their new quarters, all ready for fall trade.

The local delegation to the Dayton convention was small. To Philadelphia in 1907 it should be a big one.

H. E. Fiske Seed Co. is rushing preparations for the new seed store at 12 and 13 Faneuil hall square, lately occupied by W. W. Rawson & Co. This new firm should do well, as the various members are well and favorably known.

The Massachusetts Horticultural Society has just issued an advance schedule for the March and May exhibitions in 1907, also a list of the special prizes for dinner table decorations to be given at the coming chrysanthemum show.

European vacationists are now returning. A few of the craft will wait until September for their holidays, but the majority will get right down to business after Labor day. W. N. Craig.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Marie C. Schmitz is intending to rebuild her greenhouses; the improvement will cost $200.

Denison, Tex.—The decorations for the Denison flower show, to be held November 8 to 10, will be in charge of T. P. Gorman, who was one of the principal decorators at the St. Louis fair.

STARTING EUONYMUS.

Kindly advise me as to the proper material in which to root euonymus, and if the method varies any with the seasons. J. P. S.

Some varieties, such as Europæus, alatus and atropurpureus, are usually propagated by seeds sown in early spring, or well ripened pieces of wood in autumn, in a coldframe. The increasingly popular evergreen varieties, Europæus and radicans, root freely at this season from top cuttings, which have run along the ground or been against a wall. Plant thickly in a frame, water freely and shade for two or three weeks, and few will miss making plants.

Propagation may be made from July 1 to September in a frame, earlier or later in a greenhouse. Layering is another method, but stock can be so rapidly made from cuttings that it is much the simplest plan. From cuttings put in during July, 1905, we now have plants four feet high on walls. This plant is also desirable as a shrub, but its special value lies in its adaptability for covering rocks, bowlders, fences and walls. We have never found it to kill at all in the most severe weather, and it is the most satisfactory evergreen climber we have in New England. W. N. C.

ASPARAGUS.

Can you give us some points on the best method of growing asparagus, both plumosus and Sprengeri? What is considered the correct distance for setting? How many cuttings a year should a well grown bed furnish? How many strings to a plant at one cutting of plumosus, and how many strings to a plant in a year, would be a fair estimate? What combination of soil is generally considered best for asparagus? S. H. S.

There is considerable difference in the methods of growing plumosus and Sprengeri. We shall first consider plumosus. It is principally grown for long, stringlike vines for decorating and has no competitor as a decorative plant. The less you attempt to make it conform to any formal space or attitude the better. Throw it up against a mirror or suspend it from an archway; it is grace and beauty, and the hand of the artist cannot improve it. The best time to plant it to be most profitable is during the months of June or July, but it can be planted any time of the year. One foot apart each way is a proper distance. Don't expect to divide the growth of one plant. A single growth would hardly be full enough for decorative purposes.

On one inquiry I can speak with fullest authority and experience. Make your Asparagus plumosus bed on the floor of your greenhouse unless it be gravel or cement. A clay, or sand, or bog, or anything your greenhouse is built on, let that be the foundation of your plumosus bed. I shall quote once more the words of the foremost asparagus grower of this country, William H. Elliott, of New England, who said to the writer, when the latter was in distress, "Never divorce asparagus from Mother Earth." That was good advice, and the truth. If you are a practical gardener you will know what an avaricious feeder the whole of the asparagus family is. In the old works on gardening on "How to make an asparagus bed," you are told to excavate three feet deep, put in all the bones you can collect, any dead horses or cows lying around, and your mother-in-law, to make the growth prolific. In short, the asparagus family are gross feeders and cannot be overdone with nourishment.

In addition to the long twining growths of Asparagus plumosus, there are always a lot of short, stunted growths which are in great demand. These should not be cut until they are matured.

Plumosus is often grown on a side bench alone, for the object of cutting these short sprays, when the strong growths that would run up should be pinched to induce lateral growth. This is, I think, not a profitable system of cultivation, because a bed will give you the long strings, and also plenty of the short, useful growths.

Asparagus Sprengeri.

This is a plant of different habit, although partaking like all members of its family of a strong appetite for all vegetable stimulants. Its mass of roots or tubers, if not sustained with food, soon become exhausted, and little growth follows. A bed fifteen or eighteen inches deep of heavy, rich soil would grow it for several years, but would this be profitable? We doubt it. Far less will it be profitable in six inches of soil on a raised bench. The first and best method of growing this useful asparagus, we notice, was at Peter Crowe's, of Utica, N. Y., who also struck pay dirt in growing the adiantum which now bears his name. He has several ranges of rose houses, all connected, with no partition between them, cedar posts supporting the gutters and a narrow path on each side of the posts. We think a 2-inch pipe supporting the gutter is better than cedar posts, less expensive and obstructs less light. Anyway, between the posts and beneath the steam pipes there is a space not used. Here Mr. Crowe put a lot of English glass boxes to good use. The English glass box contains 100 square feet. Ours holds fifty feet. The former is eight inches wide, sixteen inches high and two feet long. These he stood on end and filled with the same material as his rose beds and planted in each box three plants of Asparagus Sprengeri. They are a very valuable asset to the profits of these houses, and we hastened home to follow his example. You may not have these English glass boxes and you may not have these modernly built houses affording such a place, but you will glean from the above what Asparagus Sprengeri needs: A lot of root room, a heavy, rich soil, lots of liquid manure and a night temperature of 60 degrees. W. S.

YORK CITY, PA.—B. H. Ellis has begun the erection of greenhouses on Chestnut street.

LOWELL, MASS.—J. J. McMannion has a field of fine phloxes which attract much public notice.

STERLING, ILL.—The Sterling Floral Co. is building an extensive addition to its greenhouses this summer. Robert Lundstrom is manager for the company.

PATERSON, N. J.—The Second Ward Dahlia and Flower Association has set the dates for its first show of the season, to take place about the middle of September. Its former shows have always been successful.

The Great Central Market.

Convention week is always a dull one in this market and this year it was no exception to the rule. This week, however, started off with a more brisk demand and all good stock is readily taken, except the summer flowers, which are in oversupply.

The crops of Beauty are steadily increasing and good length of stem is now obtained from the young plants. The demand absorbs all receipts, at moderate prices. Of Bride and Bridesmaid the supply is large, but in general the quality is poor. The cut from old plants shows unattractive foliage; from the young plants the stems are short. The best of these roses move quickly and the balance is difficult to dispose of except to the buyers of job lots, who are not keen these summer days. Richmond is abundant, but pops open so quickly that it is hard to handle.

Outdoor carnations are abundant, though not of good quality. The first cut from indoor stock is beginning to arrive, with clean flowers, but short in stem. The late asters are many of them of superb quality, and carnations are in little demand, for there are more good asters than the volume of business calls for. A few auratum lilies still are on the market and there are many lancifoliums and longiflorums. Gladioli still are in large supply and selling slowly. Some of the stock is superb. Dahlias are becoming something of a problem, for they are not readily salable in quantity in this market. Other outdoor flowers are in large supply and not of much use, save for window decorations. Green goods of all descriptions are abundant.

Various Notes.

In John Mangel's window August 27 there was a sign: "Chrysanthemums, first of the season." The Winterson Co. has had yellow mums for some time.

Announcements have been received of the marriage of Hugh W. Woel and Miss Ethel Gertrude Rough, the ceremony having been performed at Muskoka Lake, Can., August 22. Mr. Woel is shipping clerk for Bassett & Washburn and his bride was at one time employed in the supply department at E. H. Hunt's. They will be at home at 6721 St. Lawrence avenue after September 12.

C. L. Washburn left on Saturday to join his son at Sault Ste. Marie for a fortnight's fishing and hunting trip north into Canada beyond the beaten track.

J. J. Curran started Monday on a week's eastern trip.

J. Enzweiler lost a ten-months-old son on Sunday.

E. E. Pieser, of the Kennicott Bros. Co., is at Saratoga this week.

L. Coatsworth returned on Saturday from a four days' trip to his old home in Canada, where he left his family. He will rejoin them in the course of a week or so.

F. F. Benthey spent several days at the Benthey-Coatsworth plant at New Castle following the convention.

Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Deamud will make an eastern pleasure trip during the next fortnight.

Adam Zender was 50 years old on Sunday. His neighbors helped him celebrate the event and each of the gentlemen brought as a remembrance fifty copper pennies.

A. C. Spencer says that if the Mrs. Marshall Field rose makes good its present promise, it will this season be the greatest hit Peter Reinberg ever has made.

N. J. Wietor says that this month is making the best record of any August since Wietor Bros. started in business. A fine cut of Beauty is a material assistance.

W. E. Lynch, of E. H. Hunt's, returned from Massachusetts on Friday and went home ill, threatened with typhoid fever.

en route home from the Dayton convention. Among those encountered were Emil Schloss, A. L. Barnett and S. B. Wertheimer, New York; Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Kalisch, St. Louis; Mr. and Mrs. U. J. Virgin, New Orleans; C. P. Mueller, Wichita, Kan.; Miss Lotta Baker, Ottumwa, Ia.; Henry Goetz, Saginaw, Mich.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

There is no improvement worthy of mention in the wholesale cut flower business in New York. It will take another week to turn the tide. The market has been crowded with everything, but especially with asters, of which there seems to be no limit. American Beauty roses will be abundant this season if present shipments are an indication. There are already enough and to spare. Good carnations are limited and fair prices are obtained. Gladioli and hydrangeas simply overwhelm all else in quantity and display, and serve at least the laudable end of profuse window decoration.

Various Notes.

The Pierson U-Bar Co. on Monday received a telegraphic request from a party at New Orleans from whom they had never before heard, asking for a price on a house involving some thousands of dollars. In reply to their wire, the southern chap sent his order. That is going some.

We have an illustration of an all-the-year-around garden near New York that is an interesting study, and teaches a lesson worthy of consideration, as do the practical developments of the Cash Register Co. in home adornments. In Llewellyn Park, N. J., Mrs. A. J. Stewart has a glass enclosed garden. In February the dogwood blossoms. All the year around, the lawn-mower is run between the beds. At one side, under the shelter of a blossoming magnolia and near the trickling of water over moss-covered tufa stones, Mrs. Stewart entertains her friends. It is a simple even-span house.

W. A. Burnham, president of the Lord & Burnham Co., is spending three months in Europe, not only on a pleasure trip, but to see what the old country has done and is doing along horticultural lines.

Up to the present time, the greenhouse concerns have turned out rather unsatisfactory and illy-printed catalogs. It seems that Lincoln Pierson, president of the Pierson U-Bar Co., has been studying this catalog proposition for some five or six years and the fruits of his labor are shown in the 72-page book they have recently issued. He is to be congratulated on having set such a catalog pace for the other concerns.

Hitchings & Co., alive to the vital importance and interest of cuts employed in their advertising, in folder and catalog work, have organized a photographic department of their own. Along these lines, it is self-evident that in the advertising of the various greenhouse concerns, the aim is actually to tell something. The advertisements are really conversations about the actual things that the greenhouse concerns do.

George Sarres, of 211 West One Hundred and Twenty-fourth street, was recently shot in the eye by a small boy with a rifle. The eyesight will not be affected. Sarres runs a plant stand in front of the Pabst palm garden.

The New York conventionists are gradually and safely arriving home, every one enthusiastic and with only good things to say of everything but the weather, and even that was quite as hot and as humid at home as in Dayton. A goodly number stopped over at Buffalo and Niagara Falls and delightful visits were made at William Scott's, Palmer's, Anderson's and the other prominent florists of the Bison city. Several spent Saturday at the Falls, and realized a little of their self-sacrifice in foregoing the advantages of this great natural convention center. The genial mayor was greatly disappointed—but is a good loser and is coming to Philadelphia to plead his cause another year, with the Buffalo boys behind him. Some day there will be an S. A. F. convention at Niagara Falls.

The trip west was most delightful. The committee that selected the N. Y. C. received no adverse criticism. From humidity and 90 degrees of depressing heat we swept into cooling rains and a delightful temperature, so that from Utica onward the benign character of Peter Crowe served to hover over the journey, and all went "merry as a marriage bell."

I said a fortnight ago that New York would send over fifty on its special train to the Dayton convention. It is always satisfactory to find one's prophesies fulfilled. When all the noses were counted at Albany there were fifty-two.

J. B. Nugent, Jr., unable to accompany the conventionists, did not forget his mission in behalf of the "inner man and woman," and an abundance of all things needful to tickle the palate was supplied; members of the New York Florists' Club and their friends had enough and to spare. Music and song, innocent games of skilful card manipulation and discussions of convention matters whiled away the passing hours. At midnight every one was sleeping the sleep of the just save those in the neighborhood of Esler and Buerlein.

Frank Traendly was devotion itself to the interests of the ladies and the dispensation of food and fruits, and Ed. Dorval was a competent lieutenant.

Mr. Elliott did good service in behalf of the national flower show.

At Rochester two more enthusiasts joined the company—Fred W. and Chas. H. Vick, both of whom are ambitious to have the S. A. F. honor the Flower City with one of its conventions. In fact, if Mr. Elliott's suggestions are carried out it will be some such central and beautiful city as Rochester that will be chosen for the great national flower show, concerning which a large measure of the interest of the present convention will be manifested. The usual vote by the ladies as to the handsomest man on board resulted in a tie, Langjahr and Lenker carrying off the honors.

J. Austin Shaw.

INDIANAPOLIS.

Among the many successes attending the S. A. F. convention at Dayton, that gained by the sun will not be forgotten soon. It certainly was a hot convention, but in spite of the heat the attendance was large. The number of ladies was noticeable, and caused much favorable comment. It is to be hoped their number will increase each year. The exhibits also were up to the standard, and no doubt the convention of 1906 will go down in history as a great success. The Dayton florists can feel justly proud of the result of their efforts. Quite a number went over from this city, including John Bertermann, A. Wiegand, William Billingsley, Irvin Bertermann and wife, John Heidenreich, Carl Sonnenschmidt, George Wiegand, Alvin Schrieber, F. S. Smith and others.

A. Wiegand and wife start for Honolulu this week. They will be away about three months. S.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

It will hardly do to say that conditions are the same as reported last week. The continuous rains have completely spoiled outdoor flowers, causing a better demand for the rather moderate quantity of locally grown indoor stock. Asters are the feature of the market. Semple's are now arriving in sufficient quantities to fill the long felt want for choice blooms of this summer favorite. It seems that local growers are unable to supply this market. Rochester is furnishing some of the finest asters now coming into town. All colors are selling well, possibly excepting the pale or Daybreak pink. Roses are scarce and in fair demand. Carnations are a little more plentiful. The requirements of some regular buyers, cut out during the scarcity, are now being filled. Gladioli are in oversupply; the choice varieties, notably America, appear to be over. Tuberoses are plentiful and sell moderately well. A limited quantity of greens sells at fair prices. Taken all in all, business is fully up to the summer standard.

The Politics of Flowers.

Scarcely had the street recovered from the surprise of the Pennock-Meehan combination of two weeks ago, when it was announced last Tuesday that H. Bayersdorfer & Co. had taken the five-story building at 1129 Arch street for their main office and warehouses, to be occupied as soon as the steam heating, electric elevators and other modern improvements have been completed.

In discussing these changes, the street agrees that the Pennock-Meehan combination is a strong one. S. S. Pennock is accorded general approbation for winning the aid of one of his strongest competitors, and thereby strengthening the wholesale center which he has been steadily advocating west of Broad street. Whether Charles E. Meehan will be able to take with him his entire following in the Philadelphia Wholesale Flower Market is not yet known. The street, however, believes that Alfred Burton will go with him, and probably some of the other consignors; but confidently affirms that John Burton (represented by William Stevens), William J. Moore, Berger Bros. and several other stall holders will remain in the Market building, though under what arrangements is not now known. The wholesalers east of Broad street, who look serious over the deflection of the Market chief, once more assumed a fearful mien when the addition of Bayersdorfer & Co. to their colony was made known. For they argued that with the two great supply houses close by, the center of the wholesale business must lie between the terminals east of Broad street.

Various Notes.

A. M. Campbell, who has gained a wide experience in wholesaling cut flowers for Robert Craig & Son, the Leo Niessen Co., Samuel S. Pennock and Edward Reid, will next Monday open a new commission house at 1510 Sansom street. Mr. Campbell has the best wishes of his friends.

Visitors reported by M. Rice & Co.: D. L. Mish, of Lebanon, Pa.; J. L. Radclift, of Richmond, Va.; William Lauch and Mrs. Lauch, of Pittsburg, Pa.; Mrs. J. M. Eison and J. Clifton, of Columbia, S. C., and F. L. Washburn, of Bloomington, Ill.

Paul Berkowitz, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., was seen at his office this week. He reports good business at the convention, and enjoyed his visit to Dayton.

Richard Umphried, of the Philadelphia Wholesale Flower Market, returned from his holiday last week. He visited the Delaware Water Gap, then went by sea to Baltimore and Washington, winding up a pleasant trip with two days at Atlantic City.

Francis Canning, formerly of this city, now in charge of the horticultural department at Amherst college, was a visitor lately. He had been spending his vacation at Atlantic City. Mr. Canning has a large class which he instructs in horticulture.

William J. Moore will be an important factor in the dahlia market this season. His principal consignor of these fall flowers will be the well-known firm of William F. Bassett & Son, Hammonton, N. J.

W. E. McKissick will on Monday, September 3, celebrate the first anniversary of his entrance into the wholesale business. He has increased his facilities and promises a larger and finer stock than last season.

B. Eschner, of the firm of M. Rice & Co., has returned greatly pleased with his trip to Dayton. Business, he says, was better than at the four previous conventions combined.

The Philadelphia Cut Flower Co. has completed the changes in its establishment; the new ice-box is in working order and in use, a smaller box being also used for roses. The entire side formerly occupied by the ice-boxes will be used as a salesroom.

The Leo Niessen Co. is planning to have shipments of dahlias reach it by 7:30, Labor day.

The officers of the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co. are: President, Samuel S. Pennock; vice-president, Charles E. Meehan; secretary, Edward J. Fancourt; treasurer, Ralph E. Faust.

Edward Reid returned from the south this week. He speaks with pleasure of the hearty reception given him, saying that a month's time would not have been sufficient had he accepted all the invitations given him.

Convention Echoes.

Philadelphia is greatly pleased with the choice made by the S. A. F. for 1907, and promises to do everything in its power to give the society the best

Answers to Correspondents.

Review readers are invited to send any questions relating to culture or marketing of plants and flowers in Philadelphia, to Phil, in care of the leading seed or commission houses or the Flower Market. Each question will be submitted to a competent person and answered under number. Correct name and address must always accompany inquiry, but will not be published.

56. What causes the fronds of Nephrolepis Scottii to curl, rendering the plant unsightly?

A. This trouble is no doubt due to a check which the plant receives at the roots, be it over-watering or drying out. Severe drying out causes the trouble more frequently than any other cause. Where the plants are grown in the open ground, in benches, where there is a uniform amount of moisture at all times, the trouble rarely appears.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

The cut flower market has shown an encouraging improvement this week. Asters, for the best grade, have brought $1.50 per hundred; roses, $3 to $3.50, and gladioli, $2 per hundred spikes. Some nice Liberty roses were on sale, but unfortunately they were too short-stemmed for other than piece-work. Since the cut flower people have closed their stores at noon Saturday, the market is practically dead until Monday. While the clerks deserve a rest as well as other employees, this idea of completely closing up is hard on perishable stock, and the trouble might easily be obviated by other arrangements.

A brighter feeling seems to pervade the trade, and with cooler weather the outlook for an active fall becomes more promising.

State of Trade.

Trade during the last month has been less than the former summer trade, on account of the extremely hot weather, which has driven every one out of town. This hot spell also has had an injurious effect upon the supply, as well as upon the quality of cut flowers, and we now find ourselves at the end of August with poor stock of all principal varieties. A few thunder storms have ruined outdoor peas and asters, and the extreme heat has made the indoor roses and carnations small. About the only flower in salable condition is the gladiolus. Nearly all our retail men report trade slow, with the exception of a little funeral work, and of course with that we find them busy one day and nothing doing the next.

Various Notes.

Several changes are noted in the florist business in Toronto. One of the most noticeable is that A. C. Jennings, who for the last few years has had charge of the floral department of the T. Eaton Co., has now left that firm and rented a store in the Russell house block. He has fitted up a first-class flower store. It might also be noted in this connection that there is a rumor that the T. Eaton Co. is going out of the flower business, as the room is wanted for better paying departments.

D. J. Sinclair has opened a branch at 518 St. James street, Montreal. Mr. Grey, late of Philadelphia, will be in charge.

The advance delegates for the convention arrived in Toronto Monday morning. The special rate given by the railways to the exhibition is a very material factor in bringing the delegates from the east and west, where the long distance makes it an expensive trip at regular rates. The convention promises to be exceptionally successful this year, if attendance counts for anything.

OBITUARY.

John A. Vogel.

John A. Vogel, 82 years old, was found dead in his bed, August 10, at 2114 Cambridge street, Baltimore. Mr. Vogel at one time conducted a store on Eastern avenue extended. During the last few years he had been unable to manage a store, and had earned a living by taking care of flower gardens for several residents of the eastern part of the city.

Born in Germany, Mr. Vogel came to this country about thirty years ago. Ten years later his wife died, and although he had several children at that time who solicited him to make his home with them, he refused, preferring to live alone.

DUBUQUE, IA.—The Humane Society flower show will be held in Temple hall on September 13 and 14. The show last year was a great success.

CONCORDIA, KAN.—C. J. Lampe reports that the long dry hot spell is at last broken in this vicinity. We had a fine rain August 23. Things are beginning to look green again. Asters were all cooked, with the exception of the branching variety. Gladioli are now coming on, and tuberoses are looking better. Trade has been good.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., Henry W. Wood, Richmond, Va.; First Vice-Pres., Charles Burge, Toledo, O.; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland. The 20th annual meeting will be held at New York City, June, 1907.

J. M. GRIFFITH, of Griffith & Turner Co., Baltimore, is spending ten days in Boston.

THERE were only seventeen cases of bulbs on the boat from Bermuda arriving at New York August 24.

A WELL posted seedsman says that White Globe onion seed is likely to be worth $4 per pound before next spring.

THERE was a touch of frost on the low lands of Iowa and Kansas on the night of August 27, but no harm came to corn or other crops for seeds.

TOMATOES, at the canners' and in the produce markets, are bringing such satisfactory prices that seed production is likely to be cut down.

No one seems willing to offer any surplus of Alaska peas. It is felt that perhaps there are enough to go around, but then again, perhaps not.

REPORTS from the Ohio and Indiana marshes state that the onion crop will be a good one this year and that the bulbs will be hard, dry and of good keeping quality.

H. C. JOHNSON, formerly with the Johnson & Musser Seed Co., Los Angeles, Cal., and later with W. H. Maule, Philadelphia, died at Marietta, Pa., August 17, aged 34 years.

A CIRCUMSTANCE that may help out if the onion seed crop proves to be short, is the fact that many of the local gardeners at the different onion-growing sections have small patches of seed to harvest.

THE radish seed crop in southern Michigan is going to be short, and cucumbers and other vine crops are not doing well. The bean fields begin to show signs of rust, which it is feared will cut that crop down considerably.

HUGH M. TAYLOR, Lloyd, Fla., says that full reports from melon fields in Florida indicate good crops. Watermelons are exceptionally fine, with the exception of one or two varieties. He expects full deliveries, subject to no loss in harvesting.

ONION SETS.

The onion set harvest at Chicago is now completed. The normal product here is in the neighborhood of 350,000 bushels. This year's harvest, according to the returns, is not more than 220,000 bushels, which is something like 130,000 bushels less than what it should be. The quality for the most part is excellent. A few of the large growers report that some of their plantings did not bulb up well, and that thick necks have cut their product down to a considerable extent. The clay soil which constitutes a large part of their acreage, and which usually produces the best of crops, failed to pan out properly this year, on account of dry weather at the critical time. Two-thirds of a crop has been the prediction of the REVIEW all along, and two-thirds of a crop is all that has been harvested. Shortages at all of the set producing centers will keep prices high.

BERMUDA LILIES.

W. H. Heyl, American consul at Hamilton, Bermuda, supplies the following figures as to the value of lily bulbs shipped to the United States in the last ten years:

Year.	Value.
1896	$66,080.08
1897	55,874.45
1898	36,896.99
1899	58,352.51
1900	50,197.50
1901	30,438.71
1902	50,091.72
1903	32,151.29
1904	33,495.09
1905	27,074.87
1906	19,790.67

The figures for 1906 are up to August 20. There may be another small shipment of $200 to $300 in value. Consul Heyl adds: "For several years a parasitic disease attacked the lily plants, which has now been entirely exterminated, owing to the careful selection of good stock and the free use of germicidal solutions. The present season's crop is unusually small, especially in large size bulbs, owing to the long drought, which continued from March 9 to August 8."

EUROPEAN SEED NOTES.

The latest crop reports to hand are that in the Anjou districts of France some much heavier crops of onions, carrots, etc., are resulting than were anticipated. No better reports are to hand of yields in other parts of Europe. The mildew in onion is very prevalent in all districts, Holland crops in some cases being totally destroyed, while Germany is badly affected.

No mildew is apparent in Italy, but hail storms and other weather severities have much reduced the yield of onion and cauliflower in some cases is totally destroyed. Probably nine-tenths of the cauliflower seed in Italy is very hard hit, and some high prices are being spoken of. On the other hand, the quality of what seed is harvested is spoken of as likely to be very good. The watercress seed is in some parts a total failure and some dealers are not offering this line at all this year. It is a difficult matter to make any accurate estimate of any seed crops many weeks ahead this year, the weather conditions generally prevailing all over Europe being so erratic. This will no doubt have the effect of making the yield of all seed crops much lighter, although the samples will be of good quality.

A storm of wind, rain, hail and thunder recently swept over Nottinghamshire and Lincolnshire, such as had hardly been known for the last fifty years, and the streets and fields were in a few minutes perfect rivers of water.

The hot weather has finished the pea crops off quickly, and a much lighter yield than was expected will be the result, as in many cases these crops were ripened and ready for harvest before the later pods were half grown. J. B.

ROCHESTER SEED NOTES.

The seed trade, both of Europe and America, was well represented here last week. W. Atlee Burpee, en route home from the coast, inspected the aster grounds. Messrs. Parsons and Ely, the former from Dreer's and the latter from Michell's, were both busy on the same lines. J. J. Comont, from Carter's, and S. B. Dicks, representing Cooper, Taber & Co., are both looking up future business. Disquieting reports have been received regarding the pea crop. The trade here thinks that these are rather too pessimistic, preparing them for the very worst. Cucumbers are said to be nearly a total failure. Perhaps these accounts may be exaggerated, and the safest way is to conserve them with a liberal allowance of salt.

Messrs. Charles and Fred Vick returned from Dayton this morning. They say the meeting was a success but the heat almost unbearable.

GERMAN SEED CROPS.

The meteorological record at Erfurt is a mixture of thunderstorms and torrential rains, with a few hot days thrown in. This has not aided vegetation to catch up the ground lost through the late spring, and things in general are nearly a fortnight behind the usual time. In some places the rains have badly laid the crops. Warmer and drier weather, however, now seems to have set in to the great relief of our seed growers.

Peas have made a luxuriant growth, and if the weather favors the development of the pods they should turn out a good crop. Beans did not come up as well as usual, owing to unfavorable conditions of harvesting last autumn, and any attempt to judge their prospects as yet would be premature. Neither onion, carrot nor cucumber are in good shape, while lettuce, radish, spinach and mangel-wurzel are looking all right so far. Cabbage, kale and beet are also doing favorably, though the acreage is smaller than usual.

Flower seeds are mostly longing for some warm and not too moist weather. Perennials are yielding well, but some biennials, such as forget-me-not, will naturally be short, owing to the loss of so many plants during the winter. Pansies are not seeding well and badly need some consistent sunshine, the damp atmosphere having hindered the setting of the pods. Sweet peas, though late, look healthy, and the same may be said in general of the annuals, which have, however, a considerable amount of leeway to make up. Some of the more delicate kinds of asters have suffered by the wet and look as if insects had been at them, but on the whole this important culture is in a fairly promising condition. Ten weeks' stocks are coming along all right, but double wallflowers will be only a small crop. The large-flowering petunias now make a grand show on the stages, and form the admiration of numerous visitors, of whom we have had several from England and America, and the same may be said of the stage carnations. Cinerarias, calceolarias and primulas have all yielded satisfactorily. — Horticultural Trade Journal.

CLOVER SEED.

C. A. King & Co. say of clover seed: Kentucky and Tennessee, where the crop is more advanced, send some favorable reports. Further north the crop still depends somewhat upon the future weather. Dry would be beneficial. Our reports boil down as follows: Tennessee—This year best for years. Fully double last year. Kentucky—Large counties—Better yield than last year. Small counties—Very small crop. Ohio—Large counties—Too much rain; one-fourth crop, same as last year. Small counties—Too wet; poor quality; one-third last year. Illinois—Large counties—Failure, same as last year. Small counties—Short crop, but more than last year. Indiana—Small counties—Acreage one-half last year's; one-half crop.

At Toledo clover seed closed last week as follows: Cash, $7.30; October and December, $7.55 bid; January, $7.40 bid.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Business shows a little improvement over last week, but at that it is nothing to brag of, and we could stand a lot more without working ourselves to death. The weather is much cooler, and if it only holds for a while it ought to have a good effect upon business. Several large decorations are on for this week, and they will use up a good lot of blooms, which will tend to keep the market cleared out, and this will naturally stiffen prices a little. It is to be hoped that the rise will be permanent.

Gladioli have been selling poorly this year, and there have been too many of them, but now that the bulk of the blooms have been cut it looks as if the demand for them will increase, and the price advance. Some first-class stock has been coming into this market, but the price realized for it must have greatly discouraged the growers. Asters have been doing better the last week, and the prospects are that the price obtained for them from now on will be quite satisfactory. The quality of the stock is good, and blooms shipped from the north are improving daily. There will be a good supply of these flowers until frost.

Roses are coming in fairly large quantities, but most of them are short-stemmed, of poor quality, and are sold at job lot prices. There are scarcely any American Beauties, and other red roses are scarce. Carnations are coming in larger quantities every day, and the quality is improving. They are selling well and at good prices for the grade of blooms. It will not be long till some good stock can be obtained. Tuberoses are selling well. Lilies also meet a good demand. The market is well supplied with green goods.

Various Notes.

The Cincinnati delegation, some eighty strong, pulled out of the C. H. & D. depot on the morning of August 21, and before the train arrived at Dayton twenty delegates had been picked up along the route. The majority of those who went are now at home again busily at work, and one and all express themselves as greatly pleased at the reception tendered them at the hands of the Dayton florists. That the convention was a great success will be testified to by all of those who were lucky enough to be present and to partake of the good things.

Cincinnati has been visited by a number of conventionites, who have been visiting the various greenhouse plants.

The next regular meeting of the Florists' Society will be held in the club-rooms Saturday evening, September 8, at 7:30 p. m.

E. G. Gillett, accompanied by his wife and daughter, is spending a couple of weeks among the Michigan summer resorts.

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

Business is dull except for a few weddings. White asters and smilax can not be found in the market, and have to be shipped in. American Beauties seem to be entirely out of the market. Few orders are booked for them, as there is no certainty of filling them.

Boston ferns are all the go now for plants. As the people return from their summer trips they seem to want plants in their homes. The sale is opening quite early, as September is usually the month for ferns.

Various Notes.

The People's Floral Co. has its store in a good location, Twelfth and Main, and has a good trade. Max Ellers, one of the proprietors, has leased the White House greenhouses at Twenty-seventh and Holmes streets for growing palms and ferns for their store. Mr. Wise, the owner of these greenhouses, has had very poor health.

Miller Carter and wife are spending their honeymoon in Colorado. Mr. Carter is head decorator for the W. L. Rock Flower Co. We all wish them a pleasant trip.

Alexander Kerr has returned from his vacation trip.

A visit to the W. H. Humfeld Floral Co. found Mr. Humfeld busy repairing the roof on one of his houses. A walk through his houses found everything in excellent growing condition. The carnations are about all planted, and all stock is looking fine.

Rain Damages Cemetery.

August 23, early in the morning, Kansas City was deluged by a record-breaking rain. Six inches fell in three hours. The weather bureau has no record of so much rain in so short a time. Many buildings were flooded. There was great destruction in the valley district of Elmwood cemetery. A bursting sewer sent a torrent of water across the cemetery. Graves sunk and tombstones were washed from their bases. Many trees and a lot of shrubbery and flower beds were destroyed.

The path left by the torrent was a scene of destruction. Tombstones lay at full length, water stood in graves which had sunk and everywhere was the debris which the flood had carried with it. Superintendent Hyer said that it was impossible to tell the extent of the damage.

BUSY.

MERIDEN, CONN.—R. W. Barrow has purchased the greenhouses of Hale & Batten, and will devote all of his time to the new establishment. His son will take charge of the Union street houses. They are rebuilding one house, 18x100, and are giving the property a general overhauling, so as to be ready for the fall season.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The last week, while a great many of our florists were enjoying themselves at the convention in Dayton, the market was dragging along the same as when they left. As to stock, it runs about the same. Extra first-class is scarce, with plenty of second-class stock for all demands. As the demand is not heavy, plenty of this stock went to the dump last week.

Miss Belle Miller, of Springfield, Ill., is sending to Kuehn about the best roses coming to this market, among them being extra fine Kaiserin, Carnot, Perle and Bride. This stock being good and clean, it sells well.

Carnations are poor. The best bring not over $1 per hundred, all being short-stemmed. Outdoor stock is plentiful, especially asters and tuberoses. Asters are in big demand. They take the place of carnations in funeral work. Tuberoses are too many for the demand. Hydrangeas do not sell well.

Some of our local growers say that young stock in roses and carnations is looking fine, and that the St. Louis market will be better supplied with these this coming season than ever before. The prospect for a large crop of California violets among the Kirkwood growers is good.

Various Notes.

Charles Fleckinstein, formerly connected with the old Mound City Cut Flower Co., was in town attending the funeral of his father-in-law last week.

J. W. Dunford, W. C. Winter, F. W. Ude, Jr., and Henry Johann, Jr., visited the different growers around Kirkwood last week and found everything in first-class shape among those visited.

John L. Koenig, W. H. Kruse and J. J. Beneke arrived home from the convention on Saturday morning.

C. A. Kuehn is spending a few days at his old home in Detroit before returning home from the convention.

Fred Weber, Theo. Miller and Fred Meinhardt and their wives are visiting other points of interest before returning home from the Dayton convention.

Those who attended the convention are well pleased with the entertainment given them by the Dayton boys, and the only complaint we have to make is against the weather-man. President Heiss, Harry Altick, H. H. Ritter and Warren Matthews were always on the lookout to see that all was right, and I know the rest of the St. Louis delegation are with me in extending the above and the rest of the Dayton boys a vote of thanks for their kind treatment.

George Angermueller visited at Fort Wayne and New Castle, Ind., before returning home, and says he had a good time at all the places visited.

The bowling contest was well handled by George Asmus. We did not have a team to represent us, but nevertheless we came back with five prizes. The champion lady bowler was Mrs. F. C. Weber. Mrs. Theo. Miller came in fourth, Mrs. F. H. Meinhardt seventh and Miss Meinhardt twelfth. The writer came in first in the individual class among the men. Philadelphia came in first again in the team contest, and keeps the beautiful Beatty cup, but then we still have the Kasting cup for next year. The "Phillies" will be on their own grounds next year, and it will take a strong team to win from them. We expect to be with them in the coming contest.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Beyer left Tuesday morning for Niagara Falls. They will also visit Buffalo, Toronto and Detroit before returning home.

Vincent Gorley is visiting friends at Cincinnati this week. J. J. B.

DOVER, ME.—B. T. Genthner has completed the palm house, 16x32, added to his place this summer.

PACIFIC COAST.

AUGUST IRRIGATION.

For the ordinary class of nursery stock planted in the open, August is a good month for irrigating. If the stock is not allowed to stop growing at this time it is possible to obtain a much larger growth than would otherwise result. In many places growers do not resort to artificial watering in the summer time, but keep the ground well cultivated, and get heavy growths in this manner. This does not do in all localities, nor with all soils, and it is a good idea generally to flood the land at this time. If, however, this is not done before the deciduous stock has ceased to grow, it is impossible to get it to commence growing again. With ornamental stock it makes little difference, if it be evergreen, as the growing season is much longer, and it can be started at almost any time.

Palms at this season should also receive a good irrigating, as all our hardy varieties respond quickly to moisture late in the season, and an extraordinary growth is always the result. It is time now also for early flowering bulbs to be watered, especially Paper White narcissus. It is possible to have blooms on them before Thanksgiving if they are given several thorough soakings at intervals of several weeks apart. G.

VICTORIA, B. C.

On August 1 and 2 the Horticultural Society held its fifth annual exhibition, which again proved a success. The show took place in the drill hall, which was well filled.

Exhibits were not so numerous as in the previous year's show, but the quality was much better. Mrs. M. A. Flewin was the only trade exhibitor. Her stand of perennials was again remarkable, phloxes and gladioli being the main features. One of the most telling portions of the hall was a long table filled with spikes of gladioli from many amateurs, Groffs, Kelways and Lemoines being well shown.

Sweet peas are always to the fore in this event. J. A. Bland took a silver cup in the championship class, with peas having 16-inch stems, and nearly all carrying four flowers. It was a trifle early for dahlias, but J. Newbury put up a stand of 100 varieties, which was well done. Mrs. H. Croft was unequaled on ferns, many of her maidenhairs being four feet five inches across. F. Wollaston showed a Lilium lancifolium rubrum nine feet high, carrying fifty flowers and six buds.

Notwithstanding that we are in the midst of the dull season, all the fraternity seem happy. Trade is good for the time of year. A wave of prosperity is pouring over this part of Canada, and we all reap the benefit. Carnations are now being benched, and are looking fine. There is such a demand for fruit now that several of our florists are adding fruit raising to their ordinary business. The crop of strawberries is never sufficient. Plums are now worth 5 cents per pound in bulk, and early apples bring $1.20 per box of forty-five pounds. Wallace & Wollaston sent an exhibit of their bulbs in charge of the provincial exhibit of produce to the fairs at Winnipeg and Brandon, and R. M. Palmer, who was in charge, reports that the florists who saw them pronounced very favorably upon them. E. A. W.

PORTLAND, ORE.

Gus Teufel and Others.

Being an advocate of early rising and plenty of outdoor exercise, we arose one morning at four o'clock and walked out for a visit with Gus Teufel. Located on the Barnes road, five miles west of the city, and at an elevation of eleven hundred feet, we were glad to make the ascent at an early hour. At the highest point we rested and took a bird's-eye view of the city and surrounding country. The scenery was sublime, the air invigorating, and we exclaimed, "How great is Oregon!" We found this "prince of rustlers" at home, and immediately started to inspect the premises. Eighteen years ago Mr. Teufel was a jobbing gardener; ten years ago he purchased a few acres, here laying the foundation of his now rapidly increasing interests. His motto is to do anything in the horticultural line, from sodding a yard to supplying a customer with a wagon-load of cut flowers, and he has met with marked success. The cultivating of the popular summer flowers is a big item with him, the retail stores taking them in large quantities.

Mr. Teufel has also given much study to violet culture, and in this he has been equally successful. With an eye to the future, a further purchase was made five years ago of 125 acres, a half mile from the old place, where Mr. Teufel will soon move. Forest fires had swept over this ground and destroyed the commercial value of the timber, leaving only the charred remains. The clearing of this big patch and putting it in shape for cultivation is almost accomplished, and when we saw some of the monarchs that would average twenty cords to the tree, and which required $5 worth of dynamite to blow each one up by the roots, we marveled at the pluck of this man. The site is an ideal one, and it is his intention to build 2,000 feet of glass and plant half the land to nursery stock. When all is completed we will go there often.

Of late years Mr. Teufel has worked up several acres of Oregon's finest roses, and we must not forget to mention that he supplied the Lewis and Clark Fair Association with $2,000 worth of roses and other plants. After paying our respects to the good lady of the house, and drinking all the milk on the place, we once more headed for the city, but not for home, as we had other calls to make.

Turning north on Twenty-third street, our first stop was made at Burkhardt's. Last fall Burkhardt Bros. dissolved partnership, Gustave taking the southeast corner of Twenty-third and Glisan streets, and Alfred the northeast corner. Both places are a credit to this aristocratic neighborhood, popularly known as the Nole Hill district. Since the dissolution we note a great change; several new houses have been added, and Alfred is just completing a fine new residence with all the twentieth century conveniences and a much needed store room in connection with it. The Burkhardts have prospered from the beginning.

A half block farther up on Glisan street Hoffman Bros. have held the fort for sixteen years, getting their share of the retail cut flower trade.

Another neatly kept place is that owned by Henry Ehlen on Twenty-third street. Three years ago he realized handsomely on his down-town property, and located here shortly after. Mr. Ehlen has gone to Germany on a visit, after an absence of thirty years.

We were next attracted by a new greenhouse on Raleigh street. This was built two years ago by C. A. LeGrande to please his wife, who has a natural talent for the business. The general appearance of things bears out this statement.

We ended the day's outing with a general discussion on topics of horticulture with George Otten. In addition to a well established retail business, Mr. Otten gives considerable attention to landscape work, having laid out the grounds for some of Portland's finest homes. Another honor to be proud of was his work in connection with the Lewis and Clark fair, when his services were much in demand in planning and shaping the grounds for that once most beautiful spot. H. SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Business has not improved to any noticeable extent during the last week, and the retailers have had a quiet time, except for an occasional funeral order. Flowers are not especially plentiful, with the exception of asters, and they can be had in any quantity, at almost any figure. Sweet peas are getting scarce and the price has almost doubled within the last two weeks. Carnations, on account of the fact that many of the growers are at present changing their houses, are not plentiful, but with the limited amount of business at hand there are enough to fill all requirements. Roses are scarce for the same reason, and there is some demand for fancy stock. American Beauties are hard to get at any price unless they are of poor quality. Brides and Maids are in poor shape also. Smilax is getting more plentiful, and is in good demand. Valley moves slowly. Outside stock, such as coreopsis, dahlias, gaillardias, scabiosa and marigolds, is being used extensively for the show windows, but finds little sale.

In Oakland business is fully as quiet as in San Francisco, although dealers in general expect things to brighten up shortly. The schools have again resumed their sessions, and a majority of the wealthy people are back in town again.

Various Notes.

Mrs. A. Devrieze, for twenty years a resident of San Francisco, and associated with J. Jacquemet in the management of his store on Fourth street, died August 6. Mrs. Devrieze was a native of France, and was 70 years of age.

Clifford Pinchot, chief of the government forestry service, is on a visit to Berkeley. Mr. Pinchot is an enthusiastic horticulturist.

F. Ludemann, of the Pacific Nurseries, reports a good demand for fall bulbs.

Sievers & Co. are at present busily engaged in replanting their six large carnation houses. Their show of tuberous begonias, occupying two entire houses, is the finest on this coast, and they are at their best at this time.

A. Mann, Jr., has a full line of florists' supplies ready for the trade. He lost heavily in our recent fire, but he has received heavy consignments from the east and Europe within the last few weeks.

George Moore has gone to Goldfield, Nevada, with the intention of opening a floral establishment if he finds a good business opportunity.

Miss Parsons, of Parsons & Coleman, Fresno, is in town.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Pres., Orlando Harrison, Berlin, Md.; Vice-Pres., J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Ia.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester; Treas. C. L. Yates, Rochester The 32d annual convention will be held at Detroit, Mich., June, 1907.

Des Moines, Ia.—M. J. Wragg has the contract for beautifying the grounds of the Hyperion Club, near Waveland park.

The Douglas County Horticultural Society, at its meeting at Lawrence, Kan., August 18, passed a resolution condemning government free seed distribution.

It is stated that J. R. Warren, of Melbourne, Australia, a leading nurseryman, is thinking of buying land and establishing a nursery in eastern Colorado.

W. B. K. Johnson, in Whitehall township, near Allentown, Pa., who has spent a long life in the nursery business, is about to retire.

The Chicago & Northwestern R. R. has commenced work on a 7,500-foot spur switch to the plant of the Clinton Falls Nursery Co., Owatonna, Minn. It will be completed by October 1, in time for fall shipments.

Davenport, Ia.—The Davenport Nursery Co. has filed articles of incorporation. Adolph Arp will be president, H. G. Bryant vice-president, and Margaretha Arp secretary-treasurer. The capital stock was $25,000, with $15,000 subscribed.

Bloomington, Ill.—W. E. Rossney is exhibiting some extra fine blackberries. They are of Russian production, and were brought to this country fourteen years ago. Seventeen 100-foot rows have yielded 1,968 quarts so far this season. The berries average about sixty-five to the quart.

It is reported that the Chase Nursery Co., Huntsville, Ala., has received from western Colorado a single order for 75,000 Elberta peach trees. These are the Chase brothers who recently sold their holdings in the Alabama Nursery Co. to Herbert Chase, with whom, it is stated, they will divide the order.

F. H. Stannard, of Ottawa, Kan., has filed suit against the Santa Fe railroad for $1,950.20 damages. Mr. Stannard alleges that during November of last year he shipped two car-loads of nursery stock to Elk City, Okla., for delivery there by his salesmen. The cars were delayed on the road and reached Elk City in a damaged condition.

CEMETARY ASSOCIATION.

At the annual meeting of the Association of American Cemetery Superintendents, held in Detroit, Mich., August 21 to 23, the following officers were elected: President, J. C. Cline, Dayton, O.; vice-president, F. R. Diering, New York; secretary and treasurer, Bellett Lawson, Paxtang, Pa. Mr. Lawson was reëlected, having held the office last year.

The convention, which was the best in point of attendance and interest that has been held for years, voted to hold next year's meeting in Providence, R. I.

PEONY LADY A. DUFF.

I notice in the Review of July 19 an article signed by Kelway & Son, replying to a note of E. J. Shaylor in regard to Peony Lady Alexandra Duff. It seems, according to this article, that the variety at issue is a real, live thing, and not a will-o'-the-wisp as we in America have been led to believe it to be, by the many erroneous varieties which have been received here for it.

As secretary of the American Peony Society, I have received many communications concerning this peony, and I am glad to see that Messrs. Kelway have come forward with this statement and express a willingness to clear the matter up. The glowing descriptions of this variety have caused peony lovers to become exceedingly anxious to obtain it, but so far as I can learn, there is now no one in this country who can swear that he has the correct thing, no matter how desirous he may be of being the proud possessor of the variety. It will be doing the peony-buying public a real service if Messrs. Kelway will tell us where we can go in this country to see it growing true to name. Shall we visit Mr. Thurlow, at West Newbury, and see his flesh-white variety; Mr. Whitman, at Brookline, and see his white Duchess de Nemours; Mr. Shaylor, at Wellesley Hills, and see his Festiva maxima and Grandiflora nivea plena; Mr. Betscher, at Canal Dover, O., and see his Andromarensis; Mr. Harrison, at York, Neb., and see his red one; or can they name some other person to whom the true thing has been sent?

It seems as though among all the plants that have been sent here for this variety there should be at least one true to name, and we think it incumbent upon Messrs. Kelway to help us locate this one, for we are all anxious to make the acquaintance of this beautiful white flower, which aspires to the proud position of being "one of the grandest peonies existing."

If they can not point out to us where the correct thing can be seen growing, can they not send a large photograph which can be reproduced for publication, thereby giving us some idea of the character of this flower? It would seem that any one possessing a variety of so much merit as this is represented to have, must have had its portrait taken at the earliest opportunity, and would be glad to have it published.

LENOX, MASS.

The annual and perennial exhibition of the Lenox Horticultural Society took place in the Lenox town hall Wednesday, August 15. This was the best summer exhibition in the history of the society. The hall was filled to the doors. Particularly fine were the collections of Phlox decussata, there being upward of sixty varieties shown and all excellent. The classes for annuals and perennials were well filled. M. T. Reynolds, gardener to Mrs. Edith Wharton, won in the class for twenty varieties of annuals. Mr. Reynolds has won this class for three years successively. R. Spears, gardener to Mrs. John E. Parsons, won in the class for twenty varieties of perennials, among which were Stenanthium robustum, Spiræa Davidiana, Rudbeckia maxima, Rudbeckia purpurea, Funkia subcordata grandiflora, and Helianthus Dowelliana. In sweet peas, Thos. Proctor, gardener to R. W. Paterson, was the principal exhibitor; he had some remarkably fine sweet peas. In vegetables, F. Heeremans, gardener to W. D. Sloane, and A. H. Wingett, gardener to Chas. Samer, were first in their respective classes. Mr. Wingett also was the most successful exhibitor in the fruit classes. Mrs. W. B. O. Field won the table decoration prize, with dark blue larkspur. The following is the list of special awards: First-class certificate to A. H. Wingett, for new dahlia Chas. Larver; this is a fine dahlia; its color is apricot yellow, and it has a large flower; first-class certificate to M. F. Reynolds, for seedling phlox; it is a white phlox of extra large size, with a blush pink eye; first-class certificate to S. Carlquist, for Rubus rosæfolius (strawberry x raspberry). The following were awarded diplomas: E. J. Norman, for exhibit of berries; D. Dunn, for exhibit of potted plants; A. Jenkins, for collection of perennials; W. D. Curtis, for collection of phlox; Geo. W. Folsom, for Lilium auratum. Messrs. George Thompson and A. J. Loveless were the judges.

George Foulsham, Sec'y.

A cricket match took place on August 18 between a team selected from the Lenox Horticultural Society and one captained by Sir H. Mortimer Durand, the British ambassador in Washington. The former team came out ahead by seventy runs to forty-four.

E. J. Norman, on the George Westinghouse estate, is having an orchid house, 16x90, built.

The unusually moist summer has kept all lawns and shrubberies in beautiful condition here this season. W.

Reisterstown, Md.—Charles B. Wright is building a new carnation house 20x60 feet. He is almost done housing his young plants.

MABELLE

New Pink Carnation for 1907

COLOR—A peculiar shade of lovely pink with a faint yellowish cast; several shades lighter than the Lawson. Unlike most pinks, the brightest sun does not injure the color.

SIZE—3 to 4 inches in diameter when established.

ODOR—Pleasing, but not strong.

STEMS—Invariably strong, but always graceful, ranging from 12 to 30 inches during the season.

HABIT, ETC.—A very quick, active grower, making specimen plants in a short time, even from late cuttings. On account of its rapid growth, requires supporting very soon after benching. Gets away rapidly, blooms early and gives long stems right from the start.

PRODUCTIVENESS—Prodigious is the best word we know of to use here. It is the most incessant bloomer, early and late, we have ever grown.

Stock limited. Delivery January 5 to 10 and later. Price, $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

Trade had held up well during August, notwithstanding the extreme heat, but about the time the train left for the convention August 20 the bottom dropped out of business, and since that time the wholesalers are having the time of their lives trying to get rid of the gladioli, asters, and hydrangeas, the small end of which goes out the front door, the balance the garbage man sneaks out the back way; the only satisfaction in sight is that with this month the worst will likely be over.

Various Notes.

Pittsburgers who were at the convention all return with a favorable report of the meeting.

E. E. Pieser, of Kennicott Bros. Co., Chicago, Ill., has been here.

A. W. Smith has been having some wonderful shows of summer flowers, all of which he grows himself.

All growers in this vicinity are planted up, except those who are building, and another two weeks will see about everything under glass for the season.

B. L. Elliott looks quite natural as assistant to John Bader, who has just returned from Canada.

Phil Langhans sent home a large box of fish last week, which were distributed among his fisherman friends, thus putting some of them on edge and almost persuading them to join him.

Lee Riley, of the Pittsburg Florists' Exchange, left to spend two weeks at his old home, Clarksburg, W. Va.

Hoo-Hoo.

La Crosse, Wis.—Jacob Hotz has bought the Arcadia fair-grounds for $3,800, and will turn the property into a nursery, also building some greenhouses.

Argos, Ind.—The Argos Floral and Plant Co. has just been organized, with William E. Hand president and manager, and Noah E. Bundy secretary and treasurer. A house 30x50 will be erected at once.

W. H GULLETT & SONS, LINCOLN, ILL.

DETROIT.

The Market.

Owing to a spell of 95 degrees to 100 degrees in the shade, business seemed to be entirely suspended the last week.

Poor asters are certainly a glut on the market, but good ones are scarce and sell like hot cakes. Kaiserin is at present the best white rose on the market, although Brides are improving rapidly.

Despite the fact that La Detroit hardly fulfilled expectations as a winter rose, it has proved to be a fine summer flower. Large numbers are disposed of daily in the market. Maids are also picking up. Meteors, fine at the "Detroit Cut" several weeks ago, are poor at present. Roses are bringing from $4 to $6 per hundred for the best grades.

Some fairly good carnations find their way into the market. Morning Glory, although small, is the best. Lilies are scarce articles, and meet with a ready demand. Asparagus Sprengeri is plentiful; other greens are not.

Various Notes.

Most of the boys are back from Dayton, and despite the heat and rain encountered, are highly elated over the outing, and the treatment they received.

At present writing, Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Scribner are still looking for Cincinnati.

William Hielscher has the deepest sympathy of all his friends in his recent bereavement, the loss of his father.

Smith & Fetters have been receiving some asters from the Detroit market.

Mr. Boehringer, of Bay City, has asked to become a member of our club. No doubt his name will receive a warm welcome from the boys, as he has a host of friends in this city.

Do not forget the meeting September 5, especially those who failed to attend the convention, as you will hear all about the jolly, as well as profitable, time enjoyed by all.

Visitors last week were Ed Ellsworth, and A. Elberfield, both of Kansas City, Mo.

H. S.

Mendota, Ill.—Bernard Katzwinkle is establishing a greenhouse business opposite the cemetery.

Salt Lake City, Utah.—The gardeners of this vicinity have organized for the purpose of agitating the question of establishing a public market here. They have petitioned the city council to grant them certain streets for this purpose.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

Baltimore and the nearby counties have suffered considerably from the heavy rains, and a great many washouts have occurred in some sections, from which growers lost many of their outdoor plants. Asters are almost a total failure, and a perfect aster seldom is seen. Dahlias are not up to the standard. Tuberoses have made their appearance. Roses are plentiful and can be had at almost any price. Gladioli are fairly good, and the market is well supplied with them. Smilax is as scarce as ever. The cut flower trade has been good. A great many funerals have taken place, and this has improved the store trade.

Various Notes.

September 9 to 16 the great fire jubilee will take place. Special excursions are given on all the railroads and boats. It is expected that a grand rush will be made on the florists, and arrangements are already made to try to meet the demand.

The Gardeners' Club sent a large delegation to the S. A. F. convention at Dayton.

Celery plants cannot be had. Wet weather is the cause of the shortage.

B. Stahl, Brooklyn, has completed his two houses and installed a gasoline engine.

Robert L. Graham, Waverly, Md., has returned from the north.

The Lord & Burnham Co. is erecting a fine, up-to-date greenhouse for Norman James, Catonsville, Md.

St. Mary's Industrial School greenhouses are completed and are up-to-date in every particular. J. J. Cummings is the manager.

G. Cook, Arlington, is erecting three fine houses.

E. A. Seidewitz, Arlington, Md., has his $10,000 home nearly completed. His greenhouses are among the finest in his section.

Watch Us Grow

ARAUCARIAS, the best decorative plants Nature produces, our specialty.
Every man in business and life, to be successful, must adopt one thing as his specialty and that specialty, of whatever nature it may be, he must guard, study and push to such an extent that it not only benefits himself but he must continue it so every one who seeks his aid, services or his article, which he advertises or practices, will share a slice of his activity and prosperity. I made the importation and cultivation of araucarias a special study in my life. The figures below will show my success in business from the first year: by commencing with an importation of 250 and now, the eleventh year, my importation has grown up to 6,000 (come and see it), the reason being that the araucaria grows yearly more in favor with the plant consuming people all over the country, as a most admired decorative plant for the parlor, bed-room, dining and sitting-rooms, stores and hotels, lawns and porches. The outlook will be of an importation of at least 8,000 to 10,000 in spring of 1907. To secure this vast amount for 1907, I am now on the ocean per Steamer New Amsterdam, having left Hoboken Aug. 15, striking for Belgium, to make contracts for next year. I shall also bring over with me at the same time, a large lot of choice Azalea Indica and Palms, etc., for Christmas and Easter forcing. No money will be spared to secure for my customers the cream of the Belgium greenhouses only.

Please note lowest prices for September.

Araucaria Excelsa, 12 to 14 inches high, 5½-in. pots, 3 to 4 tiers, 2 yrs. old, 50c. 14 to 16 inches high 5½-in. pots, 3 to 4 tiers, 2 yrs. old, 60c. 16 to 18 inches high, 5½ to 6-in. pots, 4 to 5 tiers, 3 yrs. old, 75c. 18 to 20 inches high, 6-in. pots, 5 to 6 tiers, 4 yrs. old, $1.00. 20 to 24 inches high, 6-in. pots, 5 to 6 tiers, 4 yrs. old. $1.25. 36 to 50 inches high, specimens, 7-in pots, 6 yrs. old, $2 50 to $3.00.

Araucaria Compacta Robusta, have 1000 of them. Never were they as nice as this year. Plants are as broad as long, from 12 to 20 inches in height, 3 to 4 perfect tiers, 20 to 30 inches across from tip of one tier to the other, 3, 4 and 5 yrs. old. 6 to 7-in. pots, $1.25, $1.50, $1.75 to $2.00, up to $3.00 each.

Araucaria Excelsa Glauca, perfect jewels in shape and size, their beautiful greenish blue tiers give them such a striking appearance, that anyone seeing them must fall in love with them on sight. Plants, 6 to 7-in. pots, 3, 4, 5 perfect tiers, 15 to 25 inches in height, from 15 to 30 inches across, $1 25, $1.50, $1.75, $2.00 to $2.50 each. Please bear in mind that the above mentioned varieties are the cream of Belgium's productions. We have thousands of them and can meet all demands.

Kentia Belmoreana, 6-in. pots, 4-year-old, 5 to 6 leaves, bushy, 30 to 35 inches high, $1.25; 5½ to 6-in. pots, 3-year-old, 5 to 6 leaves, 75c to $1.00 each. These are the sizes entered in the customs house.

OUR LITTLE PETS

From Aschmann, in Philadelphia, we bought
An araucaria, a pet for our little girl.
Now we have two pets, the pride of our thought:
The little girl so sweet, a head full of curls,
And the araucaria with its everlasting green—
A more joyful home you never have seen.

Kentia Forsteriana, 7-in. pots, made-up, 1 large one in center, 3 smaller sizes, 22 to 25 in. high around, $2.00 each; 6-in. pots, single plants, 35 to 40 in. high, 5 to 6 good leaves, 4-year-old, $1.25 to $1.50 each; 30 to 35 in. high, 4-year-old, 6-in. pots, 5 good leaves, $1.00 each; 25 to 30 in. high, 5½-in. pots, 3-year-old, 5 leaves, 75c; made-up plants with 3, 18 to 20 in. high, 25c to 30c.

Cocos Weddelliana, 15c.

Jerusalem Cherries or Solanums, same varieties we sell at Xmas for 75c, $1.00 each; 2½-in. pots, $5 00 per 100.

ROBINIAS, OR FALSE ACACIAS.

The false acacia or locust tree, Robinia pseudo-acacia, ranks high as an ornamental subject, for no other of our hardy trees produces such a luxuriance of delicate and graceful leafage. Though the foliage is later in expanding than that of several other trees it retains its freshness throughout the entire summer should the weather be ever so dry, for in common with many other members of the order (Leguminosæ) to which it belongs, the roots are of such a deep, descending nature that the tree itself is but little affected by continuous drought. It is also one of the best trees that we have for planting in cities, as owing to the smooth nature of its foliage dust does not readily collect thereon, and it remains fresh and green till the end of the season.—Gardeners' Magazine.

Greenhouse Heating.

PIPES AND BLAST BOILER.

I have three houses in which the pipes, for hot water, are laid in series of three 4-inch pipes to each side, the three flows being along the south side, crossing the end in one 4-inch, to enter the three returns on the north side. I think this plan is expensive to heat, because the flow of water is retarded. Am I right?

I have made one line a flow and used a bend of two elbows to make a return on the flow side, and crossed over with a single line to catch the third pipe on the opposite side for a return, making a flow and return on that side, the same as in the first system. I figure this will give less friction, and it is only sixty-five feet instead of eighty, as before, to the beginning of the return.

I am burning slack in a hot blast heater. Would a 2-inch pipe run from outside near the flue, and brought into the boiler to enter the top of the firebox near the center, facilitate combustion? In a hot blast heater in my residence, I have noticed little waste. Can I apply these outside pipes to my greenhouse boiler and get the same results? How many of them should I use?

E. L. K.

I think the re-arrangement you have made in your heating plant an excellent one. The only modification I should have made would be to have arranged one flow pipe on the north and one on the south side of the greenhouse, and used each of the other two pipes on the same side for returns, omitting the pipe across the end of the house altogether. Your plan may, however, work quite as well.

I have had no experience with the hot blast construction, but see no reason why if it works well in a house heater the same would not hold good in a greenhouse plant. Am sorry I can not aid you more with this problem. L. C. C.

PIPE ARRANGEMENT.

I have an east-and-west greenhouse, 16x75 feet, 5½-foot walls, 10½-foot ridge, with glass in one end. My boiler is for hot water, rated at 1,025 square feet, and is at the west end. I have a 3-inch overhead flow, and six 1½-inch returns on each side, running under the benches. The high point is at the boiler. There is a fall of eighteen inches in seventy feet. It is almost impossible to

Burns Improved Eclipse Boiler

IS RETURN FLUE AND MADE OF BEST FLANGE STEEL.

FOR GREENHOUSE HEATING.

This is a sample of letters we receive from our customers. "Burns Boiler Co., Green Bay, Wis. Dear Sirs: Replying to your letter of the 2nd inst., regarding your Eclipse Boiler I installed in my greenhouses two years ago, will say that the boiler is giving me best of satisfaction. At the same time I installed your boiler, I built an addition to my greenhouses with about 3000 sq. ft. of glass, and the first winter I saved $75.00 in fuel. This is a very large saving when you consider that I heated 3000 sq. ft. additional glass and at the same time saved $75.00 on fuel, and if I were to install another boiler, I certainly would have no other than your Eclipse." Yours truly, LOUIS OTTO, Neenah, Wis., Aug. 11, 1906.

keep the house at 60 degrees with zero weather outside. What is the matter?

I am building an addition 18x32 feet, running north and south, with 4-foot sides, 9½-foot ridge. I have some 1¼-inch pipe, and some 3-inch and 3½-inch boiler tubes. Can I use these in the new house? How shall I arrange the piping? I want 60 degrees with zero outside. Where should the highest point in the supply pipe be, and how deep should the boiler be set? A. T. B.

The piping in your house is somewhat deficient. There should be fifteen 1½-inch returns instead of twelve. For hot water under pressure I prefer the up-hill system for the main flow instead of the down-hill arrangement as you have, i. e., the highest point at the most distant point from the boiler, rather than directly over it. The expansion tank should be large and placed as high above the level of the pipes in the system as possible; ten to fifteen feet is little enough. Connect the expansion tank with the boiler by means of a 1-inch or ¾-inch pipe to the main return close to the boiler. The boiler should be ample to heat both the houses.

The new house can be piped as above suggested with the following: A 2-inch flow, with the highest point at the farthest end, placed under the ridge of the house; and at the far end divide it to return by two or three coils containing in all eighteen 1¼-inch pipes, the length of the house; or nine 3-inch pipes arranged in three coils, containing one flow and two returns under each of the three benches, will do the work.

L. C. C.

DIVIDING MAIN FLOWS.

I have a new house 21x40 feet; the west side is open, but there are two houses to the east, running parallel, and two across the north end, running east and west. The boiler is at the northeast corner of the block. Main flows of 4-inch pipe supply the piping in the four old houses, one flow to the two east-and-west houses, and one to the two north-and-south houses. Which line would you tap to heat the new house? I want to use 2-inch pipe in it. W. P. R.

If you will carry an independent flow from the boiler to the new house, which I think the best plan, you can take it from the opening that seems most convenient. It is likely that by dividing the flow pipe close to the boiler each house will be likely to get its share of heat, while if divided at considerable distance from the boiler one house may rob the other. A 2-inch flow pipe in the house will provide sufficient heat for this house if the water is maintained at 180 degrees. L. C. C.

SYSTEM OF FIVE HOUSES.

We have five houses, built together, partition wall between only the north house and the next one. Each section is 14¾x120 feet, six feet to gutters, ten feet to ridges. The north house wants 60 degrees, the others 50 to 55 degrees. On the manifolds at the end of the houses farthest from the boilers we have rearranged the connections so that the hot flow enters them at the end nearest the boiler, instead of passing them and entering at the other end. We did this because we found the two lower coils were cold when the upper ones were hot. Does this change make any difference?

We have a 2½-inch flow and seven 2-inch returns under each gutter, with 3-inch main returns, increasing to 4-inch as they enter the boiler at the end of the middle house. Our boiler is overloaded. We have a chance to buy a boiler rated 1,500 square feet. Can we change the system so as to install this boiler for auxiliary use, with steam, on cold nights? A riser in the middle house has the expansion tank connected at the top, but not the highest point. What changes do we need in the piping if we use the auxiliary boiler? J. W. M.

No, the slight modification made in the way the flow pipe enters the manifold would make no difference in the operation of the plant. If you have the expansion tank connected with the riser in the manner you say, this is bad. Cut it out and make connection with the expansion tank directly to the main return near where it enters the boiler, then elevate the expansion tank, which should be at least fifty gallons capacity, twelve or fifteen feet above the highest pipes in the system.

If you wish to install an auxiliary boiler to be used for steam during severe weather, connect it up with the system in the usual manner, but locate the boiler so that the water line in it will be two and one-half to three feet below the level of the returns in the greenhouses. Provide valves in a part of the returns so they may be placed in or out of commission as occasion demands, and place valves on the flow and return pipes of the hot water boiler, also upon the pipe connecting the returns with the expansion tank.

After cutting out the hot water boiler the water must be drawn out of the system. Air valves will be required on all coils as well as facilities for draining the pipes when steam is to be used. The water heater will be made more efficient by elevating the expansion tank in the manner suggested. L. C. C.

THREE END-TO-END HOUSES.

I have three greenhouses, built one onto the other, and wish to know how to pipe them for hot water heating to the best advantage. They run east and west; the first, to the west, is 10x12, wooden walls, open end into the second house, which has three benches, brick walls, and is 14x20 feet. The third house is 16x30, with three benches, and a pond dividing the space with the short center bench. This house has cement block walls, and is partitioned from the second house. All have walls two feet nine inches, and 10½-foot ridges. The boiler-house is at the northeast corner, and is 8x12 feet.

The coldest weather I have known here was 14 degrees above zero, and our freezing weather is usually for about fifteen days in January. I should like to keep a night temperature of about 55 degrees, and want to carry a higher temperature in the east house, which will be shut off by glass partitions and wall from the west section.

If I could use the first house for ferns, the second for carnations, and the third for palms, etc., it would suit me best. I can put the boiler as low as required and use such pipe as you think best. Please tell me how to rate the boiler and oblige. H. B. B.

If the ridges of these houses are the same height, so the flow pipe can be carried just under the ridge through the whole, I should suggest the following: Carry a 2½-inch flow from boiler to partition between the second and third; there use a reducing tee and continue the riser, using 2-inch to the partition between the first and second, where it can again be reduced from two to one and one-half inches, also using a reducing tee. From each of these tees pipes can be carried down the gable to supply radiating pipes on the side walls or under the side benches. In addition to the 2½-inch flow the third house will require four 2-inch pipes under each side bench. The second house should have three 2-inch pipes under each side bench, and the first house three 1½-inch pipes under each side bench. It will be well to have the top of the boiler lower than the level of the pipes under the benches by several inches, twelve to eighteen if possible. The main return should be planned in the same manner as the riser and connected with boiler with as few angles as possible. L. C. C.

EXPANSION TANK TROUBLE.

I am thinking of overhauling my heating system and want to hear a word of advice. In two houses, I have on each of the four walls three 4-inch cast-iron return pipes, and the six pipes in each house return to the boiler through a 4-inch pipe twenty feet long. Now I want to make the six 4-inch pipes in each house return to the boiler through a 6-inch stone tile. Would this be advisable? I know something is wrong with the returns, as when I get the water heated up good the boiler pounds it out through the expansion tank. H. A. D.

While you do not state the point at which your expansion tank is connected with the heating system, I am of the opinion that it is connected with the flow pipes not far from the boiler, and that it is not elevated far above the highest point in the system. If this is the case you can overcome your difficulty almost entirely by connecting the expansion tank with a ¾-inch pipe to the main return, within fifteen or eighteen inches of the point where it enters the boiler, and elevating the expansion tank several feet above the highest point in the system, eight to ten feet. Make the expansion tank large, fifty gallons, and I do not think you will find it necessary to modify the size of the main return. I do not think it advisable to attempt to use a stone drain for the main return, even if it were necessary to use 6-inch pipe. L. C. C.

When you order that new boiler, omit the common stationary grate bars and get the

TWIN CITIES.

The Market.

Trade the last few days has been better, no doubt due to the cool weather which we had. The week started out extremely warm, and none of the dealers did anything to speak of. Stock is much better, and the quality is good considering the extreme heat. Roses are especially good, and there are plenty of them. Carnations are scarce. Asters are filling in nicely, and the stock is good. Outdoor flowers are used extensively in store decorations. Colored gladioli are also used, and show up in good shape. Funeral work has been heavy.

St. Paul.

J. W. Hoffman and Gus Colberg have returned from the convention, and were more than pleased with the good time they had.

The Ramaley Floral Co. has carried some good stock, principally some fine varieties of asters.

C. F. Vogt says trade is good a few days out of each week.

August Vogt and family are visiting at Morris, Minn.

Holm & Olson have been delayed to some extent in getting the ironwork for their new store, on account of a strike, and it will probably be October 1 before they are installed in their new quarters.

L. L. May & Co. are putting in new boilers, also a Murphy stoker, at their greenhouses. Their houses have been thoroughly renovated, and look like new. Cleanliness seems to be the order of the day with Ludwig Anderson.

Minneapolis.

Rice Bros. are in their new location, just opposite their old stand, in a nice new building. They have had little stock lately. Business has been fair with them during the dull season.

Ralph Latham has done well this summer; he says he has found the cut flower trade good, in addition to funeral work.

Donaldson's Glass Block seems to be doing the business, and the firm reports a good season.

Oscar Amundson is working up a good reputation for funeral work, and has been favored with some nice orders lately.

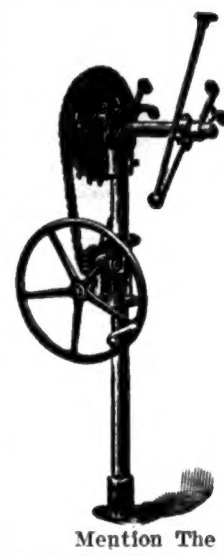
EVERY SECOND

the strain on the Materials of a Water Tank goes on, if it be kept full. Make it of inferior material and soon it will give way.



Caldwell Tanks NEVER LEAK

The right stuff goes into them.

Doubtless, you have been waiting a long time for ventilating apparatus at a reasonable cost before equipping your houses, or a line that does the work so satisfactorily that it is a pleasure to have in the house. Our customers are all highly pleased with the service we give them. We are quite certain that our prices will suit you. At least give us a chance to figure with you.

THE STEEL COVERING

of the wooden bars in U-Bar houses eliminates interior woodwork with its tendency to decay—the galvanizing of all steel members prevents rusting.

U-BAR GREENHOUSES
Are the Best Greenhouses Built because none are so thoroughly protected against decay and rust—consequently, none so enduring.

The Standard Ventilating Machinery

The original machine with self-oiling cups. The most powerful, least complicated, very compact with ease of operation.

The New Duplex Gutter
Over six miles in use and highly recommended by all. The only DRIP PROOF gutter on the market.

The Standard Return Steam-Trap
It has no equal for simplicity or its working. Catalogue free.

Our Material is The Best and it is also the cheapest. The most important thing about this statement is that it's true. The next most important thing is that we can prove it. Of course you don't believe us, but if we are right you are losing money every time you build with other material. It will cost you nothing to inquire and it may save you "lots of money," also time and trouble. Why not write today? We will send you a catalogue and will be glad to talk the matter over any time.
